FORAKER BEGINS FIGHT ON HEPBURN RATE BILL

Blames Present Evils on Officials Who Do Not Enforce Laws.

RESENTS ORDERS TO SENATE

Fellow-Senators Follow His Speech Closely and Warmly Congratulate Him at the End.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Standing out against the President on his foremost interior policy and risking an open rupture in the Republican Party, Senator Foraker for three hours to-day unsparingly attacked the Hepburn Railroad Rate bill.

It was the opening gun for a great fight. The incident was of great dramatic interest. The Ohio Senator stands alone as the uncompromising opponent of all legislation involving Government ratemaking. He is the chief foe of the President, who only a few years ago made him the favored Senator of his State in all White House conferences.

The fact that Foraker was to speak had been heralded through the city, and he had a large audience. The Senate almost to a man sat throughout, listening intently. Every seat on the Republican side was occupied. Democrats went over and sat in close so they should not lose a word. The venerable Pettus of Alabama went far over near the east door and there remained to the end. Foster of Louisiana, a Democratic member of the Committee on Inter-State Commerce, whose position on the Hepburn bill was for some days in doubt, also sat among the Republicans to the end.

Senators Listen Intently.

Aldrich, the master schemer of the Senate, sat with folded arms, his brow wrinkled with nervous attention. Just behind him was Dolliver, champion of the Hepburn bill on the Republican side. His brow, knotted and scowling, the Iowan lost not a word of the speech. To-morrow he will reply to it. Spooner, to whom has been committed the task of uniting the Republicans on some bill, sat far down in his chair attentively listening. Now and then he ran his fingers through the hair, then whirled about and made a memorandum.

Over on the Democratic side Bailey, who will support Tillman in leading the fight for the bill, preserved a columnar rigidity of position from exordium to peroration. When it was all over he turned to Teller and remarked: "If that speech goes unanswered the Hepburn bill deserves to be defeated."

Not a smile was seen during the three hours. Every countenance was fixed grim and hard with the tense strain of following the severely legal argument. Not a single interruption occurred. No embellishment, no pleasantry, not a single anecdote or jest fell from the lips of the Ohio Senator, not a single sound of applause marked any part of the speech. Mr. Foraker read from manuscript and with great rapidity, yet with the force and emphasis of the finished master of forensic arts.

Present Laws Not Enforced.

After rapidly outlining the development and growth of the railroads of the United States and a description of the terms of the Hepburn bill, Senator Foraker entered on the serious part of his work.

He admitted that there are three evils growing out of the present railway system—excessive rates, rebates, and discriminations as to localities. Of these he regarded the first as the least evil, but said some law should be passed to remedy it. So far as the "serious evils" of rebating and discrimination are concerned he declared:

"The fault is not with the existing law, but with the officials who have not enforced it.

"There has been no serious attempt to enforce this law to prevent discrimination as to localities," he said, "but a glance at its provisions will suffice to show that it is as broad, direct, explicit, and efficient to remedy that kind of an evil, wherever it may exist, as it has been found to be as to personal discrimination. That the law has not been tested in this respect is not due to any fault of the law, but because no one has seen fit to invoke it."

Outlining his own position in the matter, he said:

"I believe in the court plan, as contradistinguished from the ratemaking plan, not alone because it is much simpler, much more expeditious, much more efficient, and without expense to the shipper, but because, in addition to all that, it avoids all legal and constitutional questions, while the ratemaking plan as set forth in this bill encounters a number of such questions that are of the most serious character, and some of them, in my judgment, fatal."

Denies Power of Congress.

He declared that Congress had no power to make rates, and that Congress had no power with respect to Inter-State commerce except that which is conferred by the commerce clause of the Constitution "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes," and to enact all legislation necessary to give effect to this power. In this power Congress, he urged, had no more power to fix railroad rates than the price at which cargoes should be carried at sea.

Here followed an analysis of the Hepburn bill. Mr. Foraker declared that by it all three of the powers of the Government, legislative, judicial, and executive, were centred and commingled in a political board, asserted to be administrative in its character.

"The proposition would be alarming if its utter unconstitutionality were not as

GEMS LOST, GIRL IN RIVER.

Police Scare Mrs. Rice's Maid, Who Was Not Suspected.

While a detective was questioning the servants employed by Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, wife of the President of the Holland Submarine Boat Company, in the Rice home, at Eighty-ninth Street and Riverside Drive, last night, with a view to learning something about the disappearance of a piece of jewelry, one of the maids, Hortense Uzac, a French girl who has been in this country only three weeks, left the house, ran to the foot of Eightieth Street, and threw herself into the Hudson River.

She was rescued by a watchman, and after an ambulance surgeon from the J. Hood Wright Hospital had attended to her, she was locked up in the West 100th Street Station charged with attempting suicide.

Detective Moran, who had charge of the jewel search, had assembled all the employes of the household in the parlor and was questioning them when Hortense Uzac, who speaks no English, asked one of the maids what the fuss was about. Upon being told that a detective was trying to find out something about the loss of Mrs. Rice's jewelry, she became much excited and left the room.

She was not seen again until Patrick Hackett, a watchman, who was walking along the shore of the Hudson, saw her struggling in the water, trying to get hold of the thin cakes of ice which surrounded her. He easily pulled her out. The police tried to get her to explain her act, but she was unable to make herself understood.

The ring was subsequently found, and no charge is made against the girl by any member of the Rice household. It is apparently believed that the notion that she was suspected of theft, combined with the fact that she was in strange surroundings, overwhelmed her with hysterical fear and rendered her temporarily irresponsible.

"There was no accusation of any sort against the Uzac girl," said Mrs. Rice last night, "unless the police may charge her with attempting to take her life. As for reports that there was any robbery here I desire to say that the only article which was missed here was a single ring worth $160. A search of the house was made and the ring was found. Nothing else is missing and no accusations of any sort are made by us."

Detective Moran said last night that the ring was lost last Saturday night, when Mrs. Rice gave a reception. She had left her bedroom at 10 o'clock, forgetting to lock the door. Returning half an hour later, she missed her ring, which she had left on a dresser. All the servants denied that they had seen anything of it. Moran said that when he went to the house he had all the servants searched in the library.

MISS HOPPER CAUSES ARREST.

Actress Says Hildebrandt Has "Troubled" Her for Years.

Edna Wallace Hopper had Detective Sergeant Farrell lock up in the Tenderloin Station last night a trouble of four years' history. The trouble is male. He was arrested in front of the Garrick Theatre, where he plays in the orchestra. Miss Hopper says he has haunted her for four long years "until she just had to have something done to him or else fall a victim to nerves."

The prisoner said he was Max Hildebrandt, 30 years old, a bachelor, living at 134 East Thirtieth Street. Miss Hopper went to Jefferson Market Court yesterday and swore out the warrant. It charges disorderly conduct, but she said last night that when her letters from Hildebrandt are shown in court the postal authorities will take up the case, to the end that the prisoner may be put where he will no longer worry the life out of her.

"It was simply awful," she said. "This thing started four years ago when I was in the 'Florodora' company. Before that he had worried Miss Glaser, I understand. At first the letters were simply the ordinary rot. I paid no attention to them; then they got worse.

"After a while I laid the matter before one or two good friends on the force. I hated to think of having a man put in prison. That makes me shiver all over, don't you know? So I told them to give him a strong talking to, and they did it. He promised to leave me alone.

"But he didn't. He kept on sending letters, and they got worse and worse. I determined to let them come on and just tear them up with out reading them. He began following me and standing outside my house in West Thirty-third Street. Very often lately when I'd get out of my cab at home I'd find him standing in the doorway glaring at me. Again he would dart out toward me. I tell you, he has got me on the point of breaking down. It's an awful strain."

The letters Miss Hopper exhibits as having come from Max Hildebrandt appear to bear out her charges. In one he denounces Capt. Dooley's curfew rule because he thinks maybe Miss Hopper may be held up by mistake. With another letter came a picture, on which is written: "To my Eddie Boy, from her Trodden Worm." Miss Hopper says he used to send her packages of bullets and bottles of ink.

In a recent letter the writer addressed her as "Mrs. Edna Wallace Hopper Hildebrandt." He said he hoped soon to be able to call her that in very truth. Since she has been at the Academy of Music the actor who has to make stage love to her got a sort of black-hand letter with skulls and crossbones on it. It cautioned him about the manner in which he made love to Miss Hopper. Another letter said:

"You know how Delilah got the best of Sampson. My Eddie Boy has got the best of me; I have shaved off my beard."

HADLEY AFTER H. H. ROGERS.

Asks Justice Gildersleeve to Compel Standard Oil Man to Testify.

An application was made to Justice Gildersleeve, in the Supreme Court, yesterday for an order compelling Henry H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company to answer certain questions put to him a few weeks ago by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, before a commission taking testimony here in the Missouri court proceedings to oust the Standard from Missouri.

The application was made by Henry Wollman, Hadley's New York representative.

Justice Gildersleeve said it would be necessary for counsel to produce a certified copy of the decision of the Missouri court, which a few days ago held that Mr. Rogers must answer the questions. As Mr. Wollman did not have a certified copy of the Missouri decision the application went over until Monday.

FIGHT STANDARD OIL BY WAY OF THE ISTHMUS

New Company Gets Under Way with Pipe-Line Concession.

ROUNDABOUT TO THE EAST

Buys Steamers to Run from 'Frisco to Panama, and from Colon North, Double Pipes Connecting.

The United Steamship Company was incorporated in Trenton, N. J., last Tuesday, with $1,000,000 capital and dummy Directors. It was learned yesterday that this company had purchased the steamships Minnetonka and Minnewaska, each of about 3,800 tons, previously used for the oil trade on the Great Lakes. Persons interested in the company made known last night that these and other vessels were to be used in the oil trade on the Atlantic and Pacific between Western and Eastern ports and the Isthmus of Panama.

The United Steamship Company is said to be affiliated with the Union Oil Company of California, a concern which came into life by the consolidation of several small independent oil concerns in the Far West. The Union Oil Company has obtained a valuable concession on the Isthmus.

From a person who professed to have inside information regarding the plans of the Union Oil Company of California THE TIMES learned last night that the Union Oil Company of California and its ally the United Steamship Company, have devised a plan for fighting the Standard Oil Company in its home territory. Said THE TIMES's informant:

"The Union Oil Company is going to put up a hot fight against the Standard Oil Company in its Eastern markets. The Union Oil Company has obtained from the United States Government a concession for the laying of a double pipe line across the Isthmus.

"From the rich oil fields of California the products of those fields will be carried in a fleet of tank steamers from San Francisco and other Pacific ports to the port of Panama on the Isthmus. From there the oil will be pumped across the Isthmus to the port of Colon, where it will be pumped into the holds of other tank steamers, which will carry the oil to Philadelphia, Boston, New York, or any place where the company can find a profitable market for its output."

THE TIMES's informant said that, besides the Minnetonka and Minnewaska, the United States Steamship Company owned other steamers, which would be used in the oil carrying trade between American ports and the Isthmus.

Among these steamers, he said, were the Lansing, the Roman, and the Washtenaw. The latter is an English-built vessel which recently has belonged to the Saginaw Steamship Company and has been used for traffic on the lakes, as has also the Lansing and the Roman. The Roman is a steamer of 1,875 tons burden, which formerly belonged to the Menominee Transit Company.

"The Minnetonka and the Minnewaska have been used as ordinary cargo steamers," said THE TIMES's informant. "They will be docked and transformed into tank steamers. After the alterations have been completed they will be sent around Cape Horn to San Francisco to take up the trade between San Francisco and Panama.

"The Lansing, which will also be used in the San Francisco-Panama trade, is ready for business now and will probably be sent away from this port for her destination on the Pacific on April 1."

The Minnewaska and the Minnetonka were sold to representatives of the United Steamship Company about two weeks ago through the brokerage firm of James W. Elwell & Co., of 21 State Street. These representatives already owned the other steamers.

It was said last night by persons who seemed to know all about the company that the plans for constructing the pipe line across the Isthmus had advanced so far that another steamer, also the property of the United Steamship Company, was waiting orders in an Eastern port to sail for the Isthmus with a cargo of pipes and pumping machinery.

There arrived in this city yesterday from San Francisco C. H. Baker, who was said by his friends to be connected both with the Union Oil Company of California and the United Steamship Company of New Jersey. Mr. Baker, it was said, was bound for Washington this morning.

A TIMES reporter sought Mr. Baker out at his hotel last night. He found him a young man of about 28, who said he was a lawyer. Mr. Baker was cautious about answering questions, but asked a good many himself.

"The Standard Oil Company, while it has substantial interests in the California oilfields," he said, "does not dominate the oil trade in that State. I do not wish to say anything in regard to the recent purchase of steamers by the United Steamship Company. I do not wish to say whether the Union Oil Company is out to fight the Standard Oil Company or not.

"There is plenty of oil in California. If you hear that we are going to build a pipe line and fight the Standard Oil go ahead and print it. We have surveyed the isthmus and thoroughly investigated the possibility of building a pipe line across it."

From Washington it was learned last night that a contract for the Isthmian pipe line was made by the Union Oil Company some time ago. The company has secured a Government license and will build the line across the Isthmus, incidentally supplying oil for fuel and lighting purposes on the canal construction work.

The scheme was discovered in Gov. Magoun's testimony before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals. Some people then considered the plan to fight the Standard Oil in its Eastern markets in this way the dream of a visionary. On the other hand, there were those who said that it was not so foolish as it looked at first glance, since a company, having such a pipe line across the Isthmus would have the rich South and Central American oil markets at its doors.

Mrs. Aubrey Boucicault Remarries.

Announcement was made yesterday in Washington of the marriage in this city on Saturday evening of Brooke Baker, who is prominent in club life in Washington, to Mrs. Aubrey Boucicault. Mrs. Baker was formerly Nellie Holbrook of Rochester. She was divorced from Aubrey Boucicault, the actor, in 1904. The couple will spend their honeymoon in Europe and Mexico.

HENRY HOLT, NOVELIST.

The Well-Known Publisher the Author of "Sturmsee" and "Calmire."

The two philosophical, moralizing novels, "Calmire" and "Sturmsee," both published anonymously in this city by the Macmillan Company, and read more than most novels are, as one has reached its sixth and the other its third edition, were written by Mr. Henry Holt, head of the New York publishing firm of Henry Holt & Co. This fact will be formally revealed early in the Spring, when the two books will be republished with the author's name and the imprint of Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. of Boston. Thus disappears another literary "mystery" along with that of the identity of "Fiona Macleod" and that of "The Commuter's Wife."

Mr. Holt is about 66 years old. He was born in Baltimore and educated at Yale and the Columbia Law School. He entered the publishing business with the late G. P. Putnam in 1863, and afterward formed a partnership with F. Leypoldt. He is a member of the Century and University Clubs and a Trustee of the Geographical Society. He has been greatly interested in University Settlement work and questions of municipal reform, and he published in 1901 "Talks on Civics." He has written for the magazines and reviews, and contributed to the Atlantic Monthly some time ago an article on "The Commercialization of the Publishing Business." He has a house in the city, at 711 Madison Avenue, and Summer homes at Premium Point, New Rochelle, and Burlington, Vt.

In "Sturmsee" the economic problems of the present day are treated in an interesting fashion. The theory of "social service" is set forth in it, and there are many satirical touches. The scope of the other novel, "Calmire," is somewhat broader.

STUDENT DEAD IN A WELL.

Columbia Man Drowns Himself After a Period of Hard Study.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 28.—Ralph C. B. Moore, son of Frank L. Moore of Chatham, and a student at Columbia University, committed suicide by drowning early to-day. He wrote a letter in New York yesterday, addressed it to his father in Chatham, and mailed it at one of the uptown postal stations in Manhattan. He said it was his intention to commit suicide last night, adding that his body would be found in the well at the rear of the place. Then he returned home, ate supper with the family, and retired to his room. That was the last seen of him alive. This morning the letter was received. A search made by the father disclosed the body in the well.

Moore was 24 years old. He was taking a difficult course at Columbia, but had been studying so hard that he suffered from insomnia. Beyond the melancholy that had characterized him for some time his family noted nothing unusual about his demeanor when he came home last night. No one heard him go out. He went to the rear of the place and threw himself into the well. He belonged to the choir of the Stanley Congregational Church and was active in church affairs. He was the eldest of a family of seven children.

DECISION AGAINST BROKERS.

Must Give Specific Warning When They Sell Client's Stocks.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The Court of Appeals yesterday decided that a stock broker must give a customer formal notice of the time and place of the sale of stock held on margin for such client, or he cannot recover any loss which he may suffer in the transaction. The decision is one of great importance, as it establishes a new rule of law in stock transactions. It was made public to-day.

It is rendered in an action commenced by Harry Content and Walter Content of New York against Peter Banner, appellant. In April, 1900, the plaintiffs purchased stocks of the defendant, as his brokers, without requiring the advance of any margin by him, carrying it for several months. On Aug. 8 following they wrote the defendant a letter, the material part of which follows:

> Inasmuch as the stock has not yet been sold, we wish to give you a further opportunity to take it up, or to supply us with sufficient margin to carry it if you so desire. If, however, you do not make suitable arrangements in this respect before Monday next (Aug. 13) we shall sell this stock for your account and hold you responsible for the loss.

The stock was sold on that day on "the curb" on Broad Street at a loss to the brokers, for which they subsequently sued the defendant and recovered at trial. The Appellate Division sustained the verdict, but the Court of Appeals reverses it.

READY TO MOVE ON DEUEL.

Jerome, Shepard, and Osborne Sign Petition for His Disbarment.

Ex-Assistant District Attorney Gans finished yesterday the petition which is to be submitted to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in a few days for the disbarment of Justice Joseph M. Deuel of the Court of Special Sessions. The petitioners are William Travers Jerome, Edward M. Shepard, and James W. Osborne, who are acting in the case only as private citizens. All three attached their signatures to the document last night.

Justice Deuel was not in town yesterday, as far as could be learned, and nobody seemed to know just when he would return from Florida, where he went a month ago. No action can be taken by the court toward the appointment of a referee in the case until Justice Deuel returns and is properly served with notice of the petition and copies of the document supporting it. But the petition may be filed independently of Justice Deuel's absence, merely to obtain a basis for serving him with papers.

The affidavits accompanying the petition are based on the evidence given in the trial of Editor Norman Hapgood for criminal libel, which ended in a refusal by the jury to find the defendant guilty of the charges made by Justice Deuel. Acting District Attorney Nott spent weeks going through the voluminous records of the trial and collecting all evidence having a bearing on the relations of Justice Deuel to Town Topics, The Smart Set, "Fads and Fancies," and other of Col. Mann's publications. It was shown during the trial that he had been drawing salary both from The Town Topics Publishing Company and The Ess Ess Publishing Company, and that he had written a number of letters proving him to be closely interested in the publication of "Fads and Fancies."

If the Appellate Division decides to act on the petition, a referee will hear all the evidence and will examine witnesses for both sides before making a report, on which the court will base its action. Should Justice Deuel be disbarred, no additional proceedings will be needed to remove him from the bench.

SPRINGFIELD RIOTERS SHOOT AND DESTROY

One Reported Dead, Others Wounded—Houses Burned.

HUNDREDS OF NEGROES FLEE

Authorities Start to Take Men Who Caused Outbreak to Springfield, but Turn Back Hastily.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Thursday, March 1.—For hours last evening whole sections of this city were again in the hands of a mob, which burned two houses and partially destroyed a dozen others, all of which were inhabited by negroes.

The mob first made its appearance in Section Street, in the "Jungles" district. In this district are a number of notorious resorts frequented by negroes and whites of the lowest character. Six or seven of these resorts were demolished by the mob on Tuesday night.

Last night the mob, most of the members of which were armed with revolvers, shot out all the gaslights in sight and fired at some of the houses. One of the bullets entered the home of a respectable white family, but no one was hurt.

The mob, with the soldiers at their heels, then went north to the section known as the Hill.

Three fires were started at different places within a few minutes. On Harrison Street five houses were at one time in flames. At York and Kenton Streets another fire was started, and the third fire was started in a little house in Sycamore Street, in which lives Fanny Foster, a negro fortune teller.

At the scene of the second fire the hose was cut in the same way as last night. The Fire Department by quick work prevented the flames from spreading.

The first place burned was the home of George Miller at York and Harrison Streets. When the assault began from the rear of his house, Miller ran away in his bare feet and without coat or hat, and escaped from his pursuers by going to the City Hall, where he found shelter with the troops. Coal oil was applied to his house, which was soon a mass of flames, and was quickly destroyed.

From Miller's the mob went to the home of John Logan and Noah Ingram, a double frame dwelling on York Street, and the torch was applied, following the escape of the occupants a few minutes before. The house was practically destroyed.

The militia were in hot pursuit of some of the rioters, and at Central Avenue chased them at the point of the bayonet. Even while this was going on some of the members of the mob who were at a safe distance from the soldiers continued to stone the houses of negroes, windows being riddled by rocks as they ran.

The house of the Rev. John Scurry, a negro preacher, was stoned and the family fled terror-stricken from it. The mob then set fire to it, but the prompt arrival of the military prevented its destruction. The homes of Reuben Campbell and Charles Fillmore, on Central Avenue, were riddled with stones.

Promiscuous and random shooting added to the general terror. Two negro women who jumped from the second story of their homes when assailed by the mob were seriously hurt and were taken to the hospital.

The entire negro population of 1,000 is terrorized and many are hiding. Several hundred have left the city and many more are about to depart.

The first victim of last night's outbreak to ask protection personally from Mayor Todd was the negro Miller. He and his wife were retiring when the mob began shooting into his house. Miller lost sight of his wife and told the Mayor he did not know where she was.

Nevins, who was a boarder in the house, is also missing.

Soldiers in the Hill district have reported to Col. Ammel that an unknown boy was shot from an upper window of a Harrison Street house.

Mayor Todd, Chief of Police O'Brien, City Solicitor Tatum, and Prosecuting Attorney Lawrence Laybourne held a conference last night, at which it was decided to arrest every one of the rioters who could be seized.

It was reported at 10 o'clock to Mayor Todd by a traveling man who arrived here from Columbus that there had been a heavy movement all the evening on Big Four trains of railroad men from Columbus down to Dayton for the apparent purpose of carrying out the threat to lynch Dean and Ladd.

Martin Davis, the Big Four brakeman who was shot on Monday night by the two negroes, lies at the City Hospital, his life hanging by a thread.

It was reported yesterday that the original plan of the mob was to take Dean from jail, pull him at the end of a rope to the railroad yards where Davis was shot, and tie him to the rails. Then a switch engine was to be allowed to come down on him and crush out his life.

A report has just been received that a man was killed in the east end of the city.

The boy shot is Ora Willis, aged 15, of 120 Scott Street. He was standing in front of St. Joseph's Catholic Church watching the fire at Kenton and York Streets, when there was a flash of a gun from an upper window about 400 feet away. Much of the charge of shot entered Willis's hip, making a dangerous wound. Two girls who were standing near Willis were hit, but were not badly hurt.

The order to arrest every man suspected of belonging to the mob was executed with vigor. Companies of militia marched so as to occupy the full width of the streets, picking up all boisterous persons. The city is now comparatively quiet.

Special to The New York Times.

DAYTON, Ohio, Feb. 28.—Edward Dean and Preston Ladd, the negroes who are suspected of the shooting that led to the race riot at Springfield, were placed aboard a Dayton, Springfield and Urbana Traction car to-night and started on the way to Springfield. It was the intention of the authorities to have them identified by M. M. Davis, the railroad brakeman they are accused of shooting.

Conditions became so threatening in Springfield that a special car was sent out and met the car containing the prisoners at Medway, about half way to that city. The prisoners were brought back to Dayton, the special car covering the distance at a speed exceeding a mile a minute.

Reports are in circulation that the jail in this city may be attacked. The police have been instructed to keep a close watch on saloons and other places where the mob spirit might show itself.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 28.—Four companies of the Fourth Regiment, Ohio National Guard, left this evening for Springfield to assist the authorities there in maintaining order. Troop B of Columbus has also been assembled at its armory under waiting orders.

After all, Usher's the Scotch that made the highball famous.—Adv.

ASSEMBLY FOR 80-CENT GAS.

Bill Passed Unanimously in 30 Seconds—Grady's Fight for Coney.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—By unanimous vote the Assembly to-day passed the Agnew 80-cent gas bill in thirty seconds.

Grady of the Coney Island district said he had made the best fight he could to get 80-cent gas for his district. Failing, he could do no more than vote with the others.

PENNSYLVANIA'S BIG YEAR.

$38,000,000 Net Earnings, an Increase of $10,000,000 Over 1904.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—The Pennsylvania Railroad's annual report, which will be published on Saturday, shows a net income for the year of more than $38,000,000, an increase of about $10,000,000 as compared with 1904. Operating expenses were reduced and traffic increased.

Changes in the engineering department approved by the Directors to-day include the retirement of William H. Brown as chief engineer, after a service of forty-one years. A. C. Shand was advanced from assistant to chief engineer.

A. J. Cassatt resigned to-day as a Director of the Northern Central Railroad and was succeeded by John P. Green. The change was made to lessen Mr. Cassatt's official duties.

GIRL BEATEN TO DEATH.

Police Find Her Body, Covered with Bruises, in a Building.

The Coroner's office was notified early this morning that a girl known only as Lizzie had been murdered at 303 East 107th Street.

According to a report received by Coroner Shrady from the police of the East 104th Street Station, it is believed the girl was beaten to death. She was found in the building by a policeman. Her face and body were covered with bruises.

BEATEN IN FIFTH AVENUE.

Man Knocks Woman Down Near the Library and Gets Her Purse.

Thomas Turner, whose place of business is at 86 Worth Street, and who has been living at 80 West Fortieth Street, decided, a few days ago, to move further down town to the Cambridge Hotel, at 334 Fifth Avenue. Last night Mrs. Turner sent her maid, Mrs. Banks, from the hotel to see the butler of their former home on Fortieth Street about certain household matters.

When the maid got to Fortieth Street and Fifth Avenue a man approached her, clubbed her, and seized her purse, containing $10. The man was caught, however, and arrested. He said he was Joseph Stivenski.

ETHEL BARRYMORE ILL.

No Performance of "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" Until To-morrow.

There was no performance of "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" at the Broadway Theatre last evening, owing to the illness of Ethel Barrymore. The actress has been suffering from an attack of the grip for the last few days, and it was only with difficulty that she went through the matinée yesterday.

The house will be dark to-night, but the management expects that Miss Barrymore will be well enough to resume her part to-morrow evening.

REMINGTON'S HOUSE AFIRE.

But the Neighbors Rallied and Soon Put the Blaze Out.

Frederic Remington, the artist; his servants, and several of his neighbors near New Rochelle had a brief fight with a fire at his home yesterday. The New Rochelle firemen were called, but the house is two miles from the city, and the fire was out when they arrived.

Mr. Remington has been erecting a new studio as an addition to the house. The carpenters' litter was cleaned out of the new building yesterday, and was set on fire. The wind carried a spark into the shingles of the house, where it smoldered until this evening, and then burst into flames. The neighbors rallied quickly, and the fire was etinguished before much damage was done.

CRUSHED IN THEATRE PANIC.

Twenty Persons, Including Four Women, Trampled Escaping Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

ALTOONA, Penn., Feb. 28.—Twenty persons, four of them women, were injured by being trampled in a panic which followed the explosion of a gasoline tank at a stereopticon exhibition in the Williamsburg Opera House late to-night. The frame building and two adjoining structures were destroyed with a loss of $25,000. Many of the injured, it is feared, may die.

The little playhouse was crowded when the gasoline tank became ignited and burst, hurling fiery liquid over scores, setting fire to clothing and the building, at the same time causing the wildest excitement.

In the struggle to reach the one exit men and women had clothing stripped from them, while the injured ones were trampled as they formed a human mass on the narrow stairway.

POLICE AGAINST A PARADE.

Ask Aldermen to Abolish It—Public Criticism Hurts.

The police don't want to parade this year. The patrolmen petitioned the Board of Aldermen yesterday to do away with the function. The petition was referred to the Finance Committee.

The parade costs the city some $15,000, and the men think the money could be used to better advantage. They also point out that during the parade the city is left almost entirely unprotected, and complain of the criticism of the public on such occasions.

MIDDIES DISLIKE NAVY.

Two Who Were Reinstated by Congress, Tender Their Resignations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Midshipmen John H. Lofland of Iowa and Earl W. Chaffee of Michigan, two of the three midshipman dismissed from the Naval Academy for hazing, and reinstated by special act of Congress last year, have tendered their resignations from the service. That of Lofland has been accepted and the other is awaiting action by Secretary Bonaparte. They are now serving on the Minneapolis.

In both cases the reason given is dissatisfaction with the service and a preference for civil life.

EQUITABLE PREPARING FOR ITS MUTUALIZATION

Will Be Ready as Soon as the Legislature Has Acted.

SURPLUS OFF $12,500,000

And Outstanding Insurance of the Society Decreased $30,000,000 Last Year — Some Important Adjustments.

The Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society heard yesterday at their annual meeting that the society's counsel was definitely engaged in working out a plan for the mutualization of the institution. It is learned that counsel will consider it necessary to wait before taking any definite steps until the legislation proposed by the Armstrong Committee shall have been finally acted on at Albany, inasmuch as the committee has recommended a bill to make it possible for the Directors of a stock company with the consent of the stock to admit policy holders to full voting power without the danger of legal complications brought out so distinctly in the Lord suit. As soon as the Legislature has acted the project will be taken up without delay.

The Directors of the Equitable at yesterday's meeting discussed somewhat the report of the Armstrong Committee, but did not take any definite action regarding the society's attitude toward it. It is learned that it was strongly the sentiment of the meeting that the Equitable should not, either by itself or with other companies, undertake any general campaign against the whole line of legislation that may be proposed. The Directors felt, on the other hand, as President Morton has already indicated in a published statement, that although the society should be heard on the features of the committee's report, which it believes might be modified to good purpose, it ought nevertheless to accept cheerfully whatever laws are passed and to endeavor to conform to the spirit of them.

One point at which there was a disposition to disagree with the stand taken by the Armstrong Committee was in the committee's recommendation that the advances to agents be prohibited. It was the sentiment of yesterday's meeting that some leeway ought to be allowed the companies in this respect. The question of limiting new business or of restricting expenses for writing it was not discussed yesterday.

Surplus Down $12,000,000.

The accountants of the Equitable presented their completed schedules from the examination of the books yesterday, and also the consolidated financial statement as of Dec. 31, 1905. In this statement there were several items that showed what the year's investigation had meant to the society. While the total assets had increased from $413,953,020.74 at the end of 1904 to $420,973,756.92 on Dec. 31, 1905, the surplus, including reserve held for distribution to deferred dividend policy holders, decreased from $80,794,269 to $68,457,190. The volume of insurance in force at the end of 1905 was $1,465,123,436, as against $1,495,542,892 at the end of the previous year. This loss of $30,419,456 in outstanding insurance, added to $141,695,255 of new business written during the year, shows total terminations for the year of $172,104,711. The insurance written during 1904 was $222,920,037. The Equitable paid out $10,662,975.37 in surrender values in 1905. The year before payments on surrender values were $2,931,305.36.

Some important adjustments are reported as the result of the reappraisement of the society's assets. The statement shows that $8,425,038 was written off stocks and bonds held and that $7,210,033 came off the book value of real estate in similar fashion. An additional adjustment of $1,900,000 was made by way of reserve for possible losses on agents' balances, on which $228,798.34 of actual losses was reported for the year. The sum of $68,371.78 represents the adjustment of assets and liabilities which had not been previously carried on the books, and may be considered as indicating the final settlement of the various "yellow dog" accounts brought to light in the different investigations.

The total real estate holdings are reported as $28,459,270 on Dec. 31 as against $36,895,646 at the end of the preceding year, and stocks and bonds held are given as $243,706,855 in comparison with $228,839,884 on Dec. 31, 1904. It is stated this year that the excess of market over book value of the holdings of securities is $1,049,178. Last year the society reported that the market value of the holdings of securities, which were given at their book value, exceeded the book value by $19,991,643. Mortgage loans are reported as $86,580,982 this year in comparison with $81,623,709 on Dec. 31, 1904. Loans on collateral decreased from $10,805,000 at the end of 1904 to $215,000 at the end of 1905. Cash in banks and trust companies has been reduced from $22,544,439 to $14,559,894.

Advances of $9,000,000.

The advances to agents and miscellaneous advances reported this year include some $5,000,000 of balances that were previously carried in subsidiary trust companies. They stood at $9,308,263 on Dec. 31 last, from which the deduction of $1,900,000 was made to cover possible losses. The year before, when the balances carried in the trust companies were not included, the advances were reported as $1,514,639. Interest due and accrued is given as $3,820,422. The year before the item was carried at $632,508, it having been the policy in the past to carry accrued interest due Jan. 1 in the market values of securities. The premium receipts of the society for the year were $62,060,530, as against $62,648,836 in 1904. Total income was $80,680,281. In 1904 it was $79,076,695. The liabilities of the society as of Dec. 31 last are reported as $352,516,566, in comparison with $333,158,751 at the end of 1904.

The Equitable paid policy holders in 1905 $41,159,574, as against payments to policy holders in 1904 of $36,389,047. Dividends to policy holders were $6,709,002 in 1905. In 1904 they were $6,001,902. The schedules in the report are such that no comparison is possible of the administrative expenses for 1905, which were $4,450,244, with those of the preceding year. The statement shows that the various investigations cost the society $502,152, and that there was a loss on sales of real estate and stocks and bonds disposed of by reason of them amounting to $245,263.

The statement as of Dec. 31, 1905, is printed in full in THE TIMES to-day.

The Directors elected John M. Beach, President of the Tefft-Weller Company, yesterday to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Chauncey M. Depew. The Directors postponed for three months the election of officers in order that the committee on by-laws might wait until the Legislature had adopted its new insurance measures before making its final report.

No Breach with Tarbell.

President Morton made this statement yesterday regarding a published story that Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell was not going to be re-elected for another year:

"The story in regard to Mr. Tarbell is not true. Mr. Ryan does not undertake to run this society, either directly or indirectly, and Mr. Tarbell does not come in contact with him in any capacity. They have no business relations whatever, and therefore there cannot be any breach between them. Neither is there any breach between Mr. Tarbell and myself.

"There have been no differences in the Executive Committee in regard to the purchase or sale of securities. Every transaction by that committee has been made by unanimous action.

"The only reason for deferring action as to the election of officers and standing committees to-day until a later meeting is because the Directors wanted the proposed new by-laws, which a special committee is at work on, presented for their consideration first, in order to know just what officers and standing committees we will require."

This is the report made to the Equitable by its accountants:

We have audited the books and accounts of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, both at its home office and its principal domestic and foreign branches, and have compared the above statements therewith.

We have examined the bonds and stocks owned by the society and the secured loans, together with the collateral held as security therefor, and we are of the opinion that these assets are fully worth the values at which they are stated; we have also verified the cash balances, both domestic and foreign, by certificates from the various depositaries or by actual count, and we have examined the records of overdue premiums and agents' advances and balances and are satisfied that sufficient reserves have been made for possible losses thereon.

We have tested the clerical accuracy of the general assurance reserve, as certified by the Actuary of the society, which exceeds the amount required by the Insurance Department of the State of New York by the sum of $962,473. We also find that full provision has been made for all other liabilities.

And we hereby certify that in our opinion the above statement of assets and liabilities correctly sets forth the true financial position of the society on Dec. 31, 1905, and that the accompanying statement of receipts and disbursemnts is correct.

ROGERS MEETS HARRIMAN.

Confer on Fish, Perhaps—The Illinois Central's Assets.

H. H. Rogers and Edward H. Harriman had a long conference yesterday in Mr. Harriman's offices. Wall Street surmised that the plans for the campaign against Stuyvesant Fish in the Illinois Central Railroad were discussed at this conference. Mr. Rogers refused to talk about the meeting. Mr. Harriman, as usual, was inaccessible.

A method of attack upon Mr. Fish has hardly become apparent yet, and as the Harriman-Standard Oil interests are known to control only about a quarter of the capitalization of the Illinois Central, Wall Street has been unable to figure out just how it is planned to oust Mr. Fish unless the effort is made to turn a majority of his Directors against him or to undertake a personal campaign in the hope that something may be found in his record which could form the basis of an appeal to stockholders. Inasmuch, however, as the announced policy of the Illinois Central Railroad has been for a great many years to have the small stockholders participate to the fullest extent in its affairs, both by financing its extensions through security issues offered to them and by encouraging a wide distribution of the stock, financial men have difficulty in seeing how such an appeal could successfully be made.

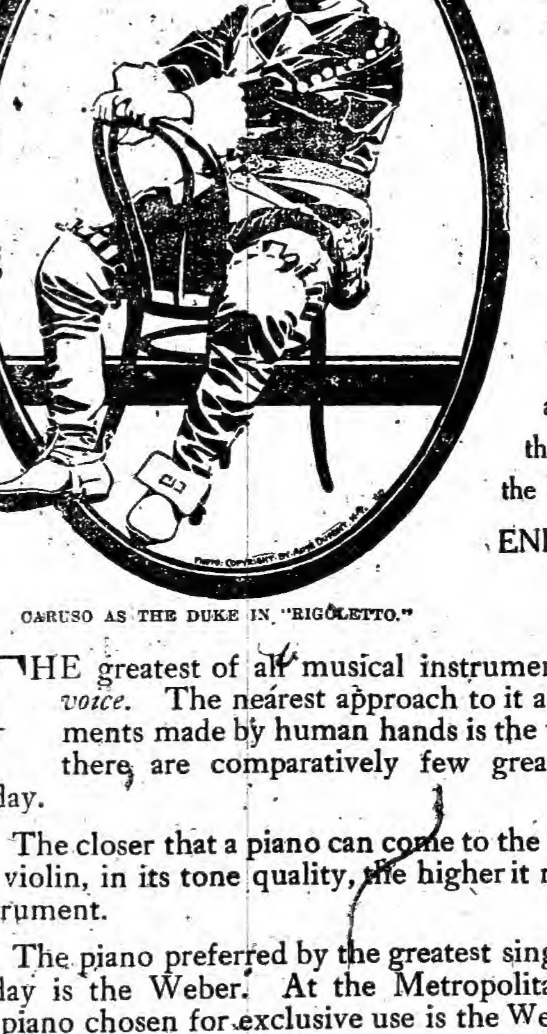
There is one phase of the Illinois Central matter which bankers are disposed to regard as largely explaining the desire which some financiers have been known to entertain toward the property. In many years the railroad has had among its assets many millions of gilt-edged stocks which have been reported in the road's annual statement at figures far below their market value. No attempt has been made to adjust the book values of these stocks as market values constantly advance. Such "adjustments" are usually understood to be methods of compensating for shrinkages elsewhere, and it has always been the opinion that in the case of Illinois Central they were not needed.

Should the property change hands, the fact that these stocks are carried at figures making their aggregate book value not more than one-half their present market value would allow the new owners to make a handsome profit by the device of selling them at the figures at which the railroad carries them to a dummy, who in turn could dispose of them at the market.

The Illinois Central would be of particular value to Mr. Harriman's Union Pacific Railroad as furnishing an outlet to the Gulf. Traffic arrangements are also understood to be in existence between the Illinois Central and connecting lines which are distinctly favorable to the Illinois Central and correspondingly to the disadvantage of the Union Pacific Railroad interests.

The Truesdale investigating committee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, from which Mr. Fish withdrew just before the attack on his railroad interests, reached its present acute stage, has retained Joseph H. Choate as its counsel. The committee has not yet filled the vacancy caused by the withdrawal of Mr. Fish.

The Weber is the Piano of the Opera



CARUSO AS THE DUKE IN "RIGOLETTO."

"I should be very much at a loss to be without a Weber Piano, as I have become very much attached to the exquisite tone of these superb instruments. No other piano possesses a tone which blends so well with the human voice or is as satisfactory to the vocal artist as the Weber."

ENRICO CARUSO

THE greatest of all musical instruments is the human voice. The nearest approach to it among the instruments made by human hands is the violin—of which there are comparatively few great masters living to-day.

The closer that a piano can come to the human voice and the violin, in its tone quality, the higher it ranks as a musical instrument.

The piano preferred by the greatest singers of the world to-day is the Weber. At the Metropolitan Opera House the piano chosen for exclusive use is the Weber—not merely for a single season, but repeatedly, year after year.

Great singers like Caruso have the Weber in their apartments, for they recognize in it a closer approximation to the beautiful quality of the human voice, a sympathetic, sustaining tone which is more nearly the ideal in musical instruments than any other piano manufacturer has as yet succeeded in accomplishing in his products.

M'CURDYS SAIL TO-DAY IN IMPERIAL SUITE

Party Will Occupy the Kaiser's Apartments on the Amerika.

SERVANTS GO FIRST CLASS

Ex-President of the Mutual Happy as a Boy Before He Starts on His Long Vacation.

Ex-President Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life Insurance Company will sail for Europe this morning for a long trip, which those at his home in Morristown, N. J., expect will last until September.

Mr. McCurdy will be accompanied by his wife and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Thébaud. They have engaged passage on the Hamburg-American liner Amerika, which leaves Hoboken at 9 A. M. The party will occupy what is known as the imperial suite, the most expensive on the great new liner and so named because it belongs to the German Emperor whenever he may care to use it. These apartments are admitted to be about the finest, if not the finest, on any ship afloat.

The party has also arranged to have a special dining table for the voyage instead of eating with the other passengers. The servants of the party will go in the first saloon. Two maids and a man servant will accompany the McCurdys and Thébauds.

Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy came here from Morristown yesterday afternoon and went to the Amerika. They were joined there last night by the Thebauds, who left Morristown at 9:10 P.M. Eighteen pieces of baggage preceded them. Mr. McCurdy, it was said, was in excellent spirits all day yesterday, although he was busy preparing to leave, and seemed as pleased as a boy at the prospect of going away in the morning.

When the McCurdy party was entering the carriages which were waiting for them at the Lackawanna Station in Hoboken, a crowd gathered. Several reporters were there, and they sought to get close to the carriage into which Mr. McCurdy went.

One of the McCurdy retainers was Thomas Bedow, a coachman, who was carrying some of the wraps. Because the reporters approached too close to Mr. McCurdy, Bedow punched one of them in the face. He was arrested and locked up on a charge of assault and battery. Bail was fixed at $300. When this had been done, a messenger was sent on board the Amerika to see whether either Mr. McCurdy or Mr. Thébaud would not provide bail.

Mr. McCurdy refused to be seen, but Mr. Thébaud came out and said that he was very sorry, but that they did not have $300 with them to put up as bail, and that if Bedow could not obtain it elsewhere he would probably have to remain in the police station all night. Mr. Thébaud said that, of course, neither he nor Mr. McCurdy could be on hand this morning, because the ship sailed at 9 o'clock. That is before the court opens.

Mr. McCurdy's magnificent home in Morristown will not be closed during his absence. Mrs. Holt will have charge of it. The stables and greenhouses have been left in charge of caretakers. Although many of the servants have been notified to find other employment, a few will be retained to assist Mrs. Holt.

Among Mr. McCurdy's fellow-passengers on the Amerika will be President Bruce Ismay of the International Mercantile Marine, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Guggenheim and Miss Lucille Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd Thacher, and Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson.

There is scheduled to take place a few hours after the Amerika sails a meeting of the Trustees of the Mutual. It is to be held to decide what attitude to take on the Armstrong Committee's report. The Trustees of the New York Life will meet for the same purpose to-day.

JORDANS LEAVE HOT SPRINGS.

Destination of the Ex-Controller of the Equitable Not Known.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 28.—Thomas D. Jordan, ex-Controller of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, left Hot Springs to-day via the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway.

Mrs. Jordan accompanied him. She said last night that she and her husband expected to remain here for at least a week.

It could not be learned to-day where Mr. and Mrs. Jordan went. It is said by the railway men that no persons leaving on the train they took purchased tickets beyond Benton, a small junction point where Hot Springs trains connect with the main line. Nobody at Benton recognized the Jordans.

REWARD FOR DOG PAINTER.

Humane Society Will Pay One to Catch Man Who Daubed Terrier.

The cruelty to the fox terrier whom some malicious person painted green and then turned loose in Fifth Avenue on last Tuesday so that he ran in front of an automobile and was killed has stirred up the Brooklyn Humane Society, if it has not interested the S. P. C. A. here. This letter came to THE TIMES yesterday:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Brooklyn Humane Society offers a reward for the arrest and conviction of the man, woman, or child who, on the afternoon of Feb. 27, daubed green paint on a fox terrier and turned him loose in Fifth Avenue. He ran about spoiling the clothing of pedestrians, and was eventually run over by an automobile. Some one knows of this. Some one did it.

CARRIE G. BEACH,
President of Humane Society of Brooklyn.

Miss Beach talked with a TIMES reporter about the matter last night. She said that while the case was really one for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, yet she and her fellow-members were so anxious that the offender should be punished for his cruelty that they were willing to do whatever they could to bring about his capture.

"Mr. Haines is the proper person to attend to this case, but I don't believe he will take the trouble. However, I have written to him about it," said Miss Beach.

"Have you heard from him?"

"No, Sir. No one ever hears from Mr. Haines."

"Then I judge that you were one of those who opposed Mr. Haines at the recent meeting of the S. P. C. A.?" ventured the reporter.

"I was invited to join the opposition, but I was unable to be there. Our society is regarded as an auxiliary organization, but its work is entirely independent, and is carried on under independent principles. We have fifteen members, and every single one of them is a worker.

"For instance, the other day our Treasurer, Miss Blanche Small, was out walking, when she spied a lame dog that was just about able to crawl. She did not wait for any policemen, ambulances, or Board of Health officers, but picked the poor thing up and carried him forty blocks to her home, at 309 Carlton Avenue. She is now looking after him herself. There are ten cats and dogs in her house, and nearly all of them would have perished in the streets if it had not been for her."

A TIMES reporter was unable to reach President Haines of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals last night. The agent on duty at the society's headquarters said he knew nothing of any action in the fox terrier's case.

20 Jersey Families Made Homeless.

Three fires which started from unknown causes almost simultaneously in the Lafayette section of Jersey City early yesterday morning made twenty families homeless and destroyed $60,000 worth of property. No lives were lost. John Edwards, Jr., who was asleep in one of the burned buildings, jumped from a second-story. He was unhurt.

A CHINESE PRINCE LANDS.

Second Imperial Commission Welcomed at Port Townsend.

PORT TOWNSEND, Washington, Feb. 28.—Formal greetings to a second Imperial High Commission sent by the Chinese Government to investigate trade and political conditions in the United States and Europe were extended on board the Great Northern Steamship Company's liner Dakota to-day. Consul General Chung Poo Hsi of San Francisco and a committee of eleven Chinamen and a dozen prominent Americans extended the welcome. Col. Hills, in command of the artillery posts of this district, boarded the ship and gave a touch of official Federal recognition.

The Commissioners are Prince Tsai Tseh, a member of the imperial family; his Excellency, Shang Chi Hong, formerly acting Governor of Shangtung Province, and his Excellency Li Shengte, future Minister to Belgium. None of them speaks English. Most of the Chinese committee of welcome spoke Cantonese only. The venerable Chinese statesmen spoke the tongue of the Peking Court. The presentation therefore of most of the Chinamen as well as of the Americans, had to be made in English through interpreters.

The welcoming committee took breakfast on board with the Chinese commission. Every courtesy was extended by quarantine and customs officers. The Chinese Consul General is to accompany the party East over the Great Northern Railroad, the party arriving at St. Paul on March 5.

About three days will be spent in New York City, where a committee that includes J. P. Morgan, Seth Low, and a dozen others has planned entertainment. The party will be in the country about two weeks and then go to England, France, and Belgium.

DEBS COUNSELING FORCE.

Would Use Guns to Keep Moyer and Haywood from Jail.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Feb. 28.—In a letter to a local labor paper Eugene V. Debs has this to say about the arrest of President Moyer and Secretary Haywood of the Western Miners for supposed complicity in the Idaho dynamite case:

"What I have to say about the latest and boldest stroke of the plutocracy will require but little space. It is not talk that is wanted, but action.

"Another Haymarket attempt will precipitate a revolution. If murder must be committed it is not the working class alone that will furnish the victims this time.

"Moyer, Haywood, and their colleagues are absolutely innocent. A million of men at the least will meet the issue with guns.

"We have no courts to appeal to. They belong to the plutocracy. We have tried them for years, and for one I am opposed to squandering our means going up against a brace game judiciary.

"If they strike the first violent blow we will strike the last."

JAIL FOR GEORGE M. LYNCH.

Recorder Says a Burglar Is Respectable Compared with Jeweler's Son.

After pleading guilty in General Sessions yesterday to two indictments for grand larceny, George M. Lynch, a son of the late Mrs. Theresa Lynch, was sentenced to nine months in the penitentiary by Recorder Goff under a former suspended sentence. In 1905 the prisoner, who is now 53 years old and was well-to-do, was found guilty of collecting $200 for the St. Gabriel Sanitarium, only a part of which he gave to the sisters in charge.

In sentencing Lynch Recorder Goff said: "The defendant has escaped arrest and punishment once before only because he belonged to a wealthy family, members of which made good what he has stolen on numerous occasions. He stole money meant for the poor and afflicted. It seems to me that a burglar would be a respectable person in comparison."

Maurice Myers, who appeared as counsel for Lynch, said in pleading for leniency that his client had been addicted to morphine for two years, and that this undoubtedly accounted for his acts.

SAYS PACKER FALSIFIED.

Government Agent Flatly Contradicts Testimony of Arthur Meeker.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—E. D. Durand, special agent for the Government, who investigated the Beef Trust charges, to-day contradicted testimony given by witnesses for the packers in several instances.

Arthur Meeker, General Superintendent for Armour & Co., had testified that he had answered all questions put to him by Mr. Durand. The latter was asked if he had heard Mr. Meeker so testify.

"Yes," said Mr. Durand.

"Were all the interrogatories put by you to him answered, as he said?"

"They were not."

Mr. Durand also said that he asked A. H. Veeder, general counsel for Swift & Co., and one of the men under indictment in the present case, to give evidence under oath during the investigation by Commissioner Garfield and that Mr. Veeder replied that he would do nothing of the kind, because it might destroy the chance for immunity for the packers.

Mr. Durand testified that Mr. Meeker and J. Ogden Armour were both anxious to have the Garfield report published, so as to stop newspaper attacks, and also were anxious to have it show there was no combination.

MUST PAY RUSSELL SAGE.

Tenant Said Apartment Was Cold, but He Must Give Up $195.

The Appellate Term of the Supreme Court decided yesterday that Russell Sage is entitled to collect three months' rent from a tenant who moved from one of his houses on the ground that the apartment was cold, the telephone service bad, and the hallboy an acting elevator boy.

The tenant was Dr. Feodor Von Raitz. He leased an apartment in the house at Central Park West and 102d Street. The lease was to run from September, 1904, to September, 1905. Last July he moved away. The judgment is for $195.

LIFE INSURANCE AGENTS RAISE MIGHTY PROTEST

A Cataclysm Out of the Clear Sky Coming, One Says.

CRITICISE THE INVESTIGATORS

For Not Having Consulted Them—Annual Dinner of the Underwriters Compared with a Funeral.

The Life Underwriters' Association of New York had their annual dinner last night at the Hotel Savoy, and it resolved itself, as far as the members of the association were concerned, into a general protest against the proposals of the Armstrong investigating committee to limit first year's commissions to 50 per cent. of first premiums, and the expenses of new business to the first year's loading plus mortality savings estimated for the first five years. As Charles Jerome Edwards, general agent of the Equitable in Brooklyn, put it:

"The impending cataclysm of disaster with which we are brought face to face comes like a bolt out of the clear sky."

The Life Underwriters are mostly general agents of the companies doing business in this city. They had as their guests last night Presidents Morton of the Equitable and Peabody of the Mutual, Actuary McClintock of the Mutual, Vice President Tarbell of the Equitable, and other men equally well known in the insurance field. Most of the protest, however, was confined to the underwriters themselves, President Morton's speech having to do with the things that would happen to the agent who rebates, Mr. Tarbell's with the work of the agents, and Mr. McClintock's with the effect of rebating on the agency force. Mr. Peabody was down for a speech, but did not respond. The incoming President of the association, T. Reid Pell, who presided, explained that the Mutual's President had said that he "had done so much talking lately that he was hoarse."

Mr. Pell's predecessor, J. Carlton Ward, made some cursory references to events in the insurance world in the last year. Mr. Pell, however, dived right in. His theory of the life insurance troubles was expressed in his saying that "the life insurance companies have been the victims of political grafters who have preyed upon trust funds." He added that he had faith in the people to punish grafters whenever they caught them, and that the Life Underwriters had no apologies to make for any of the wrongdoers under the old régime.

"At the hands of the press we ask only a square deal," he continued. Then, with reference to the Armstrong Committee's recommendations, Mr. Pell declared:

"We hope that we are not going to be legislated out of existence without a hearing. In this city we have many automatic devices, but it has remained for the legislative committee to devise an automatic insurance company. Why not also invent an automatic missionary and send phonographic records of the gospel of peace out to the heathen in far-off lands; why not have automatic lawyers and automatic doctors and even an automatic Legislature to pass our laws?"

Charles J. Edwards, who followed Mr. Pell, got even further in his ideas when he suggested that the life insurance agent was already defunct.

"We are dead ones to-day," cried Mr. Edwards, "and we realize it, for the provisions of the proposed insurance legislation will drive every life insurance agent out of the business into the street. Thus our feast becomes, as it were, one of funeral baked meats."

Mr. Edwards read at length the proposed law regulating commissions and expenses of new business. Then he said:

"I have read this not because I understand it, but because it is what we are up against. It is the evils that we don't know that we are afraid of. May I be permitted to hazard the conclusion that if this proposed legislation is enacted there will not be after 1906 one single outside company operating in the State of New York! Furthermore, the New York companies will practically withdraw from every other State, and the conclusion is obvious. Companies chartered to do business in other States will be able to do business in other States only where a living wage can be paid in return for honest services."

Mr. Edwards declared that the life insurance agents who had created the companies by producing the business had not been consulted by the Armstrong Committee, and expressed his ultimate regret as follows:

"It is sad, most sad, that the Armstrong Committee and the most able counsel which they had retained should have been limited in advice on these more technical matters of life insurance, and the relations borne to the practical uplifting side of it, which has here resulted in a phase of legislation which will tend to assassinate our livelihood."

William C. Johnson spoke feelingly of James W. Alexander and the late John A. McCall, and called for a toast "To do honor to those whose work is ended." This was drunk in silence.

Then President Morton was called on. He said he guessed he would have to make a reform speech. It reminded him of one time when Hoke Smith, soon after he had been made Secretary of the Interior by President Cleveland, had to make a speech at a Gridiron Club dinner in Washington. He made his speech according to the book, called on public servants to be faithful to their trusts, and not to the trusts. Then the President of the Gridiron Club suggested that everybody sing "I Want to Be an Angel." The underwriters forgot their perils and laughed at this.

Mr. Morton said that the rebater and the agent who was otherwise a trickster wasn't wanted by the companies and ought not to be by the agents. He said that he didn't believe in advances to agents and that the prizes which he approved and which he thought the Legislature probably wouldn't prohibit, were promotions for meritorious work, which was to be judged not by the volume, but by the character, persistency, and quality of the business.

"The speed craze between the large companies as to which can be the biggest is over," said Mr. Morton. "From now on the race will be for the swiftest to get and show the best results. It will not be the amount of business written, but economy and the wisdom shown in the administration of the insurance business that we shall all be measured by."

Charles W. Scovel, President of the National Association of Life Underwriters was down for a speech, but had not been called on when the reporters had to leave. Proofs of his address had been distributed, however, with "leave to print." So this extract from his remarks on "The Primal Duty" is reproduced here:

"Our responsibility is the great one, fellow-agent. Upon us devolves the full, personal, Gospel ministry; the pastoral care of the flock. Not only must we proselyte, evangelize, bring in new converts; we must also gain and keep the close personal confidence of the old converts; we must keep on guard to diminish straying and backsliding; we must in our own persons worthily represent our church to the community, remembering that it will be commonly spoken of as "The Rev. Mr. Blank's church"; we must incessantly plan the detailed methods for pushing forward along all possible lines the active work, the real business of our church.

"The actuaries and medical department must be learned and devout men, communicants, personally inducted into the mysteries of the faith. The general financial departments do not have to be such; church trustees are not necessarily communicants. They must be high-class men, skillful financiers, and they must have an intelligent, sympathetic view of the church's whole mission. Of course, many of them have beyond that all the personal zeal and learning of a Bishop, but no personal religious experience is required to make them eligible and efficient trustees.

"We, the field men, without bishops in the agency department, constitute the actual priesthood of life insurance. We the the apostles through whom the insurance salvation of the world must be accomplished."

About 200 underwriters attended the dinner.

apparent as is its unreasonableness," declared Mr. Foraker with great emphasis.

"It involves the general supervision by a political board, appointed by the President, of a business so tremendous as to be practically incomprehensible, and so complicated and difficult in its character as to be almost beyond the power of human intellect to master it, with authority to change rates with the stroke of a pen, affecting revenues to the extent of millions of dollars, and to make new regulations of every character affecting the operation of more than 200,000 miles of railways, and affecting also, because of their relations to the railroads and their dependence upon them, almost every other kind of important business conducted throughout the length and breadth of the country; and in this behalf this board, to the judgment of which these vast interests are to be subjected, is authorized to be legislator, prosecutor, Judge, jury, and Marshal, all combined.

"In all the legislation of more than a century no such proposition has ever before been successfully presented to the American Congress. It would be an absolute disaster to the country if it should be successfully presented now, were it not that it is impossible for such a measure to receive the sanction of the courts.

"If such a comingling of power can be sustained as to legislation of this vastly important character it will be a precedent of such commanding force that it will be idle hereafter to talk about three independent and co-ordinate departments of government, the powers of which are not to be blended and merged."

Senator Foraker said that the States could, in their sovereign power, fix rates on a classification basis, as under the Iowa and Wisconsin law, or recommend them, as under the Minnesota law. But the Constitution of the United States, he said, provides that all legislative power shall be vested in Congress; and Congress shall have power to regulate inter-State commerce. There is no division of legislative power, nor any authority to delegate to any commission, board, or tribunal or agency any legislative power.

"The legislative power conferred upon Congress cannot be exercised by any authority except Congress itself," he said. "If Congress has the power to fix rates, a commission can be created and it can be utilized in the fixing of rates. But it can be utilized only under some such statute as those enacted by the Legislature of Iowa and Wisconsin. Congress could also utilize the commission in the fixing of rates if it should see fit to resort to the policy of a mileage basis."

The next point taken up was the difficult problem of differentials, because under the Constitution Congress can give no preference by any regulation of commerce to the ports of one State over those of another. The prediction was made that the bill, if passed, would break down the whole system of preferentials and allow the special advantages of favored ports to operate against others.

"Not only would the port of Boston be closed up," he said, "but all the other ports would be at least most seriously affected."

The silence of the bill on water routes was pointed out. "All through-water routes for inter-State transportation," he said, "are excluded from the provisions of the statute, such as from Chicago to Cleveland by lake, or from Cincinnati to New Orleans by river, or from Maine to Florida, or New York to Charleston or Savannah, in the coastwise trade, and many other routes of similar character that might be mentioned. They are exempted from the act, notwithstanding rebates and discriminations may be granted and practiced and be just as harmful in their results as when granted by the railroads."

The bill in this particular, he declared, is "a grotesque absurdity, to enact which would discredit the intelligence of the Congress."

The only point in the speech where the Ohio Senator might be charged with directly attacking the President was that describing how the bill was being jammed through Congress.

"This bill," said he, "confessedly unsatisfactory to every member of the House committee, and probably to every member of the House of Representatives, passed the House without amendment, because, as the newspapers announced, 'the order had gone forth' that, while there might be debate, no amendment—no matter how necessary it might appear—should be allowed. The bill came to the Senate, and so far as the committee is concerned, there has been a repetition of that experience.

"To even suggest that the bill is filled with unconstitutional provisions or that it will prove impracticable in operation is heralded as a species of treason and disloyalty, to whom or to what nobody knows. The whole proceeding is without a precedent in my experience and probably in the history of the Nation.

"If we are to abdicate our functions and permit such an imperfect, ill-advised, and ill-considered bill to become a law discredit will attach and disappointment will follow not only to 'those who desire such legislation' as the House Committee suggested, but to all the people."

Mr. Foraker in conclusion said: "It is not either easy or agreeable to differ with the President. I dislike exceedingly, as every other public man does, to be arraigned before the country by unfriendly critics as prompted by unworthy motives in the attitude assumed, and to suffer in consequence in the esteem of the people.

"It is far pleasanter to go with the tide of public sentiment and enjoy the benefits of harmonious relations with co-workers in the public service and have the acclaim instead of the disapprobation of constituents; but no man who allows himself to be controlled against his judgment by considerations of this character can do his duty or maintain his self-respect or be entitled to retain the respect and confidence of his colleagues and constituents."

As Senator Foraker took his seat the Senators about him rushed forward to congratulate him. He received an ovation such as has not been seen in a long while in the Senate. Senators who are opposed to him were as eager to grasp him by the hand as any. Among the first to reach him were Pettus and Clapp. Practically all the Senators on the Republican side gathered about him and stood there for several minutes.

Alger of Michigan could not say enough in praise of the speech. He had got up from his seat in the middle of it, and in passing Foraker said, sotto voce, "It is magnificent." He now, at the close, clung to Foraker's hand as if the latter were saving his life. Senators gathered in little knots and began to discuss the argument of the Ohio Senator. It was several minutes before the confusion ceased and the Senate resumed its work.

During the entire speech Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese Minister, and Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, sitting side by side in the diplomatic gallery, looked down complacently on the scene below.

STILL BAITING CROMWELL.

Senator Morgan Gets Only a Single Fact from Lawyer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—William Nelson Cromwell was brought to-day before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals to an admission that he drew the monetary agreement entered into between the Republic of Panama and Secretary of War Taft. It was this agreement that recently caused criticism in the Senate, because it in reality was a treaty made without consulting that body. Mr. Taft afterward canceled the agreement, and pleaded that he was forgetful when he made it.

The one admission was all Senator Morgan got out of hours of questioning of the lawyer. They came to several sharp passages in the hearing.

"Your case of lockjaw seems to be getting worse," remarked the Senator at one point.

"I want to see if the witness can tell the truth on any point," he said at another.

Senator Simmons asked Mr. Cromwell why he had served the Republic as fiscal agent without compensation.

"Because of my broad instinct of good nature which has prompted me to do so much for this cause, and for the further reason that I have more money than I know what to do with, unfortunately," said Mr. Cromwell.

Taking up the scheme for the "Americanization of the Panama Canal," Mr. Morgan asked if it was the same "broad instinct of good nature," that had caused him to engage in that.

"Are you still harping on our daughter?" asked Mr. Cromwell.

"She seems to be a harp of many strings, and I should like to know her better," said Mr. Morgan. Then he asked several questions concerning the scheme, and the witness said:

"Senator, I have declined to answer those questions so often that I think I had better get a phonograph."

Mr. Cromwell will be on the stand again to-morrow.

SWEEPING CHANGES IN THE POLICE TO-DAY

Forty of McAdoo's Traffic Men Shifted to the Bronx.

GRAND CENTRAL SQUAD GOES

That May Interest Green Goods Men—No Police on Piers—Tenderloin May Be Ripped Apart.

The police kaleidoscope made a dizzy whirl yesterday, wholesale transfers being arranged.

Police Sergeant William W. Sullivan, ranking officer of the Grand Central subprecinct, will lock the door of the station in the basement of the station at 8 o'clock this morning for the first time since Oct. 9, 1871. Then Sergt. Sullivan will depart for the Rockaway Beach Police Station, Sergt. Kelley to the remote fastnesses of Parkville on the edge of the virgin rubber tree jungles of Brooklyn, Sergt. Lane to Oak Street, and Sergt. Walsh to the East Fifty-first Street Station. Two Roundsmen, two doormen, and twenty-eight men will be sprinkled through the various precincts, and there will be no more Grand Central Squad.

Since 1871 incoming country cousins have had ample protection from the temptations of the gold brick and green goods specialists, six men being on duty in the station, besides two Central Office men. The New York Central Railroad begins to-day to look out for its own passengers. Three of its employés will be sworn in as special policemen, and each will do an eight-hour trick.

The sub-precinct also looked after the peace of the territory stretching from Fortieth to Forty-fifth Street, and from Madison to Lexington Avenue. Simeon Ford of the Grand Union Hotel and a squad of residents and business men of the section petitioned Commissioner Bingham to let the precinct remain, but he would not change his plans. The old sub-precinct lines will be absorbed by the extension of the lines of the neighboring precincts and the streets will be guarded by their details.

It is estimated that 600 trains enter or leave the station every day and that 100,000 persons pass through it. Many of those who have arrived in New York from up the State in the past have been regarded as easy prey for the wily seller of the attractive gold brick. Mr. Ford, who has some reputation as a funny man, says that this estimate of the incoming visitors has not been inaccurate and isn't inaccurate now. He isn't joking, either. He predicts that the railroad's police won't have any time to swap yarns with the cabmen.

Commissioner Bingham put Capt. Hodgins of the Tenderloin Station in command of the Third Inspection District yesterday, to serve in the place of Inspector Schmittberger, who is sick. The change is temporary.

It is rumored that Commissioner Bingham is planning to transfer the present force of patrolmen from the Tenderloin in bunches of five and ten. In putting in new Sergeants, roundsmen, and plain-clothes men the Commissioner has already made the biggest sweep of the Tenderloin in years. It is said that he wants to get an absolutely new working force in the White Light District.

Commissioner Bingham went at the Traffic Squad, Mr. McAdoo's pride, yesterday. On the recommendation of Inspector Flood, he transferred forty men, thirty-six cavalrymen going from duty on street crossings to outlying districts in the Bronx, where the posts of duty are long. Two mounted men were sent to do traffic duty in South Street, and two more to West Street. Commissioner Bingham explained that in some cases the mounted men at the street crossings have been getting off with about five hours of work each day.

A special order goes into effect this morning for policemen to stay on the shore side of the bulkheads on the piers. The steamship companies will have to employ men of their own to regulate traffic on their piers.

SANTO DOMINGO TREATY CHANGED AND REPORTED

Democrats Vote Solidly Against It in Senate Committee.

POLICE POWER IS LIMITED

American Forces Would Be Used Only to Protect Revenue Collectors —Two Sections Added.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Foreign Relations Committee perfected its work on the Santo Domingo treaty and reported it to the Senate to-day. The Republicans voted solidly for the report and the Democrats against it. As amended the treaty strengthens the position of the United States as an arbiter of the financial and political troubles of the little republic.

The first article is changed by adding the words "whether liquidated and agreed upon or to be established." This opens the door to the consideration of the new claims that have not been presented since the United States entered on its task of auditing the debts of Santo Domingo.

The second article is amended so as to give the President of the United States power to name the commissions that shall passs on the debts of Santo Domingo, this provision being added:

"The customs receipts or other moneys which shall come into and be in the custody of the agents of the United States acting in Santo Domingo and the provisions hereof, shall not be subject to the jurisdiction or processes of the courts of Santo Domingo, nor shall the agents of the United States discharging functions under this treaty be subject to the criminal jurisdiction or processes of the courts of Santo Domingo, except with the consent of the President of the United States."

In Article IV. is inserted the following: "The whole surplus which may remain at the end of each fiscal year shall be delivered to the Government of the Dominican Republic or shall be devoted to the payment of its debts, as the United States shall determine."

Senator Spooner drew the following article to take the place of Article VII. in the original treaty:

"The United States while this treaty is being executed may take such steps as it may deem proper to preserve order and facilitate the accomplishment hereof."

In the first draft Santo Domingo was authorized to ask the United States to police the island. Now the United States takes the power to protect its citizens engaged in collecting the revenues, and on that ground only can a force be sent there. Further amendment to this article is contemplated.

The following article is added:

"Article 8. The purposes of this treaty being such as are stated in the precis and preamble thereto, the United States shall not in any event be held liable to the Government or people of Santo Domingo for any mistake or omission of any of the agents or officers of the United States in executing the powers and authority conferred by the provisions of this treaty, nor shall any liability of the United States arise in favor of any creditor or claimant of debt or damages against Santo Domingo, which shall be considered or dealt with in pursuance of this treaty by the United States, its agents, or officers, except such as shall be assumed in any award. All decisions and awards made by the United States, its agents, or officers, in pursuance of the provisions of this treaty shall be conclusively binding upon the Government and people of Santo Domingo."

Another article is designed to relieve the United States from responsibility for foreign claims unless the country holding such claims voluntary agrees to abide by the decision reached.

"Article 10—The United States is not bound by this treaty to consider or decide on any claim presented to it for adjudication, adjustment or settlement until the Government of which the claimant is a citizen or subject has given its consent, that the decision thereof by the United States, its agents, or officers, thereunto duly empowered shall be accepted as final and conclusive. And in no event shall the United States be bound to make any payment of any award or part thereof to the claimant until the money to pay the same shall have been received from the Dominican Government under the provisions of this treaty and until the same has been set apart by the duly authorized agent or officer of the United States to be applied to said award."

While the treaty was placed on the Senate executive calendar by the report made to-day, it will not be called up until after the Railroad Rate bill has been disposed of, and even then it may go over for some time.

Briefly, the treaty provides for the adjustment of the claims against the Dominican republic under the supervision of the United States. This Government is to take charge of the Custom Houses and collect the revenues, pay 45 per cent. to the Dominican republic and withold 55 per cent., the latter amount to be used to liquidate the debts of the republic.

THE GRANT'S CREW RESCUED.

Norfolk Tugboat Captain Takes Men Off When Life Savers Fail.

CAPE HENRY, Va., Feb. 28.—All the men on the schooner George M. Grant were rescued to-day by Capt. Meredith Partridge of the Norfolk tugboat Jack Twohy. The rescue was effected by a novel method after life savers had tried in vain to render assistance.

A sixty-mile wind was ploughing up a sea that made the launching of a surfboat impossible. The lumber laden Grant lay within 800 yards of the beach. Every sea was breaking over her.

Capt. Partridge saw that there was no time to lose. He pointed inshore and ran close to the Grant on the windward side. He dropped a line with a float, and it was carried to the schooner by the current. Once made fast the tug passed to leeward of the wreck. Then with each big sea the Twohy slowly steamed bow on to the Grant. Two of the tug's crew stood in the peak of the bow, and each time the tug touched the schooner's side they reached out, grabbed one of the shipwrecked seamen and pulled him to safety. When the last man had been taken aboard the Twohy cut loose and headed for Norfolk. From the shore it seemed that six men were saved. The Grant will be a total loss.

CLAICHE GIRL WAS AFRAID.

Told Policeman She Might as Well Kill Gerdron First.

Policeman Henry Brueck took the stand in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday and testified that Berthe Claiche, the young Frenchwoman who is on trial before Justice Davis for the murder of Emile Gerdron, said to him a few days before the shooting:

"What's the use of having him arrested? He'll kill me, anyhow, when he gets out. I might just as well kill him."

Several witnesses, including County Detective Rooney and Storekeeper Monk of the Public Administrator's office, were called to identify three letters taken from Gerdron's trunk after his death and now in the possession of the prosecutor. They are expected to be introduced as evidence to prove that defendant had no reason for complaint against her victim.

Much of the day was spent in identifying the handwriting on a letter said to have been written by the defendant from the Tombs. Arnold D. Prince, a reporter; Michael C. Breen, a Tombs keeper; William J. Goff, a messenger in the Tombs Prison, and a clerk named Pierre Deschamps were called to the stand for this purpose. It is expected that the people's case will be concluded to-day.

DURNOVO AGAIN OVERRULED.

He Tried to Interfere with the Elections—Resignation Likely.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 28.—The reactionary policy of Interior Minister Durnovo received another decided set-back today, when the action of the St. Petersburg police in closing the central bureau of the Constitutional Democrats was disowned by the Government, permission was given for the reopening of the bureau, and the police were ordered to abstain from further interference with the campaign work of the party.

This flagrant attempt to interfere with the elections, which is condemned even by the Conservative parties, is generally ascribed to M. Durnovo, without whose authority the police would hardly have dared to take such action in the capital. The event revivifies the rumors of M. Durnovo's approaching retirement, which a trusted subordinate of Premier Witte to-day said was certain to occur as soon as the National Assembly met and which might be expected sooner.

JAPAN'S BILL WORRIES RUSSIA.

Aggravates Her Financial Embarrassments—Fours Again Fall.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 28.—According to the Russ, the financial embarrassments of Russia are aggravated by the necessity for the payment to Japan for the maintenance of Russian prisoners.

The Bourse was again weak to-day. Fours fell to 79.

The new general tariff and the conventional tariffs with Germany, France, and Austria-Hungary will come into effect to-morrow. British trade will suffer in regard to certain kinds of machinery not specified in the conventional tariffs, and therefore not covered by the most-favored-nation clause. Thus appliances connected with the working of wood have to pay nearly double the previous rates.

Russia suffers by the increase of the German tariff on cereals, especially oats.

A LIBAU-NEW YORK LINE.

Russians to Establish a Service at the Opening of Navigation.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 28.—The official Russkoe Gosudarstvo announces that a direct steamship service between Libau and New York will be established at the opening of navigation.

The journal comments upon the increasing Russo-American commerce, which heretofore has been carried in German bottoms, and says that a group of Russian capitalists is being organized to deal solely in American products, the prices of which, it is expected, will be materially cheapened.

DECLINES VICE PRESIDENCY.

Senor Capote Says the Office in Cuba Is Purely Ornamental.

HAVANA, Feb. 28.—Mendez Capote, leader of the Moderate Party, formerly President of the Senate and Vice President-elect of the Republic, announced today his desire to withdraw before the vote of the Presidential Electors is actually cast. He says that his reason for withdrawing is that he considers the office of Vice President to be negative and purely ornamental, as in the United States, and it is impossible for him to serve his country definitely in that office. Therefore, he prefers to devote himself to his law practice.

Señor Capote some time ago possessed great influence, but it has been waning since the ascendency of Gen. Freyre Andrade, who, as Secretary of the Interior, caused the downfall of the Liberal leaders and office holders in all directions and made the Palma party apparently impregnable.

President Palma, at the instance of Gen. Ardrade, has recently taken action which is considered to be adverse to the interests of certain American and Cuban enterprises whose promoters were clients of Señor Capote.

GOING AFTER WOODBURY.

Aldermen Vote to Hire Counsel to Prosecute an Investigation.

Permission was given to the Street Cleaning Committee of the Board of Aldermen, by the board at its meeting yesterday, to employ special counsel to carry on the investigation of the Department of Street Cleaning and the charges of graft that have been made against it. The committee held a meeting later in the day and Chairman Grifenhagen announced that the investigation of Commissioner Woodbury and his subordinates would be begun at once.

When the resolution came up in the board, Alderman Downing of Brooklyn attacked Commissioner Woodbury for his failure properly to clean the streets, and said that the board should go after "the man higher up."

The resolution was passed by a vote of 50 to 11. No mention was made in the resolution of an appropriation to pay for the counsel, that being left to the Board of Estimate.

TILLINGHAST GETS 3 MONTHS.

He Impersonated a Juror in a Street Railway Case.

William H. Tillinghast was sentenced to three months in the penitentiary by Justice McAvoy in Special Sessions yesterday, after having pleaded guilty to impersonating a juror before Judge O'Dwyer in the City Court in order to get the juror excused from service.

Assistant District Attorney Lockwood said that Tillinghast had confessed to having been employed by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company for several years as a professional juror in damage cases against the company, but that all the instances of offense to which he had confessed were outlawed. The investigation would continue, Mr. Lockwood said, and the District Attorney's office hoped to be able to use Tillinghast as a witness.

The prisoner pleaded for leniency, saying that he had a mother 90 years old. Justice McAvoy told him he was sorry that he could not give him twenty years. The reason for the comparatively light sentence was that he had furnished evidence to the State.

ROBBED DAY AFTER ARRIVAL.

Thief Snatched Nurse's Bag of Valuables in Street and Got Away.

Miss Marie McLean arrived in the city on Tuesday to enter the Florence Nightingale School for Nurses, connected with the Presbyterian Hospital. She had to go from the school to the hospital, a block away, yesterday afternoon. She ran across with a shawl over her head and a bag in her hand.

A young man was loitering on the corner, and as she passed he knocked her arm up, grabbed the bag, and ran off. He got away. The bag contained a few dollars and a Swiss watch, valuable as a family heirloom. Dr. Fisher, Superintendent of the hospital, reported the robbery to the East Sixty-seventh Street police.

MARCH 1906

BOARD OF TRADE WANTS ELSBERG BILL AMENDED

Favors Discretionary Clause in the Subway Measure.

AGAINST THE MORTGAGE TAX

Our Government Blamed for Chinese Troubles — Subject of Police on the Piers Also Considered.

The New York Board of Trade and Transportation at its regular monthly meeting yesterday adopted a resolution indorsing the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill, now pending before the Legislature at Albany, but with an amendment directly in line with the legislation suggested by the City Club, leaving it discretionary with the Rapid Transit Commissioners whether construction, equipment, and operation of future subway lines be arranged for in one contract or separately.

The resolution was offered by Chairman Gibson of the Board of Trade's Committeen on City Affairs. Mr. Gibson in introducing the resolution explained that the committee had disagreed on the bill and could make no report, and that he alone stood sponsor for the resolution.

"It is the common belief of business men in this city that the merger aims to control all future transit lines in this city," said Mr. Gibson in offering it. "The object of this law, as I understand it, however, is not to prevent the merger from bidding on future subways, but to prevent it from controlling them and from being in a position to dictate to the city in the way of future extension and operation of its rapid transit lines. We do not want to make a law that would keep any responsible bidders for future subway construction and operation out, and, furthermore, I think this board should be opposed to the use of public money for construction of subways for the purpose of developing territory."

Frederick B. Thurber came out for the City Club's bill, in a speech in which he said that we had too many municipal employes already, and said that grave political evils might grow out of municipal ownership under universal suffrage.

City Employes and Strikes.

"If the advocates of the Elsberg bill had their way," said Mr. Thurber, "all street railway employes before long would wear the city uniform. What that would mean to the public was indicated by a strike on the Staten Island municipal ferry just before election. The employes struck for a few hours, and got a 75 cent increase in their daily pay, and three shifts to do the work instead of two that had done it before. If elevated railroad, Subway, and street car lines were operated by the city we would have that sort of strikes, and meantime the people of this city would have to walk."

Calvin Tomkins was in favor of indorsing the Elsberg bill without the amendment as the only means to stave off municipal operation in the near future. He was supported by Gen. Henry E. Tremaine. J. H. Washburn argued that many advantages could be achieved by giving the building contractor assurance that he would have operation of the lines as well, and said that it would not be possible, under the Elsberg bill, to get the building of new subways unless the city was able to build and operate them, and this the city was not able to do at present. The resolution was then adopted.

J. Edgar Leaycraft, on behalf of the Committee on Finance and Taxation, offered a resolution for the repeal or amendment of the mortgage tax law. It was unanimously adopted. In a preamble to the resolution it was declared that the tax had tended to check the erection of new buildings, thereby curtailing opportunities for employment and increasing rentals. The resolution called for the entire exemption of mortgages from taxation, or, as an alternative, the substitution of a recording tax at the rate of 1½ per cent., to be paid once for the annual tax.

Against Chinese Exclusion.

A resolution reported by the Executive Committee of the board on the subject of the Chinese exclusion law was adopted without discussion. It placed the responsibility for the present unfriendliness toward Americans and American products in China at the door of the United States Government, and, pointing out that not only as a matter of comity, but because of the great field China offers to American commerce, the intercourse between the American and Chinese peoples should be conducted on the broad lines of humanity, indorsed the policy outlined by President Roosevelt and the regulation governing the admission to this country of Chinese passed on Feb. 5.

A letter from Gustav H. Schwab calling the attention of the board to the danger to the public health growing out of the continued pollution of the waters of the river and harbor was read, and provision was made for the appointment of a special committee to consider this matter and report at the next meeting of the Board. Mr. W. L. Guillaudeau then offered a resolution calling on the Committee on City Affairs to confer with Police Commissioner Bingham, and urge him to repeal his order taking detailed policemen from the steamship piers. G. F. McCarthy, an employing truckman, said that the special detail men along the river front had done little good, and advocated the substitution of regular patrol posts for the former arrangement. He said the special detail men stuck on the piers where they did little but enforce the regulations of the steamship and railroad companies, but did not protect property. He added:

"In 1903 $38,000 worth of property was stolen on the river fronts. In 1904 the figure had risen to $52,000, and in 1905 to $69,000. Not one dollar's worth of this property has been recovered, nor is there a single arrest by one of the special detail men for these depredations on record. The policemen only laugh at you if you suggest that they leave the piers to protect property on the outside."

A special committee to look into the matter as a whole was then provided for by the board.

COD LIVER OIL.

It almost makes you sick to think of it, but it isn't nearly as bad as it used to be. The improved method of refining it makes it much easier to take, and when made into Scott's Emulsion almost every one can take it. Most children like it and all children that are not robust are benefited by it. When the doctor says "Take cod liver oil," he generally means Scott's Emulsion; ask him if he doesn't. They know it is more easily digested and better than the plain oil.

BANK INQUIRY UNLIKELY.

Senate Vote Shows Its Disinclination to Order One.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The disinclination of the Republican majority to lend itself to any further investigations of the various departments was evidenced by two object lessons to-day. One of them was given in an executive session of the Senate Finance Committee and the other on the floor of the Senate.

In the session of the Senate Finance Committee the resolution originating in the Assembly for a joint Committee on Banks to investigate the general banking conditions in the State, was discussed, as was a substitute resolution of Senator Raines, providing for an inquiry as to the necessity for changes in the banking laws, and providing, further, that the Attorney General be the counsel of the committee.

Among the strongest advocates of immediate action were Senator Armstrong, who headed the insurance investigation, and Senator Stevens, Chairman of the Gas Investigating Committee, and they made a vigorous protest against any delay.

A test of the feeling of the committee came on a motion to postpone consideration of the resolution until Tuesday next. This was carried by a vote of 7 to 5.

The regular session of the Senate began immediately after the session of the committee. It was the intention of Senator Stevens to move at once that the resolution calling for the banking investigation be taken out of the hands of the Finance Committee.

The plans of Senator Stevens, however, went awry, for before he could make his motion Senator Marks moved to discharge the Finance Committee from consideration of his resolution calling for a general investigation of nearly all the State departments, including the Banking Department. The Marks resolution had been tied up in the committee for some time.

This action by Senator Marks precipitated a heated debate. Mr. Marks said he had no expectation of success in making the motion. The lid had been lifted from only one department, and he demanded an investigation of the conduct of corporations dealing with the Insurance Department.

The motion to relieve the committee was lost by 38 to 8 votes, leaving Mr. Marks's resolution still tied up in committee. The Senators voting with Marks were Foley, Frawley, Hawkins, Keenan, Martin, Quinn, and Reardon.

Recognizing the situation, Senator Stevens did not put his motion. It is likely, however, that he will bring the matter up next Tuesday, when the committee will again consider the Assembly resolution.

NEW TRUST COMPANY BILL.

Provides for 15 Per Cent. Reserve Here—10 Per Cent. in Other Towns.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The Banks Committee of the Senate to-day agreed on a substitute bill for the Stevens-Wainwright bill providing for a money reserve for trust companies and decided to report it favorably.

The new measure provides that trust companies in New York City shall have a reserve consisting of 5 per cent. cash in hand, 5 per cent. cash in other banks or trust companies under the regulation of the State Banking Department, and 5 per cent. in securities, consisting of Government, State, or municipal bonds. Trust companies in Buffalo and in all other sections of the State are to have a 10 per cent. reserve, divided into 3 per cent. in cash on hand, 4 per cent. in cash deposited in other banks or trust companies, and 3 per cent. in Government, State, or municipal bonds.

In a statement given out to-night, Senator Stevens, who is Chairman of the Committee on Banks, says:

"In order to prevent any stringency it is provided that the reserve shall be acquired by easy stages. After the passage of the act there is to be kept by New York City trust companies a reserve of 7 per cent., of which at least 2 per cent. must be cash on hand, 3 per cent. may be in banks subject to call, and 2 per cent. may be in bonds. After Aug. 1, 1906, a reserve of 12 per cent. must be kept, of which 4 per cent. must be cash on hand, 5 per cent. may be cash in banks, and 3 per cent. may be invested in bonds. After Jan. 1, 1907, at least 5 per cent. must be cash on hand, 5 per cent. may be cash in banks, subject to call, and 5 per cent. may be invested in bonds.

"For trust companies outside of the city of New York the reserve is also to be accumulated by easy stages.

"The broad proposition of a 15 per cent. reserve and a 10 per cent. reserve, divided as above outlined, has been agreed to by the Trust Companies' Association and the State Bankers' Association.

ROAD CHARGES BAD FAITH.

Central's Lawyer Says Oglesby Bill Is Repudiation of Contract.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—Westchester appeared in full force to-day before the Assembly Railroad Committee to advocate the Oglesby bill, which makes radical changes in the grade crossing law with reference to the apportionment of the expense attaching to abolishing of grade crossings. The New York Central opposed the measure through Attorney William P. Rudd.

Mr. Rudd declared the bill would allow Mount Vernon and Yonkers to repudiate their contracts with the New York Central, that the bill was a political move on the part of the Democratic administration of Yonkers to discredit the Republican administration which made the contract with the road, and that it would upset the whole plan of apportionment of payments for grade crossings.

"Much stress is laid on the cost to the State for elimination of grade crossings," he said. "Let me point out that but $300,000 has been paid by the State during the last ten years."

James B. Ludlow, representing as owner and trustee $2,000,000 worth of property in Westchester County, made one of the principal speeches in favor of the bill. "The plan of the New York Central," he said, "is not the elimination of grade crossings, but a reconstruction of the whole Putnam division, the people bearing the large share of the cost. Then the line will be electrified.

"Whenever the car lines in New York City have obtained franchises to change from horse power to cable and from cable to electricity they always have had to pay for the privilege. Nothing is asked in the way of extra franchise compensation of the New York Central by us or by the State."

BINGHAM JARS TAMMANY.

Much Displeasure at the Ousting of Baker, a McAvoy Lieutenant.

Tammanyites are not pleased with Police Commissioner Bingham's action in abolishing the office of Auditor of the Police Department, thus throwing Jeremiah J. Baker out of a $3,000 job. Baker is one of the chief lieutenants of ex-Deputy Police Commissioner McAvoy, leader of the Twenty-third District. He was appointed to his place in the Police Department, however, before McAvoy was a Commissioner, having taken office in 1898. Prior to that time Baker had been Register of Claims in the Finance Department for many years.

It is expected that a place may again be found for him in the Finance Department. When Commissioner Bingham got permission recently to create the office of executive clerk, and to make an appointment thereto, he also arranged to have this new executive clerk perform the duties which the auditor had been performing.

11TH AV. BILL PASSES; KEEPS SAXE IN SENATE

Sponsor Was Ready to Resign from the Floor If Beaten.

WARNED HIGGINS OF PLAN

Assemblyman Stanley Was Prepared to Follow Senator to Force Public Attention on the Matter.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The Saxe-Stanley Eleventh Avenue bill passed the Senate to-day. All the forty-four members of the Senate who were present voted for it.

Senator Saxe watched the proceedings with keenest interest. When Senators White and McCarren clogged the wheels for a few minutes with explanations of their affirmative vote the Senator from the Seventeenth fidgetted uneasily. His stress of mind was due in part to the fact that he was pledged to rise in his place and formally announce his resignation from the Senate in the event of the failure of the measure. Assemblyman Stanley, who introduced the bill in the House, was ready to do the same thing.

Senator Saxe went to Gov. Higgins last week and laid the Eleventh Avenue bill situation before him.

"Governor," said he, "if the Eleventh Avenue bill is defeated this year I shall resign from the Senate. You know I was elected on the pledge that that bill would be passed. I said the Republican organization was behind me, and that helped to obtain me votes. I regard the pledge as much that of the Republican organization as my own. If the organization doesn't care any more for its honor than to allow this bill to be defeated, then my usefulness in the Senate ceases. I shall have to resign. If the bill is beaten it certainly will appear as if it was beaten by surreptitious methods. I have outlined the situation as to how I stand, and how I think the Republican organization ought to stand. There is nothing more to say."

Just before coming to Albany this week Senator Saxe informed the New York Central officials of what he had told the Governor. Assemblyman Stanley made a similar declaration. It was believed by the two legislators that such an action, without precedent in almost fifty years in the New York Legislature, would be sufficient in itself to command the public attention which they believed the situation warranted.

Whether this attitude of Senator Saxe and Assemblyman Stanley had anything to do with the unanimous action of the Senate to-day can only be conjectured.

The substitute offered yesterday by Ira A. Place was thrown away by the committee. The unamended Saxe-Stanley bill was before the Senate and Saxe was still in doubt as to its fate.

Chairman White of the Cities Committee arose and said:

"We realize that this bill is to meet a public emergency which is most pressing. I regard the bill as very radical. I justify myself in voting for it in that the importance of regulating safety justifies most radical treatment. It is impracticable to amend the measure, but I fear it will not accomplish what its introducer hopes for it, as it will cause litigation and long delay. The bill involves a dangerous principle in arbitrarily fixing a complicated engineering plan with little information at our hands. The public welfare, however, must be protected in this particular instance."

Senator McCarren said he had been asked by many interests along the line to carefully consider the plan proposed by the New York Central Railroad. The Eastern Distillery Company, he said, had called him on the telephone and declared it would be compelled to move away if the Saxe bill is passed.

"But I want to vote for the bill," Senator McCarren said, "because I think it will lead to some measure which will cause the removal of the tracks."

"Every interest along the line knew of the agitation for such a law for the last fifteen years," Senator Saxe said, "but they took a chance that nothing would be done. The question of life and death is greater than the question of freight."

"Why, Mr. President," he continued, "let me read from THE TIMES of this morning. I will show that even while the Cities Committee was deliberating last night another life was lost. There, Mr. President, doesn't that show how the conditions which this bill seeks to eliminate must go on ceaselessly killing and injuring?"

The bill was then passed.

The Saxe bill requires the Rapid Transit Commission of New York to lay out a route and present plans for a subway for the freight tracks which now extend from Spuyten Duyvil to the lower part of the city along the North River.

Ira A. Place, acting for the New York Central Railroad, has informed the members of the Board of Estimate that the ultimate result of the enactment of the Saxe bill for the removal of the Eleventh Avenue tracks will be that the city will have to condemn and take over the rights and franchises which the company owns in the thoroughfare. Mr. Place estimates these rights and properties as worth $100,000,000.

As the rights of the company, however, are in dispute and have been declared to be valueless, the city officials are not inclined to look upon Mr. Place's contention as especially alarming. The Central got into Eleventh Avenue on a fifty-year franchise, granted Aug. 19, 1847. When this expired, nine years ago, the only continuance was a resolution of doubtful validity passed by the Board of Aldermen. Corporation Counsel Rives, under Mayor Low, declared this continuance of the grant to have been worthless, and he even questioned the validity of the original grant in 1847.

OPPOSITION TO OSTEOPATHS.

Physicians Want a Medical Examination for Practitioners.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—Some of the best-known physicians in New York appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee to-day in opposition to the Davis bill to recognize osteopathy. It creates an examining board under the Regents.

The principal speakers opposed to the measure were Drs. Abraham Jacobi, Algernon Bristow, and Frank Van Fleet, Edward O'Brien, attorney for the Medical Society of Erie County, and Dr. Moriarity of Saratoga, family physician of Senator Brackett, Chairman of the committee. They contended that the bill as framed would give the persons now practicing osteopathy recognition as doctors without any special education or training.

Dr. Jacobi said he had no objection to osteopathy in itself, but demanded that a person practicing it be first a graduated physician, as required of hydropaths and homeopaths. He thought all practitioners relying on a one-remedy system should be weeded out.

Dr. Bristow pointed out that the bill did not require a study of toxicology, and a practitioner might not be able to find out, if a patient had a stomach ache, whether he was suffering from poison or appendicitis. C. C. Teall of Brooklyn, Charles Proctor of Buffalo, Charles Hazard of New York, and W. H. Williams of Rochester, all osteopaths, spoke for the bill.

FEDERAL SLATE-MAKING IS RESENTED AT ALBANY

Higgins's Friends Say Interference Hampers Reform.

AN OBJECTION TO VREELAND

Governor Does Not Want Too Close a Friend as Chairman—Hughes Boom Taken Seriously.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—Republican leaders in Albany were greatly interested to-day in the developments of the dinner to New York Congressmen in Washington, at which the boom of Charles E. Hughes for Governor was launched, and Congressman Vreeland was agreed upon as the most available man to succeed State Chairman Odell.

It can be stated authoritatively that Gov. Higgins had no advance knowledge of the position to be taken by the Congressional delegation, and that his friends thoroughly disapprove of this latest example of what is termed here "Washington meddling."

"Those fellows down in Washington are rolling around like peas in a barrel," was the comment made by one of the Governor's advisers, with an air of disgust. "They don't seem to appreciate that the stories which are coming out constantly from Washington about the way in which the State organization is to be reorganized are making it harder and harder for the Governor and his friends to carry through a legislative programme which will win favor with the people."

Congressman Vreeland was mentioned for State Chairman some time ago. Gov. Higgins is said to have thought there was the same objection to him as to James S. Whipple, Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner. Both were prominent in the management of Gov. Higgins's personal campaign when he ran for Governor, and are from his home county.

Gov. Higgins is understood to have declared that the choice of either would be construed as an attempt on his part to control the State organization. He is extremely sensitive on that subject. He does not want anything done which would even have the appearance of an effort to manipulate the party organization in his own interest.

Some of the Governor's best friends believe that if a renomination came to him with any show of unanimity he would be glad to have it. Entertaining that idea they consider the Washington combination of Hughes for Governor and Vreeland for State Chairman an impossible one. They are confident that Mr. Vreeland would do nothing that would not be approved by the Governor.

Another objection raised to Mr. Vreeland or any other Congressman is based on the issue of Federal interference in State politics. Should the new Chairman be named in Washington the Democrats unquestionably would make that issue tell in the campaign.

The suggestion of Charles E. Hughes for Governor is not original with the New York Congressmen. The matter has been discussed all over the State. Nevertheless, the indorsement of the Congressional delegation has given much importance to his boom.

The situation with respect to Mr. Hughes is peculiar. He is not the kind of a man any of the Republican factional leaders would choose as a candidate. But if Gov. Higgins should decide to make a fight for the nomination, Chairman Odell and his friends might take up Mr. Hughes to beat him. On the other hand if Odell should continue to control the State Committee and Gov. Higgins should decide that he did not care to be a candidate for re-election, the leaders of the reorganization movement might make Mr. Hughes their candidate. Republican members of the Armstrong Committee are active in booming Mr. Hughes. They are coupling with his name that of Senator Armstrong for Lieutenant Governor.

SPEAKER AND HIGGINS OPPOSE HOOKER RETRIAL

Wadsworth's Activity Arouses Comment Among Legislators.

RESOLUTION IS DELAYED

Minority Leader Palmer's Health Causes Postponement of Test Motion for One Week.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—It was all framed up by the Republican reorganization leaders to kill the attempt for a retrial of Justice Warren B. Hooker in the Assembly this morning, when the matter unexpectedly went over for a week on account of the poor condition of Minority Leader Palmer's voice.

More than enough votes had been obtained to defeat the proposed motion to discharge Chairman Cox's Judiciary Committee from the further consideration of the retrial resolution. Majority Leader Moreland had been won over to make a speech in favor of sustaining the committee's decision not to report the resolution.

It turned out to-day that Speaker Wadsworth was not the only one of the reorganizers who had been advising that the matter be pigeonholed. Gov. Higgins told Assemblyman Volk of Cattaraugus County this morning that he thought the committee should be sustained. Volk defeated James C. Sheldon on a purely anti-Hooker issue in the Governor's own county. Sheldon voted for Hooker at the trial. Wadsworth this morning, after failing to convince Volk, asked him to see the Governor. Volk did so, and is authority for the statement that the Governor advised him to support the committee.

There was surprise to-day when it became known how active Speaker Wadsworth had been in trying to get an appearance of Republican unanimity in killing off the Hooker retrial resolution. There were still a score or so of the 107 Republicans outside the breastworks when he wound up his campaign at the beginning of the morning session. The new Speaker is being criticised for his activity in the matter. It is pointed out that Speaker Nixon, with all the talk about his Czar-like rule, did not try to influence a single vote in the Hooker matter last Summer.

The flop of Moreland is causing comment. He was one of the hardest-working members of the Judiciary Committee last year and voted in and out of committee against Justice Hooker.

The attitude of Speaker Wadsworth and Chairman Cox of the Judiciary Committee recalls a story circulated at the time the committees were being named that the Judiciary Committee was being arranged so that there would be no retrial of the Hooker case. At last week's meeting of the committee Chairman Cox was among those who voted to suppress the retrial resolution, while Mr. Fish, the deposed Chairman, who is still on the committee, was one of the two Republicans who voted in favor of reporting it.

TO PAY SUBWAY CLAIMANTS.

Assembly Passes Bill for Commission on Damages by Construction.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—By vote of 85 to 26 the Assembly to-day passed the Young bill, providing for appointment of commissions to hear and determine the claims of residents, land owners, and store keepers who suffered financial loss through the construction of the Subway along Fourth Avenue, from Seventeenth to Forty-second Street, and from Forty-second Street west to Times Square.

Some members contended that the bill would establish a most undesirable precedent; that it might make any municipal corporation liable for damages in the construction of any sewer or public work. Mr. Young described the great losses that resulted from the almost total inability of the purchasing public to enter the stores along the route when the Subway was building.

SAYS HAINES MONOPOLY AIDS SYSTEM OF GRAFT

New Bergh Society Petitioner Accuses S. P. C. A. Agents.

WANTS RIGHT TO DO GOOD

Hearing at Albany on Francis Bill to Give Humane Powers to Second Organization.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—Charges that the State has established a monoply on the right to do good, and that the Haines Society, the alleged beneficiary of the monopoly, has agents who ask "How much is there in it?" when asked to enforce humane laws, were made at the Capitol to-day. There was a hearing before the Assembly Committee on Charitable 2and Religious Societies on the Francis bill, granting certain powers to the Henry Bergh Society, which was organized last year. T. H. Roberts of Brooklyn said:

"Very recently I reported a case of a mail wagon horse being driven when the animal was in no condition for work of any kind. In any interior city the driver would have been mobbed. I went to the agent of the Haines Society, which has grown rich out of the dog tax moneys, and the only satisfaction I got was the question: 'How much is there in it?'

"Because this society has no competition its absolute impudence and cussedness has become intolerable. It is un-American to allow one society to have a monopoly of the business of protecting animals. We're not going to fight Haines. If he gets $6,000 or $60,000, it's not our business. What we want to do is to educate the people of New York who drive animals how to take care of them."

Henry B. Maurer, Secretary of the Bergh Society, explained that it was organized a little over a year ago, thinking it had the right to do good, but it soon found that the law established a monopoly. In Philadelphia there were two humane societies, and no conflict between them.

Ludwig Nissen paid his respects to President Haines and alleged that he had been very active in lobbying against the Francis bill.

"The effect of Haines's work here is apparent," he said. "I talked with a number of members, and they declared that they were against our bill because it would produce a conflict of authority between the two societies. This Haines association, discredited as it is, is spending $75,000 each year, diverted from the public treasury. It doesn't want any other organization to enter the field, because it fears it may some time induce the city to divide the perquisites. We have no such intention. Our society is supported entirely by private subscriptions. All we want is the right to do good."

Assemblyman Francis remarked that in New York City there were many hospitals, and there was no attempt in this line to conserve a monopoly.

NEVER SAW VALET JONES, DECLARES MAYOR RICE

Witness Flatly Contradicts Miss Gaillard's Story.

$71,000 TO SAVE PATRICK

J. T. Milliken, Condemned Man's Brother-in-Law, Has Paid It—How to Make Houston Good.

Mayor H. Baldwin Rice of Houston, Texas, a nephew of the murdered William Marsh Rice, appeared on the witness stand in the Court of General Sessions yesterday and denied that he had ever had any such talk with the valet Jones in a street car as Miss Minnie Gaillard described in her testimony. He said that he had never seen or spoken to Jones, and would not know him if he met him.

Mayor Rice was subjected to a searching cross-examination by Mr. Olcott, the object of which appeared to be the establishment of a direct interest in the conviction of Patrick on the part of the Texas heirs of Rice, including the witness.

Many of the questions were overruled by the court on Mr. Jerome's objection to them and others were excluded by Recorder Goff as soon as put. Most of them referred to the advantage derived by the heirs from the Rice will of 1896, which has been probated, as compared with the will of 1900, which has been declared a Patrick forgery.

In the course of the examination it was brought out by Mr. Jerome that John T. Milliken, the brother-in-law of Patrick, has spent $71,000 already in the effort to save the lawyer from the electric chair. This statement by the District Attorney was corroborated by Mr. Olcott, who said that Milliken himself had told him so.

Milliken is a manufacturing pharmacist at St. Louis. His presence here has been ordered by Recorder Goff. Mr. Olcott telegraphed for him yesterday, and he is expected to arrive to-morrow.

Joseph Jordan, the Texan who pleaded guilty to perjuring himself on the stand, was brought to Assistant District Attorney Garvan's office yesterday and kept there for an hour. It was said that Jordan had given much valuable information regarding the affidavits of the Texan witnesses.

The hearing lasted only about an hour yesterday afternoon. Half of that time Mayor Rice was on the stand. He said that he was 44 years old, had lived in Houston all his life, and was elected Mayor of the city last July. Asked if he knew Jones, he said:

"I never saw him in my life."

To a question about Miss Gaillard, he replied that he had met her once when he was about 14 years old and a second time in 1883, when she took dinner at his house. Mr. Jerome then described the conversation to which Miss Gaillard testified and asked if something of that kind had occurred.

"No, Sir," rejoined Mr. Rice. "A nephew of William Marsh Rice does not slap criminals on the back."

When Miss Gaillard was led to the bar by an officer, Mayor Rice took a good look at her before he declared:

"I don't know her."

"When you don't know Jones," asked Mr. Olcott in cross-examination, "how can you tell that you were not sitting beside him."

"I don't think he would have the nerve to take a seat beside me," answered the witness. "I don't think there is money big enough to make him go near one of the Rice family."

Mayor Rice said he had received $29,000 from the Rice estate under the compromise arranged between the contesting heirs and the executors of the will. He denied that the money was paid him in return for his promise to assist in having the will of 1896 probated. Recorder Goff excluded this question:

"Is it not to the interest of your family and yourself that Patrick should be electrocuted?"

These are some of the questions and answers that formed part of the examination:

Q.—You believe Patrick guilty of murder? A.—Certainly.

A.—And believing so, it is to your interest to see him electrocuted? A.—Not at all.

Q.—You desire to see him executed? A.—I certainly want to see him punished.

Q.—Has anything been done toward the establishment of the William Marsh Rice Institute provided for in the will of 1896? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—Why? A.—I don't know; I am not a Trustee.

Q.—Can you tell if out of the estate large sums were spent to obtain the conviction of Patrick? A.—Really, I don't know anything about it at all.

Q.—Do you know why $336,000 was spent in compromise? A.—I don't. I was not a contestant.

Q.—Do you know if Capt. James J. Baker, Jr., the executor of the will, has been active in the prosecution of Patrick? A.—I think he has.

"Don't hesitate," Mr. Jerome broke in. "You may say that he has been enormously, tremendously active, and that he has been of the greatest assistance to the people's case."

Mayor Rice said he paid the expenses for Chief of Police Ellis and the two Houston policemen who came here to testify, but that he did not defray the expenses of W. G. Murray, former penitentiary guard, who identified Jordan. He had ordered the policemen to stay until the New York authorities were through with them.

Insists Her Story Is True.

Mayor Rice said in answer to a question put to him by Mr. Olcott, that so far from being curious about seeing Jones he would hate to meet him, and that he was unaware of any efforts to find Jones at the present moment.

Mayor Rice sat beside Mr. Jerome while Miss Gaillard was again put on the stand. She said she knew and recognized the Mayor and insisted that her story about his conversation with Jones was true.

"When was your certificate as teacher revoked?" asked Mr. Jerome. The witness said she did not understand the question. At the request of the court Mr. Jerome dropped that line of inquiry.

Chief of Police Ellis, Policeman Nathan B. Fuller, and Deputy Constable Thomas F. Lubbock testified that the reputation of all the male witnesses produced by the defense from Texas was bad, and that they belonged to a gang hanging out at "Big Annie's" saloon.

After the Recorder had declined to direct the District Attorney to receive some new affidavits Mr. Olcott wished admitted, it was decided to adjourn the hearing until to-morrow morning, when Mr. Milliken is expected to be here. Then an adjournment of about a month will be taken to give the people a chance to prepare medical expert testimony to meet that adduced by the defense.

Mr. Jerome has received this telegram dated Houston, Texas:

"Keep the present witnesses you have and send for Clyde Creighton, and Houston will be a good town.

"MAXCEY, LUCAS & BONNEY."

None of the Texans in court would acknowledge acquaintance with the man named in the message.

FOOD.

A NECESSARY EVIL

Experience of a Minister Who Tried to Think That of Coffee.

"A descendant of the Danes, a nation of coffee drinkers, I used coffee freely till I was 20 years old," writes a clergyman from Iowa. "At that time I was a student at a Biblical institute, and suddenly became aware of the fact that my nerves had become demoralized, my brain dull and sluggish, and that insomnia was fastening its hold upon me.

"I was loath to believe that these things came from the coffee I was drinking, but at last was forced to that conclusion, and quit it.

"I was so accustomed to a hot table beverage and felt the need of it so much that after abstaining from coffee for a time and recovering my health, I went back to it. I did this several times, but always with disastrous results. I had about made up my mind that coffee was a necessary evil.

"About this time a friend told me that I would find Postum Food Coffee very fine and in many respects away ahead of coffee. So I bought some, and, making it very carefully according to the directions, we were delighted to find that he had not exaggerated in the least. From that day to this we have liked it better than the old kind of coffee or anything else in the way of a table drink.

"Its use gave me in a very short time an increase in strength, clearness of brain, and steadiness of nerves, and sleep, restful and restoring, came back to me.

"I am thankful that we heard of Postum, and shall be glad to testify at any time to the good it has done me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

GREEN GOT 10 PER CENT.

His Share on All Sales to Post Office, Says Witness.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The testimony in to-day's sessions of the trial of former State Senator Green of New York, on indictments charging him with conspiracy to defraud the Government in the sale of time-recording clocks to the Post Office Department, dealt largely with check transactions and bank book exhibits.

J. L. Willard, formerly Secretary of the International Time Recording Company, testified that Green, who was President of the company, received 10 per cent. on all sales to the Post Office Department. Green's salary as President was $1,500 a year.

Mr. Willard said the orders from the Post Office Department usually came in letters from the office of the First Assistant Postmaster General, requesting that recorders or supplies be sent to certain Postmasters. When asked if all the orders from the Government were on file in the company's office, he replied that he thought not. They were picked out some time ago and given to Mr. Green, at his request.

The witness said 515 machines were sold to the Government from 1900 to 1903 inclusive, and that the price was the same as charged in commercial trade.

GERMAN TRADE INJURED.

One Result of the Kaiser's Moroccan Policy—Czar's Advice Taken?

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Communications respecting the conference at Algeciras have taken place between Emperor William and the Czar.

Without pretending to know the precise nature of the communications, I have reason to believe that they could scarcely fail to have impressed the Kaiser with the Czar's earnest desire to see the strained relations between France and Germany come to an end. It must be borne in mind that so long as they continue, Russia, who is in urgent need of money, has no chance of raising it in France.

No doubt Russia is anxious to stand by her ally at Algeciras, just as England has stood by her friend, but considerations of a less sentimental nature require not only that Russia should restore order in her own house, but should see that other powers do not fall out among themselves.

If it be taken into account that some slight influence has been exercised on the German Government by the Czar, and that trade and finance in Germany itself have been heavy losers by the Moroccan policy adopted in Berlin, there will be no difficulty in accounting for the more conciliatory disposition on the part of Germany, if, indeed, it really exists.

WHICH IS THE GHOST?

Asquith Declines to Say Whether It Is Balfour or Chamberlain.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—In consequence of the illness of both Arthur J. Balfour and Joseph Chamberlain, the latter being confined to his bed by an attack of influenza, Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith agreed in the House of Commons this afternoon to an adjournment of the fiscal debate fixed for to-morrow.

Mr. Asquith, amid shouts of laughter, remarked that the debate in their absence would be equivalent to a performance of "Hamlet" in the absence of not only the Prince of Denmark, but also of the Ghost.

The Chancellor said he would not presume to allocate the parts between the twain.

CASTELLANE CASE REACHED.

The court adjourned the case for a fortnight, when a date for the hearing will be fixed.

He was taken into custody because he refused to pay the storekeeper's tax on the ground that the Isle of Pines is not under Cuba's jurisdiction.

Prince Eitel in an Auto Accident.

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—There is very slight basis in fact for the report cabled to America that Prince Eitel and his bride had been injured in an automobile accident. The couple entered a motor car last night at a station near the Hubertusstock hunting lodge, where they are spending their honeymoon. A team of horses took fright and ran away, dashing the wagon against the motor and breaking a window of the latter vehicle. No one in the motor car was even bruised.

These, Dr. Ott declares, are malicious inventions, possibly traceable to political motives. He says King Edward was never in better health than at present.

Russia Decorates Consul Smith.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 28.—The Russian Government has conferred upon Thomas Smith, the American Vice-Consul at Moscow, the Order of St. Annec of the Second Degree in recognition of his services in looking after the Japanese prisoners at Medved during the recent war. The declaration is a delicate compliment for the success with which Mr. Smith, while representing the Japanese prisoners and investigating complaints on their behalf, performed his task.

HEARST MEN TO FORM NEW STATE MACHINE

Independence League to Direct His Boom for Governor.

SPEECH BY THE CANDIDATE

Against Corporation Rule in Politics—Two Democratic State Committeemen at His Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The Independence League, the latest of the Hearst organizations, is to be the medium of launching his boom for Governor. Many of its members who came up here yesterday to favor bills now in the Legislature remained over to-day, and there was a meeting in the Ten Eyck lasting nearly all day. Mr. Hearst made an address.

The league decided to perfect an organization in every Assembly District in the State, and to organize a State committee consisting of one member from every Assembly District in the State.

Among those who attended the conference were two Democratic State Committeemen, J. O. Bennett of the Chautauqua-Cattaraugus District and Ira M. Black of Judge Parker's former bailiwick. Mr. Hearst's address to the conference was in part as follows:

"The fundamental idea of the Independence League is independence of boss rule, independence of corporate control, and independence of any party subjected to boss rule and corporation control.

"It's immediate object is to wrest the Government from the hands of the powerful financial interests that now possess it and return it to the hands of the typical American citizens who created it, who have protected and supported it, and who should control it and conduct it.

"Corporations employing the immense aggregated capital of their stockholders manipulate the machinery of both parties, and nominate as the candidates of both parties their own supporters and even their own employes. As long as the corporations so control both parties the people have no choice, no refuge, no relief except through an independent movement.

"The Independence League does not quarrel with the original principles of the Democratic Party or the Republican Party, and were these parties true to their original principles there would be no reason for the existence of the league.

"I am a Democrat, but I cannot allow Belmont or Ryan or any representative of criminal corporations to define Democracy for me. I believe that patriotic citizens throughout this country are anxious to unite for self protection as corrupt and selfish interests have united for extension and oppression."

OUR GUNBOAT AT NAN-CHANG.

Another of the Mob's Victims Dead—China to Make Reparation.

LONDON, Thursday, March 1.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Shanghai says that an American gunboat (the Quiros, probably,) has arrived at Nan-Chang.

The correspondent adds that the Rev. H. C. Kingham's eldest daughter has died from the effects of the injuries inflicted upon her by the Chinese mob that killed her parents.

PEKING, Feb. 28.—The Government has instructed the Governor of Nan-Chang, Province of Kiang-Si, where on Feb. 25 six French Jesuit missionaries and four British subjects were killed, to punish severely all participants in the massacre, and declares its willingness to make without question any reasonable reparation demanded.

Many foreigners in Peking know the Governor of Nan-Chang, and consider him efficient and friendly. They believe his version of the troubles, and credit his statement that he was unable to prevent the disturbance.

American, British, and German gunboats are proceeding to the nearest possible point to Nan-Chang. River navigation is seldom safe beyond Poyang Lake. British and German gunboats have been stationed at the lake for the past two years despite frequent Chinese protests that it was an infringement of China's sovereignty.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 28.—The Nan-Chang Magistrate, the injury to whom was the reputed immediate cause of the attack by natives on Catholic and Protestant missionaries, is still alive, though his wounds are dangerous.

The native population of Nan-Chang is fleeing, dreading the arrival of armed forces from European and American gunboats. There have been many arrests.

The officials of Nan-Chang are urgently asking the Viceroy of the Province of Kiang-Si to go to Nan-Chang.

TURBINES IN BRITISH NAVY.

To be Adopted on New Vessels—Oil to be Largely Used.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The British naval estimates for 1906-07 propose a net total expenditure of $159,347,500, being $12,500,000 less than the estimates for the present financial year.

In his explanatory statement, the First Lord of the Admiralty says that in the present financial year, ending April 1, there will have been completed three battleships, eight armored cruisers, one second-class cruiser, eight scouts, sixteen torpedo-boat destroyers, and thirteen submarine boats. On April 1 there will be under construction six battleships, ten armored cruisers, twelve coastal destroyers, five ocean-going destroyers, including one which will be the fastest of its type; one royal yacht, and fifteen submarine boats.

It is proposed, the statement continues, to begin in the coming financial year four armored vessels, five ocean-going destroyers, twelve coastal destroyers, and twelve submarine boats. It is hoped that the battleship Dreadnaught will be commissioned at the beginning of 1907.

It has been decided to adopt turbines for all the vessels provided for during the present year. Oil will be largely used in the navy in future, experiments having proved that it is most successful. Installations are in progress in all new vessels, and appliances are being fitted in some old ones, such as the battleships Caesar, Majestic, Magnificent, and Victorious, while other vessels are being brought up to date.

The First Lord of the Admiralty remarks that the question of firing guns by dynamo power has been settled, and that wireless telegraphy has been extended.

The decrease in the estimates is caused by a saving in naval stores, dockyard wages, victualing, and clothing. Less will be spent for construction, but more for armor and guns.

It has been decided to reduce the marines by 1,500 men.

One of the largest makers of Gas Mantles has sold to us his complete overstock and odd lots, representing hundreds of kinds, and bearing a great many labels and brands.

While the Mantles are very similar in character, each store generally has its own labels placed on the boxes. A store may order 50 dozens of a kind, but 53 dozens may come through the work; so the maker has three dozens left on his hands.

This is the sort of stock we have for this sale—all told, very close to 10,000 Mantles.

Millinery Notes.

A flight of seventy-two pretty hats has alighted in our Millinery Parlors, straight across the ocean from Paris. They are exquisite hats—not especially because they are Paris hats, but because they are Paris hats of our own selection.

No better representation of the art of the Parisian milliners will be seen on this side of the Atlantic this season. They cannot be described, of course; you must see them.

Prices are $10, $15 and $18.50. They'd cost just about double those figures anywhere else.

A large force of carefully-picked milliners is hard at work adding to the showing of medium-priced Street Hats, with these Paris hats as models and inspiration. Although it is some weeks yet to the formal Spring Opening, the showing is already a profitable study in colors and styles, to say nothing of its teaching as to what are true millinery values.

Prices in this division begin at $5 and thousands of hard-to-please women will find it unnecessary to go higher.

Lingerie Blouses, New and Exquisite Ideas.

Here are four new styles in Lingerie Blouses, beautifully modeled and remarkably low priced.

They are too good to be passed by!

To be here this morning and to secure any one of these blouses means money saved and to have in your possession a garment that contains all the very latest innovations for Spring service.

Compare these values with those you are offered outside of "The Big Store." We'll "rest our case" with you.

At $2.95 Handsome Lingerie Models; of excellent quality batiste; in a variety of exquisite hand-embroidered, lace trimmed and tailored styles; regularly sold for $3.95.

At $1.95 A beautiful Model of Fine White Batiste; artistically designed with embroidered panel and lace; trimmed front and back; gauntlet cuffs and attached collar; lace trimmed; regularly sold for $2.95.

At $1.50 Your choice of Three Charming Lace-Trimmed and Embroidered Models of lingerie lawn and batiste; all recently designed and lace trimmed; exceptional values.

At $1.00 White Batiste Waists; a smart, strictly tailored model; entire front designed with one-half graduated side plaits; plaited back; attached collar; lace trimmed; shoulders and cuffs joined by beading; an extraordinary value.

Men's $3 Shoes At $1.90 a Pair.

3,000 pairs of straight $3 shoes at $1.90. Perfect shoes—not seconds or rejects.

Kidskin, calfskin and patent leather. Same styles as are being worn to-day by men who are fussy about their footwear and pay from $3.50 to $6 for their shoes. Everything in leather-quality, workmanship and wear that any man ever bought for $3. All sizes, in D and E widths.

And the Price Is $1.90 a Pair!

The offer marks most impressively the difference between talking about value-giving and giving values. These shoes come from a very prominent maker who disposed of a very large quantity several weeks ago at a very heavy sacrifice. He gave several of his customers a slice of the cake and the prices placed on the shoes by the other retailers have interested us.

They have been advertised as "bargains" at $2.75, $2.50 and $2.20. They are bargains at those figures, for they are standard $3 goods.

But our price is $1.00!

ROBBINS'S CONCESSION SPLITS COAL MEETING

He'll Advance Wages of 70,000 Miners Regardless of Others.

STEEL MEN'S PRESSURE FELT

Increase for Anthracite Fields Likely as Result—Soft Coal Operators Adjourn to March 19.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 28.—The representative bituminous operators of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois met here to-day to attempt a settlement of the wage question, and the meeting ended almost in a fight.

It is asserted to-night that F. L. Robbins, under hot fire, made the declaration that his concern, the Pittsburg Coal Company, would grant an advance to its men beginning April 1, no matter whether the others did or not. His concern proposed to lead, and the others might follow or balk, as they saw fit. This produced a bitter wrangle, as the Pittsburg company has 70,000 workmen on its rolls and two-score idle mines.

It was reported here to-night that President Roosevelt had requested John Mitchell and Mr. Robbins to call on him within the next two weeks, but the report could not be confirmed.

The meeting was called by Mr. Robbins as the result of a letter from President Roosevelt asking that another attempt be made to avert a strike in the bituminous fields. After six hours' wrangling a meeting was called for in Indianapolis on March 19, and further discussion was postponed until that time. A telegram was sent to President Roosevelt informing him that "progress" had been made.

The Coal Trade Bulletin, official organ of the operators, will say editorially to-morrow that all things point to an advance for the miners, that when this comes there will also come an advance in the price of coal to the consumer.

Ample confirmation was given of the story that the United States Steel Corporation and the Gould interests had ordered settlement at any cost. The operators from the West came angry clear through and not at all inclined to be pushed. Some of those who took part in the meeting were Mr. Robbins, J. H. Jones, and George A. Magoon, representing Pennsylvania; J. H. Winder, H. L. Chapman, F. L. Osborn, and T. E. Young, Ohio; J. C. Coulson, A. M. Ogle, J. K. Seifert, Hugh Shirkie, and J. Smith Talley, Indiana; H. N. Taylor, Col. O. L. Garrison, and D. M. Bush, Illinois.

The Ohio and Indiana interests lined up to a man against the proposition to meet the miners, and the independent operators of the Pittsburg district, as well as half those of the Illinois district, joined with them. Opposed were half the operators of Illinois and the strong Pittsburg Coal Company interests.

The foreign element employed in the coal mines has manifested some anxiety over the threatened coal strike, and one of the results was the departure to-day of a party of 110 for their homes in Austria, Slavonia, and Croatia. The party was made up from McKeesport, Monongahela City, and Brownsville.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—The stand against a strike taken by President Corey of the Steel Corporation was made known to President Baer of the Reading Railway to-day. He immediately went to the office of President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania, and the two held an hour's conference.

Mr. Baer, accompanied by President Williams of the Pennsylvania Coal Company, left immediately afterward for New York. Mr. Williams is a member of the operators' sub-committee, of which Mr. Baer is Chairman. The primary object was to confer with the other members of the sub-committee.

It was predicted by well-informed coal men that the operators would make concessions to Mitchell and his committee. The intervention of President Roosevelt was received with much unpleasant comment, but the attitude of the industrial interests was unexpected, and has made a decided change in the situation.

Unlike the situation three years ago every manufacturing corporation has its books filled with orders, and a suspension because of a coal strike would prove disastrous. The manufacturers have joined the Steel Corporation in demanding that the operators make concessions.

E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, issued the following statement yesterday:

"The management of this corporation is always in favor of harmonious relations between employes and employers. It is not in a position to dictate terms concerning the pending questions between the bituminous coal miners and the operators, and has not assumed to do so.

"It would be unfortunate for both if the differences shall not be promptly and satisfactorily adjusted.

"The basis, of course, must depend upon the merits of the questions raised by the respective parties."

While not attempting to dictate the settlement of the question under discussion between the operators and the miners, it is admitted that the United States Steel Corporation is exerting its influence to bring about a peaceful settlement. The United States Steel Corporation is the largest consumer of bituminous coal in the country. It purchases from the Pittsburg Coal Company under a twenty-five-year contract about 5,000,000 tons a year.

President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers said yesterday that the proposition of the anthracite mine workers had been mailed on Tuesday night to President Baer of the Reading.

TROUBLE AT COLLIERIES.

Pennsylvania Road Orders Full Time on Saturdays—Agitators Discharged.

SHAMOKIN, Penn., Feb. 28.—At the collieries controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company notices were posted to-day announcing that hereafter until further notice all collieries would be worked full time on Saturdays. Heretofore the mines closed at noon Saturdays. Many of the workmen threaten to go on strike if the order is enforced.

JEANNETTE, Penn., Feb. 28.—Thirty-five miners were discharged to-day from the Westmoreland Coal Company of Pennsylvania. The action is said to be due to the men having formed a miners' union about thirty days ago. A strike is predicted for to-morrow.

50 YEARS WITH ONE BANK.

Richard L. Purdy of the Bank of Savings Gets a Loving Cup.

A loving cup was presented yesterday to Richard L. Purdy, accountant for and an employe for fifty years of the Bank for Savings at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-second Street, by his associates at the close of business. James Knowles, controller of the bank, made the presentation.

Mr. Purdy entered the employ of the bank when it was in Chambers Street in 1856.

Increase in Internal Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The monthly statement of the collections of internal revenue shows that the total receipts for January, 1906, were $19,751,095, an increase as compared with January, 1905, of $2,370,738. For the seven months of the present fiscal year the receipts exceeded those for the corresponding period last year by $8,834,586.

PROBE WATER METER GRAFT.

Aldermen Ask Ellison for Statistics of the Water Register's Office.

The Board of Aldermen adopted a resolution yesterday calling on the Department of Water Supply for statistics covering all the details of the transactions of the Water Register's Bureau during the last four years. At the same time Commissioner Ellison publicly called on Robert A. Kelly, who was Water Register under Mayor Low, to lay before the Commissioner facts which Kelly says he has in his possession regarding the past operations of the bureau.

The Aldermanic resolution was offered by Alderman Gunther and was unanimously adopted. The resolution called on Commissioner Ellison for information as to the number of water meters installed and removed during the years 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905, together with the reasons for installation and removal in each case. It also called for detailed information as to the class of buildings covered in the different cases, and for notitces sent out ordering installation, and the number of such notices afterward recalled.

It is in the sending of notices and the subsequent recalls that the chief graft in the bureau is said to have existed. The board also wants to know who ordered the various recalls of notices and the reasons for the action in each case.

Furthermore, it is asked how the Water Register informs himself of the construction of new buildings so as to determine whether or not such new buildings should be metered.

As at first offered the resolution asked for the date during the years—1904 and 1905 only, but Alderman Sullivan suggested that the years of the Low administration also be included.

Alderman Dowling offered a resolution, which also was adopted, authorizing the department to enter into a contract for testing electric meters. Commissioner Ellison, in his letter to ex-Register Kelly, said:

"I notice in one of this morning's papers an expression of a willingness on your part to appear before me and give facts relating to the conduct of the Water Register's Bureau in this department, and I now write you to say that I will be very glad to receive at your convenience the information to which you refer."

JAMES WAKELY INDICTED.

Sportsman Is Said to Have Kept a Poolroom Over His Saloon.

The Grand Jury indicted James Wakely yesterday on the charge of keeping a poolroom above his saloon at Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street. Wakely was in General Sessions with his lawyer, Daniel J. O'Reilly, and Peter De Lacy when the indictment was brought in.

Judge McMahon fixed the bail at $1,000. De Lacy furnished the bond. The indictment grew out of a raid on his place made Dec. 13 last by Roundsman Costigan of the defunct vice squad. Evidence had been obtained by Policeman Reynolds, who got into the place and put down some bets there.

Among interesting material collected by the police in the raid were the by-laws of the Micawber Club, an organization for "the improvement of the members in the art of oratory, composition, and debate, and the fostering and application of the English language." "Markers" with the names of many well known actors were found in the place, as well as many checks signed by George W. Weeks, the alleged manager of the place, and indorsed by J. Park Robinson, a bookmaker, and George L. Branch, an alleged employe of Wakely.

An indictment is understood to have been returned against Weeks, too, and he will be arraigned to-day. It was said yesterday that the case against Wakely is very complete.

THREE CONFESS TO SWINDLE.

Admit Norfolk and Western Stock Forgery—Not So Col. Colmey.

Three of the men indicted in connection with the attempt to float 500 forged certificates of the Norfolk & Western pleaded guilty to forgery in the first degree before Recorder Goff in General Sessions yesterday. They were Charles Augustus Seton, the broker who has already been convicted of swindling the promoters of the Galveston & Houston Railway out of $6,800; Samuel J. Humphries, a reporter employed by Seton to write one of the forged names on the certificates, and Douglas E. Smith, a deaf man, who was similarly used by Seton to add a fictitious endorser's name to the bonds.

The fourth man indicted for the same crime, the neat and gallant "Col." T. C. P. Colmey, alias "Kid" Murray, refused indignantly to plead guilty when brought to the bar. He demanded to know of Assistant District Attorney Garvan if "he was expected to perjure himself into a confession of guilt of something he had never done." He will probably be tried, although he has furnished much of the evidence that forced Seton into confession, and although he was only a few days ago sentenced to four years and a half in State prison for selling a worthless railroad bond to a New York contractor.

The prisoners were to have been sentenced yesterday, but were remanded for a month at the request of the Recorder, who declared himself unwilling to pronounce sentence until he could do so upon every member of the gang at once.

PARK BILL NOT THEIRS.

Gas Company Disowns Measure for Acquiring West Side Property.

Emphatic denial was made yesterday by the Consolidated Gas Company that it had any interest in Assembly bill No. 224, introduced by Assemblyman Hackett, whereby it is sought to acquire property on the West Side for park purposes. If the bill is intended to have the city take possession of properties occupied by gas plants of the Consolidated Company, the Consolidated Company will strenuously oppose the passage of Assemblyman Hackett's measure.

Lewis B. Gawtry, Vice President of the Consolidated Gas Company, said:

"The first intimation this company had that any such bill had been introduced in the Assembly was gleaned from this morning's newspapers. At various times during the last few years efforts have been made before the local boards of improvement on the west side to take possession of property owned by private individuals and corporations for the purpose of establishing a park. The Consolidated Gas Company has been represented at those various hearings, and always opposed any proposal of the city to take this company's property.

"The Consolidated Gas Company's plants in the neighborhood of Eleventh and Twelfth Avenues and Forty-first, Forty-second, and Forty-third Streets are very important for the proper distribution of gas, and the company has no idea of relinquishing its ownership at this or any other time."

SUPT. MAXWELL DEFENDS FADS IN THE SCHOOLS

Offers Proof That 1905 Pupils Beat Those of Sixty Years Ago.

PEOPLE FAVOR NEW IDEAS

Annual Report Says Part-Time Classes Will Soon Be Ended—Wants Police Census of Pupils.

City Supt. Maxwell submitted his annual report to the Board of Education yesterday. In it he recommends that a school house site be purchased for every square half mile of those portions of the city which are still "farm land"; that the Police Department be required by law to register every child in the city for the better enforcement of the compulsory education and child labor laws; that the Board of Education establish special schools for the deaf and dumb, the blind, and for crippled children; that the two evening trade schools be made more efficient and a complete system of trade "continuation" schools be established, and that self-government be introduced in the upper half of the elementary schools and in the high schools.

Aside from these specific recommendations, the most interesting features of the report are Supt. Maxwell's discussion of the part-time problem and his defense of the much-assailed so-called fads and frills system.

The pupils on part time, all schools, on June 30 in each year since 1902 are given as: 1902, 35,347; 1903, 56,071; 1904, 66,925; 1905, 55,292. Supt. Maxwell says if school building operations are continued at the present rate part-time classes will disappear in four years.

Of the so-called fads and frills the report says:

> The past year has seen a most persistent attack on the teaching of special branches—singing, manual training, sewing, and cooking—by those in charge of the finance department of the city. That their attack on these subjects is not supported either by the people of this city or by the educators of the country is conclusively established by two things—the first, a popular vote of the people which showed them to be overwhelmingly in favor of such teaching; the second, the declaration of policy by the National Education Association.
>
> The opponents of modern educational methods who would abandon the present rich courses of study and return to the barren instruction of sixty years ago, which was limited to the so-called "Three R's," have for a long time been deploring the alleged fact that children to-day do not spell and cipher as well as did pupils of half a century ago. To-day it is the singular good fortune of those who believe that education has become more valuable, to be able at last to offer facts which establish the truth that children in the eighth year of New York City's elementary schools are better in spelling and arithmetic than were much older pupils in the high schools of sixty years ago.
>
> Dr. Thomas M. Balliet, while Superintendent of Schools in Springfield, Mass., discovered in the archives a volume of examination papers in spelling and arithmetic written by eighty-five pupils in the Springfield High School in 1846. With these papers were the original questions. Mr. Riley, the present Principal of Elm Street school, last March gave these questions to 245 pupils in the ninth year of the present elementary schools. The results of this test were as follows:
>
> | | 1846. | 1905. |
> |---|---|---|
> | Number of pupils, Springfield...... | 85 | 245 |
> | Spelling, per cent. correct.......... | 40.6 | 51.2 |
> | Arithmetic, per cent. correct......... | 29.4 | 65.5 |

The need of a plan for selecting schoolhouse sites, which is the first recommendation, is occasioned by the necessity of getting rid of part-time classes and of limiting the classes to forty pupils. Supt. Maxwell's plan is outlined as follows:

> In all farming neighborhoods within the city sites should be selected and purchased at once on some carefully prepared plan. Possibly these districts should be platted into sections half a mile square. A school site should then be secured at or near the centre of each plat. The proximity or advent of electric or steam railroads—population always follows rapid transit facilities—should then determine the order in which these sites should be built upon. Population would be attracted away from the congested sections, (population invariably clustering round a schoolhouse;) the taxable value of what is now rated as farm land would be vastly increased; provision would be made in advance of the settlement of population; no child would be required to walk more than half a mile to school, and all children would be accommodated.

The board received from the Finance Committee a proposal for reforming the board's present system of keeping its accounts. The plan was referred back to the Finance Committee for further consideration. The new plan is designed to meet the criticisms of the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor.

The Board adopted the amendment to the by-laws providing that a teacher who is absent for five days shall receive refunds according to a sliding scale, which, in all, amounts to two and a half days' pay for the five days' absence. For the fifth to the twentieth day full pay will be given. From the twentieth to the ninety-fifth, half pay will be given.

Chairman Harrison of the By-Laws Committee submitted a resolution providing that all the special committees appointed prior to Feb. 5 be discontinued, except the Committees on Educational, Museum, Examinations, and Central Supply and Depositary, each of which shall have five members. It was voted to retain the present personnel of the Museum and Examinations Committees.

T. H. McInnerney Goes to Rochester.

Thomas H. McInnerney, manager for the Siegel Cooper Company, has severed his connection with that store, to engage in the management of a new department store in Rochester. He will have associated with him Walter B. Duffy, Eugene H. Satterlee, President of the National Bank of Rochester; Arthur G. Yates, President of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad, and Craig Powers, all of Rochester. The new concern is now building a seven-story building at Main and Fitzhugh Streets. Mr. McInnerney has been associated with the Siegel Cooper Company since its opening in New York.

SAY DEPOSITS ASSURE THE TRACTION MERGER

Advocates of the Plan Pleased with Large Deposits.

MANY MORE TO COME TO-DAY

Counsel Must Decide, It Is Said, Whether the Metropolitan's Dividend Must Be Maintained.

Deposits of stock of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and the Metropolitan Securities Company were received in large amounts yesterday by the Morton Trust Company, the depository under the plan for the merger of these companies in the Interborough-Metropolitan Company. It was asserted that the deposits of stock already received and those which are assured for to-day, the last day for deposit of the stock, leave no doubt that the merger plan will become effective. The plan requires that two-thirds of the Interborough Rapid Transit stock, two-thirds of the Metropolitan Street Railway, and one-half of the Metropolitan securities be deposited.

Special arrangements were made yesterday by the Morton Trust Company to expedite the issuance of certificates of deposit for the several stocks. As a result certificates were issued yesterday for all of the stock deposited. The certificates are fully negotiable. It is proposed to apply to-day to the New York Stock Exchange to list these certificates in the unlisted department of the Exchange, so that trading in them may be facilitated.

None of those officially connected with the merger of the traction companies in Manhattan and the Bronx would say anything yesterday for publication in regard to the actual amount of stock deposited. It has been asserted all along that a very large part of the stock would be held out until the last day of deposit, so that not until this afternoon will it be possible to estimate the percentage of the several stocks which will be withheld from the merger.

Efforts made yesterday to get further information from a member of the Smithers committee in regard to the position of the minority interests in the Metropolitan Street Railway Company were fruitless. The question put to a member of the committee whether the Metropolitan Securities Company to the full extent of all its resources, including the $7,500,000 which may still be called on the company's stock, will be still obligated, even though the merger be effected, to maintain the 7 per cent. dividend on Metropolitan Street Railway Company stock, led to the suggestion that inquiry on the subject be made of Paul D. Cravath of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, counsel for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

This inquiry was brought to Mr. Cravath's attention through his secretary, but the only reply given by Mr. Cravath was that he had no statement to make.

A member of the Smithers committee admitted that the question was a grave one for the minority stockholders, but he expressed the opinion that after all the guarantee could not be regarded in the ordinary sense of a guarantee. He said that the whole thing, so to speak, was "in the family" and very much like taking money out of one pocket and putting it into another. In other words, he said, there was grave doubt if the Metropolitan Securities Company could be held for the payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on Metropolitan Street Railway stock. He said that this was a legal question which the committee did not feel itself called upon to decide.

CHANGE IN COLORADO FUEL?

Gould Said to be Ready to Sell It to the Steel Trust.

A story reached the newspapers in this city last night, too late for confirmation by any of the important interests involved, to the effect that George J. Gould has practically decided to relinquish his control of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company to the United States Steel Corporation. In consideration of this, it was said, the Steel Trust and the Great Northern Road would give the Goulds' Wabash and Pittsburg extension lines traffic between the ore properties of the Great Northern and Pittsburg. That means that ore shipments would be made over the Great Northern, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and Wabash roads into Pittsburg.

Control of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company is now said to be held by J. P. Morgan & Co. pending the consummation of the deal, which is expected, according to the story, to be made within the next week or two. The Rockefeller-Gould interests assumed control of the fuel company in 1903. The Rockefellers, however, have disposed of a good part of their holdings. It is said that if it had not been for the objection of George Gould in the past the control of the Colorado Fuel property would have long since passed into the hands of the Steel Corporation, as John D. Rockefeller has always been thought to be in favor of turning over the Colorado concern to the Steel Corporation.

SAY HE KILLED AT PRAYER.

Physician Accused of Poisoning Wife While Feigning Devotion.

GREENSBOROUGH, N. C., Feb. 28.—Dr. J. B. Matthews was placed on trial to-day on the charge of having caused his wife's death last December by injecting strychnine into her veins while feigning prayer at her bedside. Three physicians were in the room at the time. One of them was the county Coroner, who swore out the warrant.

Dr. Turner made an analysis of the liquid in the syringe, and declared it to be strychnine, and on this basis the indictment against Matthews was returned. To-day it was learned that a chemist at the University of North Carolina made a test of the liquid at Dr. Turner's request and declared it to be morphine.

A jury was selected to-day and the examination of witnesses will begin to-morrow.

AGAINST $2 COINS.

Secretary Shaw Says the Jamestown Exposition Plan Is Deception.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—When Secretary Shaw of the Treasury Department appeared to-day before the House Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions he expressed his emphatic disapproval of the bill for the coinage of 1,000,000 two dollar silver pieces, upon which the Jamestown Exposition Company desires to realize $300,000 profit. He said this means of raising money is deception, that it would be the sowing of dragon's teeth. He said we have enough different kinds of money and should have no new coins.

"If fiat can be sent out in silver and called profit, a greater per cent. of fiat can be sent out in paper money," said Secretary Shaw. "The principle is the same. It is wrong."

MORE ECONOMY FOR ARMY.

Extra Clerks Not Allowed by House—Williams Sarcastic.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The House took up the Military Appropriation bill to-day with a point of order pending against provisions for the employment of 306 clerks, messengers, and laborers, and one gardener. The point was that each of the items going to make this total was an increase in some degree if not entirely in the number of employes now authorized by law. It was raised by Chairman Tawney of the Committee on Appropriations.

John Sharp Williams, the Democratic leader, made a sarcastic speech in favor of keeping the item in.

"It is a good thing for the country to know," he said, "that the decrease in the army does not bring with it a decrease in the army expenditure. That our army, with about 57,000 men, now must have its clerical force increased over what it was when we had 100,000 men is a good thing to rest in the mind of the country.

"Here is a gardener provided for at $720 a year. I don't know just what the clerical duties of a gardener are, but I am told he is for the War College, which has already cost a million and has seven students. I think we could get along with some less expensive provision for this War College, where it costs $35,000 to take care of one student a year."

When the point was sustained and the items ruled out of the bill, Mr. Hull moved to strike out the total appropriation carried in the paragraph. This was done, with the result that no provision was made for any clerks for the Chief of Staff. Of course the Senate is relied on to give the money and probably put in the increase thus defeated.

JAPAN'S COPYRIGHT TREATY.

Senate Ratifies Convention to Protect Literary and Art Works.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Senate in executive session to-day ratified and made public a treaty between the United States and Japan relating to copyrights, negotiated by Minister Griscom and Minister of State Katsura, on Nov. 10, 1905.

It provides that the citizens of each country shall enjoy in the dominions of the other the possession of copyright for their works of literature and art as well as photographs, and shall enjoy protection against illegal reproduction, on the same basis on which possession is granted to the subjects or citizens of the other.

The subjects or citizens of each country may without authorization translate books, pamphlets, or any other writings, dramatic works, and musical compositions, published in the dominions of the other by the subjects or citizens of the latter, and print and publish such translations.

GROSVENOR'S STATEMENT.

Unmoved by Jollification of His Enemies—Won't Be a Consul.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Congressman Grosvenor of Ohio, in a statement to-day, declared that the subject of his defeat for re-nomination had never been discussed with the President, and that he would not accept any consular appointment within the present gift of the President of the United States. Mr. Grosvenor says:

"I do not believe it is necessary at this time for me to make any statement in regard to my support or non-support of any candidate for Congress in the Eleventh district of Ohio.

"I am content at present to serve out my term as Congressman, and neither will I consent to be annoyed by the jollification of my enemies, nor do I seek the expression of sympathy from my friends, though the same is highly appreciated."

Church Burned in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 28.—St. Lawrence's Roman Catholic Church, a large brick structure of recent construction, at Atlantic Avenue and Dauphin Street, East End, was destroyed by fire to-day. An overheated stove set it ablaze.

STANDARD OIL DICTATION IN STEEL TRUST DENIED

Rockefeller Power There Small, Says Official Statement.

MORE ORE DEAL RUMORS

H. C. Frick and E. H. Gary, Not H. H. Rogers, 'Tis Said, Are Arranging Lease of Ore Lands.

The anonymous statement, which was said, however, to be official, was published in Wall Street yesterday in regard to the status of the negotiations between the Steel Corporation and the Great Northern Railway for a lease of the latter's ore lands and concerning the interest of the Rockefellers and their associates in the United States Steel Corporation.

In reference to the report that a hitch in the Hill ore negotiations had been brought about by the Standard Oil element in the United States Steel Corporation, a high official of the corporation says there is no foundation for the statement.

The books of the United States Steel Corporation show that the holdings of the Rockefeller interests are small comparatively, and have not been increased in several years. H. H. Rogers has at no time attempted to dictate the policy of the Steel Corporation.

The negotiations for control of the Hill ore lands have been left practically in the hands of H. C. Frick and Judge E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the corporation. There is nothing to indicate a hitch, and negotiations are progressing as heretofore.

The Iron Trade Review of Cleveland gives in its issue of to-day what purports to be an outline of the terms of the proposed lease of the Great Northern's ore lands to the United States Steel Corporation. The Iron Trade Review says:

"It is estimated that the Hill interests have ore deposits amounting to 300,000,000 tons, which delivered at Lake Erie ports would be worth $1,125,000,000. The terms of the contract provide that the steel corporation shall take a lease on these properties for thirty years, and shall pay for the first two years 70 cents per ton for the ore mined and 80 cents for the carrying of the ore from the mines to Duluth on Mr. Hill's Great Northern Railroad.

"It is further provided that after two years the price for ore in the ground shall be increased 5 cents every two years until at the end of twelve years the price shall be $1, and stay at that figure for the remaining eighteen years of the period.

"Another important provision is that the Great Northern Railroad shall be guaranteed freight amounting to 10,000,000 tons annually during the life of the lease. If mines other than those in the deal furnish the amount, the steel corporation will not be required to furnish any, but it must supply whatever is lacking of the stipulated tonnage."

For the time being, however, the whole matter of the lease is in abeyance. Differences of opinion are reliably reported to have arisen between the parties to the transaction, and so far these have not been settled.

ARRESTED THE WRONG TWIN.

Comedy of Errors Ends with Accused Man's Double Being Freed.

George Wagner of 792 Columbus Avenue bears a remarkably close resemblance to his twin brother Charles. After the last election Charles was indicted and arrested for illegal voting. Held in $2,000 bail, he got Benjamin Thompson, a coal dealer, to go on his bond. When his case was called he could not be found. A bench warrant for him was issued.

A policeman arrested George and put him in the Tombs two days ago. When George asserted his innocence the police and keepers and everybody else who heard him laughed. Yesterday George was brought before Judge McMahon in General Sessions to be tried. William A. Sweetser, the lawyer in the case, looked long at George with a puzzled expression. Then the turned to the court.

"Why, Your Honor, I don't think this is my client. He looks very much like him, but really I don't think it is he."

The bondsman (Thompson) was sent for, and he said the wrong twin had been arrested. George was set free with many apologies and a new bench warrant was issued for the missing Charles.

GUILTY OF SWINDLING FELIX.

But Tracey's Case Will Be Made a Test of the Law.

Christopher J. Tracey was found guilty in General Sessions yesterday of swindling John A. Felix, a music importer, out of $50,000 by "wire tapping." Judge Foster granted a stay of judgment at once to permit an appeal.

James W. Osborne put in no evidence for the defense. He said that under an old law it is impossible to convict anybody on the evidence of an accomplice who had entered into a contract to beat the poolrooms on the races. Mr. Train said that the District Attorney was desirous also to have the case tested, and that preparations would be made immediately to have the case carried to appeal.

TREASURY SHOWS SURPLUS.

Deficit in Receipts for Almost Two Years Is Wiped Out.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—For the first time since May 1, 1904, when the Government made its payment of $50,000,000 for the Panama Canal property and loaned $4,600,000 to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company, the daily Treasury statement issued to-day shows a surplus of receipts over expenditures for the fiscal year.

The surplus to-day amounts to $1,102,003. The Treasury officials say it is a remarkably fine showing, especially in view of the fact that the expenditures since July 1, on account of public works, exceed those for the corresponding period last year by nearly $12,000,000. A large part of this sum was paid out for Panama Canal construction.

SHORT-STOP BILLIARDS.

"Tom" Gallagher and Taylor Winners in Knickerbocker Tourney.

Thomas Gallagher and Albert Taylor of Chicago were the winners in the short-stop billiard tournament yesterday at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy, playing the 18.2 game. Gallagher met Albert Cutler of Boston in the afternoon and won out by a score of 400 to 386 in a closely contested game in which neither had any decided advantage at any stage and in which Gallagher was more often in the lead. Gallagher's best run was 67, while he added 48 and 44 in two other good innings, and averaged 11 4-36 in the game. Cutler's best efforts were 46, 42, and 39, and his average 11 1-35.

In the evening game Taylor played Harry Cline of Philadelphia. Taylor was in the better form and had the advantage almost from the start. The ivories broke badly for Cline and he could not seem to get them to run for him, although he did roll up a 53 in one inning. His best efforts outside of this were 28 and 27. He amassed 310 to Taylor's 400 and averaged 11 24-26 against Taylor's 14 22-27. Taylor's best inning was 52, while on two other occasions he ran 49.

PLAY OFF HOCKEY TIE.

Crescents and N. Y. A. C. Will Meet at Clermont Rink, March 6.

The final game for the championship of the Amateur Hockey League will be played at the Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, on March 6. In the series, which closed on Tuesday night, the New York Athletic Club and Crescent Athletic Club tied with four games won and two lost, which necessitated an extra game. A meeting of the Executive Committee of the league was held yesterday to determine the time and place for the deciding game. The names of Clermont Avenue and St. Nicholas Rinks were placed in a hat and the former was drawn.

The contest this season proved the most exciting in the history of the league. The Crescents, the title holders, began in poor form, owing to lack of practice, and lost two games, being defeated by the St. Nicholas Skating Club and the New York Athletic Club. As the season advanced the Brooklyn team took a big brace and a triple tie appeared likely. The unexpected defeat of St. Nicholas by the Hockey Club of New York put the former out of the running, and enabled the New York Athletic Club to tie the Crescents.

The final standing of the clubs in the regular championship series follows:

	W.	L.	P.C.		W.	L.	P.C.
N. Y. A. C.	4	2	.667	St. Nicholas	3	3	.500
Crescent	4	2	.667	H. C. of N. Y.	1	5	.167

Equestrian Basket Ball at Durland's.

A basket ball match on horseback was the most spirited feature last night in the equestrian sports that followed the music ride at the Durland Riding Academy, West Sixty-sixth Street, near Central Park West. Three men were on each team, and the contest possessed novelty and excitement. At the close of the first period the score was a tie, each side having scored one goal, John Curran scoring for the Durland first team, and Archie Kinney for the second team. The second period was hotly contested, but J. Tynan got the winning goal just before the call of time, giving the victory to the first team. The players on the winning team were William Wettach, John Curran, and J. Tynan. On the second team were J. O'Brien, Marshall Clapp, and Archie Kinney.

A potato race closed the sports. Half a dozen of the best riders competed, but the prize was won by Archie Kinney, J. O'Brien was second, and Marshall Clapp got third. Nearly fifty couples took part in the music ride.

Groll Won Pool Tournament Game.

W. Groll, handicapped at 125, defeated C. Johnson, 100, in a well-contested game of pool last night in the tournament now being played at the Broadway Academy. The score was 125 to 92. Groll's high run was 22 and he had two scratches. Johnson's best contribution was 18 and he had three scratches charged against him. To-night the principals will be C. Jackson, who is handicapped at 90, and Phil Daly, who will have 85 to make.

Crescent A. C. Wants Open Regatta.

The Crescent Athletic Club determined yesterday to make application to-day to the Gravesend Bay Yacht Racing Association for a date in June for an open regatta for all classes of boats instead of limiting the race simply to the contest for the O'Donohue Cup for thirty-footers. The Gravesend Bay officials have promised to accede to the request, and a Saturday regatta will be held.

Over a hundred boats have already been enrolled in the club's fleet, and it is expected that there will be nearly double that number when the enrollment is completed.

Yachts and Yachtsmen.

The yawl Vigilant, recently purchased by William E. Iselin, is overhauling at New London.

Eugene Higgins is cruising in the steam yacht Varuna in the Mediterranean.

The new 240-foot steam yacht building at Leith, Scotland, for A. Mortimer Singer of New York has been launched.

Racing sails have been ordered by J. Beres King for the bronze sloop Neola and by Harry F. Lippitt for her twin, Weetamoe, insuring these two sixty-footers meeting this year. F. F. Brewster has ordered new sails for Elmina and Arthur F. Luke a new suit for Corona.

H. A. C. Taylor is cruising in the West Indies in his steam yacht Wanderer. Arthur T. Kemp, in John W. Gates's steamer Roxina, which he has chartered; D. P. McQueen, in his steamer Rowena, and R. M. Rundall, in the steamer Sea Urchin, are also cruising in Southern waters.

Invitations have been extended by the Atlantic Yacht Club to the Seawanhaka-Corinthians and the Philadelphia Corinthians to hold a joint cruise this year. The project will likely be carried through, and an exceptionally successful trip will be arranged, ending in an ocean race.

Chairman Theodore D. Wells of the Atlantic Yacht Club Regatta Committee has had $4,500 placed in his hands for prizes for the coming racing season and expects to arrange an especially elaborate series of contests.

Besides C. L. Tutt's Anemone, which is en route to San Francisco and was recently reported in the Straits of Magellan, C. A. Macfarlane's schooner La Paloma and ex-Commodore Hebron's yawl Gladys have entered the Pacific race from San Francisco to Honolulu.

ROAD DRIVERS' MEETING.

Arrangements Perfected for Spring and Fall Matinee Brushes.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Road Drivers' Association was held last night at the Hotel Cadillac, when several important measures relating to the Speedway parade and matinee racing were adopted. It was decided to hold ten matinee races, four in the Spring and six in the Fall. At the previous meeting of the committee a motion was passed making it necessary for a horse to compete in at least six of the ten races to be eligible to win a cup. This motion was reconsidered and the number was reduced to five to make a horse eligible, with the provision that a horse must start at least twice in the Spring and three times in the Fall. This action was taken to prevent a member from purchasing a fast horse in the Summer and racing it in the Fall only, which would seriously affect the entries of the regular matinee drivers.

The Secretary was instructed to request the donors of cups to arrange for the delivery of the same before May 1 for the purpose of a public exhibition. Another cup was offered last night, which was accepted, making eleven to be competed for. The arrangements for the annual Speedway parade and horse show were placed in the hands of the Executive Committee as a whole, instead of a special committee. The official announcement will be made in a few days.

INSURANCE REFORM.

A weary public faces the prospect of insurance agitation until Nov. 15. Among the possibilities is persistence of the agitation until the companies are embarrassed or worse, through animosities and struggles between financial and political combatants for reasons having nothing to do with insurance abuses or reforms. This indeed would be a natural ending to a matter which was begun in that way. It would be incorrect to say that this agitation, which has come to concern interests even larger than those of the millions of policy holders, either was begun or is continued through primary regard for insurance interests. Neither is malicious or furtive intent nor act what most needs remedy. Huge solvent businesses are not built up by wreckers or thieves, who keep accounts, and turn over assets which have been reckoned as to number, and tested as to quality, times enough to convince even the most suspicious. Appeal is made to history for confirmation of the statement that the trouble arose from men of exceptional qualities and personal success dealing with the companies as with their own property, and seeking to benefit themselves—and the companies as well—by methods which were as wrong regarding the companies as they were successful. This is not in the slightest degree palliation. It is merely diagnosis of the root of the trouble to see what is the physic upon which all might agree in an attempt to remedy the most pressing evils before greater supervene. It may be necessary to roast the pig. It is not necessary to burn down the house.

To use the words of the committee, "it is of the first importance that officers should realize their direct responsibility to those whom they represent," and "the most fertile source of evils in administration has been irresponsibility of official power." If this is the first and greatest evil, it is the one which should be most promptly attacked, leaving the others to be dealt with at leisure. Not one single remedy should be overlooked or slighted, but it is common prudence in planning a task to use discretion regarding times and methods. If laws are to be proposed by the ream there is danger that those which are most urgent will be obscured or lost in the shuffle. Taking first that which the committee rightly places first, it is hard to believe that anybody can dissent from the object—viz., to place in control, or, at least, to give the option of placing in control, new men of character rather than genius or wealth. The demand is for sober methods, marked by probity and common sense. No great financial talent or even peculiar insurance experience is needed especially. Technicalities may be left to technicians. Experts can be consulted regarding obscurities in a business which is simple in principle, however obscure in processes. Just plain honesty, quickened by responsibility is all that is needed instantly to reassure a bewildered and anxious community.

The case is not unlike that presented by tariff agitation. It matters less what the tariff is than that it should be quickly settled. The committee postpones action for six months. If it can be done at all it might better be done sooner. It is a special case, and the Legislature might provide exceptional methods, following the committee's advice in all except delay. One month is better than six, if it can be managed. A permanent reform in this respect would require more deliberation. Access to the courts, the committee's second recommendation, also might be regarded as universally approved. Wrongs might be stayed and rights enforced even more promptly judicially than through the Legislature, for there are possibilities of opposition and distraction which make the end of the large programme uncertain. Besides it is an injustice to the individual to make him await universal remedy if one to fit his case already exists, but is arbitrarily made unavailable.

These two leading recommendations cannot divide opinion. The same may be said regarding the recommendations for the restriction of political contributions and lobbying. It is true that practical restrictions have already been effected, but they are temporary, and should be made forthwith formal and permanent. The recommendation for publicity and supervision invites the same remark. It is unnecessary to enter into argument regarding the more contentious proposals for the regulation of investments. The committee itself allows five years for that, sufficiently indicating that this matter is not urgent. The remaining recommendations fall into the same class. Organization of companies, retirement of stock, and a new scale of penalties are important rather than pressing. Already one leading company has been reorganized, and another has a meeting approaching at which action may be taken in anticipation of the formulation of a general statute, which would be all the better for maturity of consideration. One of the committee's bills is sixty-four pages long. Such legislation requires deliberation. No opposition is here expressed to any of the committee's recommendations. The idea only is to suggest by elimination those matters upon which there can be no dissent from early and thorough action in the interest of the entire community. All suggestions beyond that serve only to divide attention, to offer points of controversy, to darken counsel, and to delay action.

ORGANIZING DISASTER.

Yesterday the security market collapsed simultaneously with the disappearance of the Treasury deficit. Nothing could be both more logical and illogical. The disappearance of the Treasury deficit reflects such prosperity in the foreign trade as all signs prove to exist in domestic trade. The Treasury's large collections—there being an excess of receipts over expenditures of $1,385,000 yesterday—reflect liberal collections upon imports and ample internal revenue. There are four months of the fiscal year still to run, and already there is a surplus instead of an estimated deficit for the year of $8,000,000.

Bank loans are increasing, not to pay dividends with borrowed cash, nor to support a speculative craze, for there is none. At least and certainly there is less wildness in the security market than in that for commodities and real estate. Bank clearings are shrinking, showing a normal reduction of Winter activity in the season preceding the planting season and the Spring trade. Production is at top notch, and consumption is best proved by the rate of distribution, reflected in railway traffic beyond every precedent, both in volume and profit to carriers. For December—the latest month for which net is available—the gain was 19.78 per cent., against a gain of only 12.29 per cent. in gross. In fact, there is such a congestion of prosperity that there is not money enough to serve both as bank reserves and pocket and till money, and the Stock Exchange is disturbed by the Treasury's absorption of cash.

If trade were dull and profits shrinking, such a situation would give greater anxiety. As it is the Treasury, which has starved the money market, is in improving position to relieve it. The world's gold is at the command of the highest bidder, and none can so well bid high as ourselves. It is expensive, of course. It cuts down profits, and checks a boom which might become feverish if not calmed. Better yet, the chill might be turned to even better use if it strengthened the movement for reform of our banking and monetary conditions according to the advice of our best informed and furthest sighted financiers. As it is, we are having an object lesson in the familiar fact that our monetary organization is productive rather of disaster than prosperity. We must like it or we would change it. Is it indeed, true, as Secretary SHAW and Mr. VANDERLIP have warned us, that we must be scourged into amendment of the follies and crudities which make prosperity an instrument of adversity?

IS IT "A WRONG WITHOUT A REMEDY"?

The mob of Springfield, Ohio, seems to be a specially fierce and dangerous element. It is a white "Caucasian" mob exclusively. On Tuesday night it became excited because some negroes had the night before in an affray wounded two whites. When the mob assumed threatening proportions, the Mayor called out the two local companies of Ohio Militia. But they did not come when he did call for them. The mob, having overpowered the regular police, was unchecked, except by its own moderation. Its vengeance was directed promiscuously against the negro quarter. Two habitations of negroes, locally known as "dives," were set fire to and destroyed.

It is manifest that no citizen of Springfield, Ohio, can, without extreme impudence, criticise the populace of any Southern community for lawless dealing with negro malefactors, whether proved or assumed to be so. But that is beside the particular point. The particular point is that the Springfield mob was composed of chartered libertines, already assured that no harm, not even a pecuniary amercement, could befall the town if they gave way to their festive humor by destroying the property of citizens who would be within the protection of the law if the community had been governed by law. For this is not the first time that Springfield has been disgraced and devastated by a destructive mob. In April, 1904, a negro was lynched there for killing an officer of the law, and, incidentally, the mob which lynched him destroyed some property in the hilarity of the occasion. A Grand Jury scolded a local Judge for not imposing heavier sentences upon criminals, intimating that it was because of his lenity that the mob arose to supplement the defects of the law. The Judge retorted with a scolding of the Grand Jury for not finding indictments for murder against the lynchers. But the perfectly innocent owners whose property had been destroyed found that, under the law of Ohio, as expounded by the tribunals appointed to expound the same, they could not recover damages against the city, the county, or the State for omitting to protect their property. They were comforted only by the assurance that if they would identify the actual destroyers of the property they might recover verdicts against them, though they were without doubt pecuniarily irresponsible, and the verdict would do the injured owners no sort of good.

It appears that Springfield in particular and Ohio in general are, in an important particular of civilization, not entitled to call themselves civilized communities. One of the fundamental principles and maxims of the common law is that there is no wrong without a remedy. Yet it seems that Ohio communities which permit the willful destruction of property within their limits by mob violence secure complete immunity from the consequences of their acts. No state of things could better promote the spirit of riot. Why should the militia turn out to prevent the destruction of property when the destruction falls not upon the community but upon the individual owner? In a like case in Pennsylvania, it is within everybody's recollection that the county was very heavily mulcted for such damages incurred in the course of a strike. In consequence of this recovery, it is quite safe to assume that the police and the militia of the City of Pittsburg and the County of Allegheny are much more efficient than they would otherwise have been. But there is no obvious reason why Springfield and Clark County should not save the expense of its militia and its police, since neither city nor county is responsible for damages arising from the want or inefficiency of either or both. There is, in other words, in the State of Ohio a manifest exception to the legal rule of no wrong without a remedy, since here is an obvious, flagrant, and irremediable wrong. It would be interesting to follow the course of an action brought in a Federal court for damages wrought in gayety of heart by the negro-hunting Springfield mob.

FORESTS AND POWER.

The improvement of facilities for the electrical transmission of water power, which is rapidly superseding in cheapness the use of coal, has aroused the mill owners of the East and the South to support the Joint Eastern Forest bill, now being considered by the Senate Committee, which provides for the nationalization of the forests in the Southern Appalachian chain and in the White Mountains. The undeveloped water power of the streams rising in the Southern Appalachian Mountains is equal to 1,000,000 horse power; the power already developed is 120,000. At Holyoke, Mass., the utilized power is said to be the largest in the country except that at Niagara, while the five principal rivers radiating from the White Mountains long ago made the New England States our chief manufacturing centre. The forests, which regulate the supply of the rivers and tend to prevent such floods as in May, 1901, caused a loss in the Southern Appalachian region of $10,000,000, are being cut and destroyed in both sections. New England has her grievous tale of floods and periodical impairment of water power.

Prof. N. S. SHALER has stated that the manufacturing future of the country depends upon water power transmitted by electricity. That, in turn, depends upon the preservation of the forests. The West is alive to this principle, as is witnessed by its 100,000,000 acres already set aside in Federal forest reserves. It is singular that we have as yet no National Eastern reserves. The National and New England Boards of Trade are zealously supporting the present bill, and Southern cotton manufacturers are bestirring themselves to advocate its passage.

And well they may. The new mills being erected in the South will almost wholly be operated by power delivered to them electrically. The value of the annual product of mills so operated already exceeds $64,000,000. So rapidly has the South risen in the textile manufacturing industry that the five first States in the Union, arranged according to number of spindles, are Massachusetts, South Carolina, Rhode Island, North Carolina, and Georgia. North Carolina, which in 1887 had 200,000 spindles, worked 2,000,000 in 1904, and South Carolina, with 230,000 spindles in 1887, had in 1904 nearly 3,000,000.

Mr. HENRY A. PRESSEY, Hydrographer of the United States Geological Survey, states that the proposed Southern Appalachian reserve, in which rise the chief rivers of the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, and West Virginia, is characterized by the greatest annual rainfall east of the Sierras. Here are magnificent potentialities of power, exceeding those of New England. They will become destructive potentialities with the destruction of the retaining forests unless the territory be speedily taken from its private ravagers, who have stripped 24 per cent. of the total area, and placed in charge of the Federal Forester. The appropriation prayed for is $2,000,000 for the Southern range and $1,000,000 for the reserve in New England. The cost of administering Federal forest land is less than one-third of 1 per cent. of its value, while the value itself increases at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. That is cheap insurance.

TROLLEY ETIQUETTE.

A New Jersey ecclesiastic favors the institution of a society for the amelioration of the condition of street car passengers and the suppression of brutal conductors. On the part of the former there is naturally a good deal of resentment at the reiterated requests, uttered in the tones of command by the latter, to "step lively" and "move along a little further up there," but some articulate formula of mandate or adjuration has to be employed or the business could not be handled. What briefer or on the whole less offensive expressions could the conductors use in the torrent, tempest, and, as one may say, whirlwind of their professional paroxysms, when their cars are jammed to the doors, with a hungry and howling generation outside, in multitude as the leaves of the forest when Summer is green, striving to get in?

It is rather a wonder that they do as well as they do and trim so nearly to the edges of politeness in their official dialectic. The preacher's idea that they require admonitory and disciplinary punching—punching "in the presence of the passenjare," and that the masculine members of his society should always be keyed up to the administration of that punishment in such cases as call for it, is more radical than the occasion seems to call for. The press of trolley passengers out in New Jersey cannot begin to be so severe as it is in the more closely packed area of the metropolis, and while our conductors are not invariably Chesterfieldian in their manner of address, yet, considering the stress in which they labor, during rush hours in particular, they do pretty well, and are entitled, like CLIVE in India amidst the treasure bags of Rajahs and Sultans, which he only skimmed with a restrained and forbearing hand, instead of looting to the bottom as their exposure invited, to "stand astonished at their own moderation."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Good Story, - but Rather Large.

That was indeed a thrilling tale which the Rev. MADISON C. PETERS told of the twenty-four "very young women" who at a recent luncheon consumed thirty-seven bottles of champagne and smoked seven dozens of cigarettes. So definite was the speaker's knowledge of this affair, and so careful was he in nothing to exaggerate that he added that only fifteen of the very young women indulged in cigarettes. From this it requires only slight acquaintance with arithmetic to discover that nine of these roistering maids refrain—or, at any rate, on that occasion refrained—from the use of tobacco. Unless, horrible thought! the nine smoked cigars instead of cigarettes! We find the tale, we must confess, somewhat more thrilling than credible, and we get the thrill, not on account of the very young women, but because it reveals so much about the trustfulness of Mr. PETERS's nature. For there is not, of course, any chance that he did not thoroughly believe the story he told; that he does not have perfect and most touching confidence in his informant. It has not even occurred to him that no story, learned at second hand, is ever correct in every detail—has not occurred to him that absolute accuracy in narrative is not given to any mortal. If he had been in the newspaper business for a few years he would have learned a lot about that, but as he has devoted himself to another calling he cannot be expected to know as much as we, for instance, do about the fallibility of even the honestest of humans. We, however, simply cannot escape the fear that there was something wrong about the account of his recent luncheon. It is next to impossible that twenty-four very young women could be gathered for such a function who could fairly share between them thirty-seven bottles of champagne without attaining a degree of excitement unrestrainable by anything less than a patrol wagon loaded with large policemen, and then the public's first knowledge of the affair would not have come from Mr. PETERS, but from those of our contemporaries that make a specialty of such things. We simply cannot avoid the suspicion that somebody has been fooling the reverend gentleman. There were too many bottles, and the supply of cigarettes was at least more than sufficient for the fifteen who were not content with one form of dissipation.

A New Cure for Seasickness.

A German scientist has evolved a new theory of seasickness. That is a matter of no consequence whatever, since there are already at least a hundred theories of this malady, all of them excellent, but what really is important is the fact that the scientist has also evolved a cure for seasickness, and one which has been tried with success on a good many people. The theory is that the complex of symptoms from which unnumbered thousands suffer such horrible pangs whenever they venture upon the deep is due to, or at least always accompanied by, great cerebral anaemia, and the cure is accomplished by bringing a full supply of blood back to the brain in a very simple way—the application of hot compresses to the head. The Medical Record reproduces the essential features of the procedure. The patient should lie down as soon as the attack begins, with all tight garments loosened. The appliances required consist of a bowl of hot water and two towels. The water must have a temperature of at least 176° Fahrenheit. A towel folded to the width of the forehead is dipped in the hot water, wrung out, and tied tightly about the forehead just as hot as it can possibly be borne. Any available object, such as a buttonhook, toothbrush, shoehorn, &c., is used as a lever to twist it very tightly about the head. The application is at first rather trying, but the process is continued, a second similar towel being promptly substituted for the first, until the patient experiences a sensation of well-being over the entire body. The application of the compresses is continued for some time longer, but the sensation of well-being usually manifests itself in from one-half to one hour. The onset of thirst gives evidence that the seasickness has been conquered, but the patient must remain recumbent and take no food until he is really hungry. When this occurs, some toast and a little hot, unsweetened, weak tea, without milk, may be taken, and two hours later the patient may resume his place at the table. A condition of success is that absolutely no other treatment, with drugs or otherwise, be tried. All this sounds well, but somehow a suspicious layman may catch in it a glimpse of our old friend—"suggestion." Pure quackery often cures seasickness by concentrating the patient's attention on a lot of little bottles containing perfectly inert tablets, which are to be taken in a fixed order and at brief intervals. These are particularly effective when they cost a good many dollars, and the dealers take care of that. The hot towel method, however, has received serious attention in Europe, and anybody who can forget, or who does not know, that seasickness is almost certainly a mere disturbance of the nervous system cannot do better than to try a plan at once so simple, so safe, and so inexpensive.

Two Phases of the Obvious.

President ROOSEVELT's admiration for Admiral Togo's address to the Japanese Navy is well deserved, and in giving wide publicity to the document he has acted in a highly characteristic manner. One cannot help noting, however, that though the President appreciates the style and wisdom of the Oriental hero, he has not, in his own comments upon the address, been able to imitate its chief merit—the avoidance of the obvious. Togo indulges in hardly a single proclamation of the superiority of virtue over vice, of patriotism over disloyalty, of courage over cowardice. Very simply indeed he tells the Japanese sailors why they won their victories and what they must do to win more if occasion for doing so should arise. Particularly notable is his statement that one gun which makes 100 per cent. of hits is worth a hundred guns making only 1 per cent. of hits. That, too, is a platitude, in its way, but it differs from some other platitudes in being a very effective statement, and the President should give it a lot of study.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—When the Senate came out of secret session tonight several Senators were seen smoking. The rules are strict against indulging in cigars on the floor, and the sight was an unusual one. Among those who were enjoying themselves was La Follette, who was pacing up and down at the back of the Chamber and pulling away vigorously on a blazing stub.

Senator Pettus stepped up to him as he was on the way to the cloakroom and laid his hand on his shoulder.

"My dear boy," said the veteran humorist from Alabama, "I am the oldest Senator in years, as you are the youngest in service."

"That's nicely said, Senator," replied La Follette, smiling.

"Yes, well, now, let me tell you something," replied Pettus. "You are revealing the secrets of the executive session when you finish that cigar after the doors are opened."

Both laughed heartily.

"One thing more," continued the old man. "I don't let out any secrets that way, because I take my tobacco another way. See?" and, shifting a lump from his right to his left cheek, he stalked into the cloakroom.

Tulio Larrinaga, the Porto Rico Commissioner, and Prince Cupid, of Hawaii, chanced to meet to-day going into the House and paused to speak of the weather, of which for the past twenty-four hours there has been some in Washington.

"This is what they call Winter?" observed Cupid.

"Yes, and I don't like it," said the Porto Rican, shivering.

"Well, you can be happy," replied Cupid, "this is the last day of Winter. You see, they never have but two days of Winter here. All the rest is last Summer and next Spring."

TAXING REAL ESTATE.

Lawson Purdy Makes a Correction in Report of His Recent Address.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES was good enough to make a somewhat extended report of my address at the dinner of the Real Estate Board of Brokers. An error crept into the report which is very misleading, and I beg an opportunity to correct it. In the report of THE TIMES I am made to compare the amount of taxes derived from real estate in the City of New York with certain foreign cities, and I am reported to have said that New York receives 44 per cent. of its revenue from real estate. As a matter of fact New York receives over 80 per cent. of its revenue from the tax on real estate. The comparison I made was between the amount of revenue now derived in New York from the tax on land values and the amount derived from this source in London, Paris, and Berlin.

In the City of London, and in England, the amount of revenue derived from land values is trifling, and the Liberal Party is committed to the imposition of a tax on land values. Such a tax has already been imposed in Paris and in thirty or forty German cities, but in all those cases the tax is very small. This being the only tax which does not make it harder to earn a living, I pointed out how superior our situation in this city is to the condition of any foreign city.

The United States in the Congo.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is true that the United States has no "interest" in the Congo, and no legal or treaty right to interfere there; nevertheless, the theory of all laws, statutes and treaties is that they are based on a moral law which is the foundation of all legislation and civilization. If Mr. Root saw a man cutting off a child's hand he would not wait for the S. P. C. C., the child's legal guardians, exploiters, next of kin, or those otherwise "interested" in the situation to interfere. And this is literally the case in the Congo. The official record of King Leopold's commission admits the several and particular charges of cruelty; its defence consisting in generalities that prove nothing and are, moreover, disproved by the admitted facts.

The same power of public opinion which Webster invoked in favor of the oppressed Greeks, and Gladstone in behalf of the victims of King Bomba, we may and should use now to redress the Congo cruelties.

THE JAPANESE PHYSIQUE.

Would a Change of Diet Be of Benefit to the Race?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Like many other Japanese whom I have known Dr. Takaki seems much troubled over the fact that his countrymen are not equal in height and weight to Americans and Europeans, and is anxious to devise some process by which a change may be brought about. "The trouble," he tells us, "is in the food the Japanese race has been eating for centuries past. We have not been living on the kind of food which goes to make muscle, bone, and sinew. Other nations have had proper food and are normal in height. The Japanese will now follow the example of the Englishman and the Americans." There was much more of the same kind, all very flattering to his American audience. The doctor made it very strong, as he well knew the self-satisfied complacency of our people.

The food of the Japanese consists of rice, fish, and vegetables. The rice is the main food, being equivalent to bread, meat, and potatoes with us. On this food the Japanese have built up and sustained as sturdy a little body as there is in the world—with all due respect to Dr. Takaki. Their powers of endurance are certainly wonderful. The men who draw the jinrikisha frequently run with a passenger a distance of fifty miles in a single day. Little women of four feet in height bear on their backs burdens weighing over 200 pounds. Though small their bodies seem perfectly developed for feats of strength or skill, and in deftness and agility the Japanese are equal to any. Gen. Ian Hamilton, who was with Gen. Kuroki's army, returns again and again in his book to the subject of the physical qualities of the Japanese soldiers, always with praise.

If, as Dr. Takaki says, the food of the Japanese during the past centuries did not make muscle, bone, and sinew, it provided a good substitute. Quality is better than quantity. Dr. Takaki is not likely to succeed in making any changes in the matter, but if he did he might be badly disappointed.

Castro's Appreciation and Our Duty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the telegram regarding affairs in Venezuela, which you publish to-day from Willemstad, Curacao, we are told that "the populace are yearning for an American protectorate, and the better class of Venezuelans are said to declare that the situation demands immediate intervention by the United States for the sake of humanity."

It would be interesting to know who the author of this telegram is, and what he means by "the populace" and "the better class." According to a good and not unfriendly authority the population of Venezuela is classified as 93 per cent. mulattos and mestizos, 4 per cent. Indians, 1 per cent. Creoles, and 2 per cent. Europeans, (presumably including Americans.) Are we expected to believe that the mixed bloods, to which Castro himself belongs, are clamoring for an American protectorate, or that the Creoles, who are for the most part politicians, are becoming concerned about humanity and want us to intervene? I am afraid the statement is a flagrant trespass upon our credulity. If, however, the Europeans are meant when he speaks of the "better class," then I can understand and sympathize with the appeal. But would it not be better for them to appeal to their own Governments for intervention?

The wise thing for us to do will be to keep out of these countries and let them settle their own complications. We are to-day making a record at home that ought to keep us there until we can govern ourselves before we launch out on quixotic crusades in the West Indies and Latin America. If the Venezuelans will not behave themselves then let the nations aggrieved punish them as they deserve. It should be none of our business. But if we will meddle, then we should not complain when Castro gives us an unpleasant taste of his appreciation.

M. Merignac and the Senacs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly correct a statement made in your paper this morning, in giving an account of the fencing at Carnegie Hall last evening, wherein it is stated that last year M. Merignac appeared in America and fought at the Grand Central Palace, meeting at that time Senac, pere and fils.

I am a pupil of the Senacs and happened to be present as the guest of Senac pere in a box at the Grand Central Palace when M. Merignac fenced there, and on that occasion he met neither of the Senacs. Senac pere remained in the box during the entire evening, only leaving it, after the exhibition was over, to visit M. Merignac on the platform and offer him his congratulations.

It would be an interesting event for the lovers of fencing if a meeting could be arranged between M. Merignac and the Senacs.

Has a Bad Opinion of New York.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to "Englishman's" letter in your issue of date, I cannot conceive upon what authority he arrives at such conclusions. To his fellow countrymen as well as many Americans his contentions are ridiculously absurd. Crime, as proved by statistics, is more prevalent in this city, notwithstanding the fact that the population in London is ever so much larger, which in my opinion is entirely owing to one of the worst police systems in the world.

As to "respect for the fair sex" I will only ask him if he has compared the treatment meted to the "fair sex" on any of the crowded cars here to that in London, or the Bridge disgrace to the orderly crowd at Liverpool Street.

Suggestion for the Central.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An act is now before the Legislature compelling the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad to place its tracks in a subway under Eleventh Avenue. Mr. Delany, in an opinion, says that such a bill will be very expensive, for condemnation proceedings will be necessary. An engineer employed by the city is of the opinion that the land, being made land, construction will be very expensive.

Now, it seems to me that there is a way out of this trouble. Let the railroad construct and operate an underground tube or tubes under Eighth Avenue and transport its freight at night, and use the road for passenger traffic during the day.

INSURANCE LEGISLATION.

Shall the Policy Holders Be Allowed to Choose the Kind of Policy?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interview with a prominent insurance official published in your edition of Monday, Feb. 26, is by far the best thing of its kind yet.

There is grave danger that the politicians and certain "yellow journals" in their attempted assaults on wealthy people, and Wall Street in particular, will, between them, without intending to do so, hurt the policy holders badly.

In the matter of "deferred dividends" and in the matter of greatly reducing the "surplus" and weakening the companies, (strength or safety is, after all, the most important thing,) this is especially true.

The vast majority of people who have had experience with the two kinds of policies, "annual" and "deferred," know that the "deferred" is the better policy, and they should be allowed to have them in the future if they prefer them.

In other words, they should have the right to choose.

PATCHOGUE LIKES CARNEGIE.

Considers Itself Anything but "Gold-Bricked" by the Gift of a Library.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your issue of Feb. 22 contained a communication signed "Lance," in which the "gold-brick character" of Mr. Carnegie's gifts is referred to and Controller Metz is patted on the back for firing bricks at the Iron Master.

The people of Patchogue, L. I., recently asked Mr. Carnegie for a library building. He offered them $10,000 if they would supply a site and agree to raise $1,000 yearly to support the institution. They were already paying $600 a year for library purposes, and were in cramped and inadequate quarters. They only had to put $400 more in the school tax, supply a site, the use of which by a handsome new structure will greatly advance the price of surrounding real estate, and they get a ten-thousand-dollar library.

Anything of a gold-brick character about that? Patchogue people don't think so, for they have very promptly accepted Mr. Carnegie's offer and consider it a very generous one.

Mr. Carnegie's Practical Mind.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the recent experience of the church at New Rochelle, I would mention another occasion when Mr. Carnegie declined to help those evidently able to help themselves.

Several years ago a certain city in the central part of New York State, having a public library in need of larger quarters, decided to erect a new building for it. To this end the city voted an issue of bonds to defray the expense, but before the bonds were sold Mr. Carnegie began to attract notice as a donor of library buildings. Much against his will, the Mayor was persuaded by certain citizens to acquaint Mr. Carnegie with the situation and inform him that the city would be very happy to accept the new building as a gift from him.

After some delay a reply was received to this effect: "Mr. Carnegie is glad to welcome the City of —— as a co-worker in the cause of public libraries."

Lawsonism Not the Remedy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

By this morning's TIMES I see that Lawson has at last shown his true colors by hoisting the black flag, and declaring war in true piratical style upon the great insurance companies of New York. Not content with the reforms accomplished he would destroy the great financial institutions which are the trustees of thousands.

Corruption in our political system is the real cause of the unaccounted expenditures by the insurance companies, and it would be a very uncomfortable thing for a large number of present and past legislators, if Judge Hamilton should come back and name the men whom he bribed to withdraw destructive bills.

It is true that it is to be regretted that the Presidents of great insurance companies did not have backbone enough to fight this corruption, but is it not true that the greatest blemish on our National character is that we are too busy making money to sacrifice personal comfort and profit to perform the duty of every citizen, which is to purify our political system and develop public spirit, honor, and good manners? Lawsonism is not the remedy.

Should Directors Direct?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of their withdrawal from railroad Directorates, so far as it involves the question of "dummy Directors," may fairly bring up the query whether the proposition that Directors should direct is not after all a mistaken one. With the multiplicity of corporations that we have now reached, the natural tendency to get prominent men on more boards than they can really attend to is probably unavoidable, and in the case of the larger corporations, at least, the evolution is likely to be in the line of having a Board of Directors a legislative body rather than an executive one, leaving the latter function to be exercised by smaller committees with well-defined responsibilities.

The Evangelist.

From the Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

It must be nice to be an evangelist. He goes into a strange town under the most auspicious circumstances. Every one is glad to see him, the church members give him their best cooking, listen tearfully to his scoldings, and beam at his praise. His old sermons are new to them, and if he lifts any sinners out of the mire he is gone from town and spared the humility when they fall back in again. He is like a bright light in the church sky; gone too soon for the people to discover that it is only an ordinary candle light and perhaps not as bright as that which illuminates their pulpit every Sunday in the year. The preacher does the hard milking and the evangelist comes along and gets the cream. Under the circumstances the church people should really think more of their preacher. He deserves some credit because he has never deserted his work to prance around in evangelistic fields.

An Easy Way Out.

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Chicago Tribune attempts to launch another conundrum. "What," it asks, "shall a woman do after she is forty? There has been a great deal of anxiety shown upon this subject in recent years. And it is a serious question. If such a woman joins the literary clubs she irritates Mr. Cleveland. If she writes a book she annoys Mr. Lang. If she tries to commit suicide some one saves her; and if she lives with her son-in-law all society is up in arms?" But is that a "serious question?" If it is a question at all, do not women easily solve it by declining to pass forty?"

Gladys, see this Spanish scene,
Where folks in the approved
Castilian costumes queer
Breathe a rampant atmosphere
Of "Carmen" twice removed.

And see the Spanish dancers dance,
Arrayed in hues eleven,
Boleró jigs by scores
To Spanish matadors
In colors twenty-seven.

And note the sweetly subtle calm,
The languor so narcotic,
The sunny Southern glow—
Not Spanish? Gracious, no!
But Gladys, so exotic!

MARCH 1906

NEW YORK WAS A CAVE OF WINDS YESTERDAY

Northwester Blew a Gale, and a Cold Gale, Too.

PERILS NEAR HIGH BUILDINGS

Rescue of a Windblown Pup—Wind Broke Detroit Man's Leg—Parks Blown Clean.

A young woman, leading a toy spaniel and wearing a green veil and a hat with a high-built crown, walked bravely down Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon toward the Flatiron Building. A dog blanket was strapped loosely around the spaniel. At the forward end of the Flatiron the wind got under the blanket, and in a second the pup was swinging straight out from his mistress, attached to the end of the leather strap.

The wind was also attacking the brave young woman's hat, so she stood still, holding to her hat with her left hand and to the dog with her right. Now and then the pup at the end of the taut strap would move a bit as the wind veered. An old man across the street with a rolling gait and sea biscuit complexion surveyed the brave young woman for fully two minutes. Then he said slowly to his companion:

"Bill, she is nor' by nor'west, an' she is blowing a gale, nigh onto fifty mile."

Then he went over and cut down the spaniel so that he and his brave young mistress could pass on.

At the Weather Bureau they said the Flatiron observation was about right. Tuesday night the wind sprang up strong and the mercury took a slide. At midnight Tuesday Fahrenheit said 24, 18 at 3 o'clock, 14 at 6 o'clock and until 8 o'clock, and 16 at 10 o'clock. The sun helped the mercury up to something above 22 at and after midday. The weather man says it will be fair and warmer to-day, but that the north wind will still blow.

The last day of February raised as much dirt and made as much noise as an official going out of office. It was a day of eye-and-ear digging, of skirt holding; a day so blitheringly keen and cold that only the stoutest stood with bulging eyes looking across the valley at the Flatiron front.

F. S. Brooks of Detroit walked out of the front door of the Hotel Netherland, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, yesterday morning. He turned east into Fifty-ninth Street. The wind blowing across Central Park gathered him up and hurled him down again to the sidewalk. The hotel employes ran out and picked him up. He was attended in his own room. He was considerably bruised and had a leg broken.

A woman tried to cross Fifty-ninth Street at Fifth Avenue. The wind threw her in front of a car, but she was quickly pulled out of danger by Policeman Dynan of the Traffic Squad.

The frozen body of a sixty-year-old man was found leaning against a fence on Clinton Street, near Creamer Street, Brooklyn, yesterday. The old man wore a blue flannel shirt, mixed gray coat, and a light Spring overcoat.

Louisa Zolzer, 29 years old, of 291 Clinton Street, Brooklyn, was knocked down by a 24-foot sign board blown by the wind yesterday afternoon from in front of the office of Albert J. Graffe, a real estate dealer at 1,145 Broadway. She narrowly escaped serious injury and was able to go home.

W. J. Branson of 50 East 116th Street was at work on the second floor of the new building at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street yesterday morning. The wind swept him loose from his stand. He could fall only one floor, however, so that he got off with nothing more than scalp wounds, which were dressed by Dr. Cottle of the New York Hospital.

It was a lovely day, flowers bloomed—behind the florists windows—and the quick sweet scent of new-mown hay was wafted over eastern and northwestern New York—from a Forty-second Street drug store where three show windows protecting perfumery were shattered by the wind. Any man could go home with watery eyes and groggy head yesterday and speak with that effect which dramatic critics characterise as "convincing."

Yesterday's weather brought some recompenses. The sprawling gentlemen of leisure who sit all day long in the parks reading papers that somebody else bought were not there yesterday. The parks were as clean as the Rooseveltian hound's tooth; the dirt that was swirled out of them was in people's eyes and ears.

Out of sight, too, were the colored persons who stand in front of "painless dental parlors" and get in your way and yell in your ear and stick in your face black-printed cards about the skill of their employers. One could pass the "parlor" yesterday without stopping to take a card.

The Weather Bureau hopes that data concerning March for the past thirty-five years will delight the heart of the "gentle reader." The average temperature for that month is 38 degrees, but in 1872 the average was 29. In 1905, the mercury went up one day to 74, but then one day in 1872 it went down to 3 degrees. In 1885 only 1.19 inches of snow fell in March, but during the really roaring blizzard of 1888, 16.5 inches fell. The average precipitation for March is four inches of snow or rain.

To the commuters who read garden literature and talk at all spare times about the loveliness of "seeing things take life and sprout and grow under one's own tending"—to them the Weather Bureau wants to say that "budding radishes" and "blooming onions" have little chance with a killing frost. Killing frosts, as a rule, may come as late as April 10, but they have been known to get a throat-hold on a "lovely budding" garden as late as April 30.

The only fatal accident due directly to the high wind occurred when Bernard Smith, a truckman, 50 years old, of 1,624 First Avenue, was blown from his wagon yesterday afternoon at Waverley Place and West Tenth Street. He had leaned over the pole to draw a blanket up from the back of his horse, when the blast caught him and hurled him to the pavement. At St. Vincent's Hospital it was found that Smith had sustained a fracture of the skull, from the effects of which, it is thought, he cannot recover.

BROOKLYN'S SEWER FRAUDS.

Lawyer Oppenheim Accused of Paying to Secure Cases Against City.

Assistant District Attorney Appleton appeared yesterday before Magistrate Steinert, in the Tombs Court, against Lawyer Benjamin E. Oppenheim of 265 Broadway, who had been summoned to explain certain allegations made against him in an affidavit made by Frank J. Prial, an examiner of sewer claims in the Corporation Counsel's office.

The affidavit alleges that Oppenheim sent a man namd Bosco to the Italian colony in the Eastern District of Brooklyn last April to solicit claims from those who had suffered from the overflowing of sewers. It is alleged in the affidavit that Oppenheim got about one hundred such claims, and that Bosco was paid $2 for each of them. This, according to Mr. Prial's affidavit, violates the Penal Code, which makes a lawyer guilty of a misdemeanor when he pays a fee to any person bringing cases to him. The examination was postponed until to-morrow, and Oppenheim was paroled in the meantime. Mr. Appleton goa a dozen subpoenas for witnesses in the case.

WANTS AUTO PIANO STOPPED.

Corn Surgeon Says It's Driven Away Half His Customers.

Samuel M. Goldberg—"Dr. Goldberg," his lawyer called him—described as a chiropodist and manicurist, with "parlors" at 1,259 Broadway, moved before Justice Fitzgerald in the Supreme Court yesterday for an injunction to restrain an automatic piano from interfering with the peaceful art of corn surgery.

He explained that the defendant piano was situated in a penny arcade on the ground floor of the Broadway building, where he had his "parlors."

Henry L. Schuerman, counsel for the plaintiff, said that the automatic piano made more noise than forty phonographs. Moreover, it worked until midnight. Dr. Goldberg declared that, while his customers stood for phonographs and even for lung testers, the automatic piano was the limit. Once it played "The Irish Washerwoman," and a stout female patron went out without receiving treatment.

Counsel said that Dr. Goldberg's nerves had been so shocked by the three tunes played on the automatic piano that he had to place himself under the care of Dr. J. L. Adams of 38 East Fifty-first Street. In addition to this the piano had driven away 50 per cent. of the patrons of the parlors. "Silver Heels" and "What yer gwine to do when the rent comes 'round?" are in the repertory.

Lawyer Hoffman, for the piano owner, said he had an affidavit from a Fifth Avenue chiropodist who declared that it was a relief to hear an automatic piano while one was having his feet operated on. The Fifth Avenue chiropodist thought so much of it, counsel added, that he was thinking about having an automatic piano placed in his "parlors" for the benefit of his patrons.

Justice Fitzgerald remarked that a piano would not hurt his feet much unless it fell on them, and then reserved decision.

FIRE-DRILL SAVES PUPILS.

600 March Out in Order While Canarsie School Burns.

Public School 114, at Remsen Avenue and School Lane, Canarsie, was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The 600 pupils and 15 teachers escaped without injury. The success in getting all safely out of the building was attributed by the Principal, Mrs. Mary T. McHench, to the pupils' recognition of the value of the fire-drill, which had long been practiced in the school.

The blaze was discovered in the building, a two-story frame structure with a basement, by Policeman Mullally. He ran into the school, warned the Principal, and then turned in an alarm. Mrs. McHench at once sounded the fire alarm on the school gongs, and the pupils, with little excitement, began to file out in order. Most of them had to leave without their hats and coats, but the teachers returned for these and saved most of them.

The fire is believed to have started from a defective chimney. Before the firemen arrived the roof and upper floors were ablaze. It was an hour before the fire was under control. The building was twenty-five years old and burned rapidly, the flames being fanned by the high wind. Capt. Reimels and the reserves of the Canarsie Police Station lined the pupils up, so that the frightened mothers, who soon began to flock to the burning building, could easily assure themselves that their children were safe.

IN CELL; WON'T WED TO-DAY.

Servant Robbed Her Mistress to Add to Her Trousseau.

For months Aline Kuch, a Swedish servant, had been preparing for her marriage to-day to William Dreers, a milkman, but her preparations have landed her in a police cell.

Last January the girl entered the service of Mrs. Royal T. Coleman of 511 West 122d Street. A few days later a number of trinkets disappeared, and when $250 worth were gone Mrs. Coleman called in the police. They found the missing articles in Aline's room. She confessed and threw herself on Mrs. Coleman's mercy. Mrs. Coleman's pity was aroused and she refused to prosecute, and the girl left.

About a week later a diamond and pearl sunburst, two diamond rings, a pair of pearl opera glasses, and two pins worth $500 in all, were missed. The police were again notified. They located the girl in a new place, at 18 West 126th Street, but when she saw Mr. Coleman coming to see her new mistress she disappeared. Yesterday the police located her fiancé, William Dreers, at 14 East 127th Street. They followed him home to 2,050 Third Avenue, and found the girl there in a furnished room. She stoutly denied the latest thefts, but on searching the girl the police found five pocketbooks, in which was the property Mrs. Coleman had lost.

The apartment was searched and in two large trunks were found linen, silk dresses, embroidery work, laces, and silver worth, acording to the police, between $500 and $600. They suspect that Aline Kuch made a practice of taking service in well-to-do families and adding to her trousseau at their expense. She will be arraigned in the Harlem Police Court to-day.

SABBATH COMMITTEE GETS AFTER THEATRES

Asks General Sessions to Shut Up Sunday Offenders.

MUCH EVIDENCE COLLECTED

Managers Must Show Cause Why They Shouldn't Lose Licenses—Parsons and Philbin on Committee.

The New York Sabbath Committee, through its attorney, John M. Perry, made application under Section 1,476 of the City Charter yesterday before Judge McMahon, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, for the revocation of the licenses of those theatres which have been giving Sunday performances this Winter.

Heretofore the committee has contented itself with calling the attention of the police or other authorities to alleged violations of the law. Now it proposes to wage its own war. Its Chairman, William W. Hoppin, said last night that it "will carry the fight to the last ditch." This is the section:

Any license provided for by the preceding sections may be revoked and annulled by any Judge or Justice of any court of record in said city upon proof of a violation of any of the provisions of this title; such proof shall be taken before such Judge or Justice upon notice of not less than two days to show cause why such license should not be revoked; said Judge or Justice shall hear the proofs and allegations in the case, and determine the same summarily, and no appeal shall be taken from such determination, and any person whose license shall have been revoked or annulled shall not thereafter be entitled to a license under the provisions of said sections; on any examination before an officer, pursuant to a notice to show cause as aforesaid, the accused party may be a witness in his own behalf.

Judge McMahon asked Mr. Perry if he had served notice upon the managers of the theatres, their attorneys, or any other persons in authority, and, on being told that no such action had been taken, advised him to notify the persons concerned in the manner prescribed by law and renew his application at next month's term of court, which begins Monday. Mr. Perry said he would do so.

The Sabbath Committee has been collecting evidence for some months, all unknown to the managers, and has a stack af affidavits a foot high which will be submitted when the time comes. On the roster of the committee are such men as John E. Parsons, Eugene A. Philbin, Robert Maitland, and Frederick Sturges.

"Several members, on their own initiative, have visited the theatres on Sunday night and are ready to testify should the affidavits prove insufficient to prove our case," said Chairman Hoppin. "We are thoroughly in earnest in our campaign. We propose to see that the laws on the statute books regarding the observance of the Sabbath are lived up to."

"Isn't the whole question of Sunday performances in the theatres involved in the Conried case, now pending?" Mr. Hoppin was asked.

"Not a bit of it," was the reply. "And right here I want to correct a popular misapprehension. The Sabbath Committee had nothing whatever to do with that arrest. Mr. Conried was the last man we would have proceeded against under the circumstances.

"There was a time when we were able to accomplish our ends through the Police Commissioner, but of late years things have been different. There have been hitches of one kind or another and we feel that it is up to us to act. We regret publicity and have never sought it, but we have a duty to perform."

Oscar Hammerstein, manager of the Victoria Theatre, and other theatrical men concerned did not seem worried by the Sabbath Committee's action.

"How are they going to revoke anybody's license for a violation of the law," Mr. Hammerstein demanded, "when no violation of the law has been shown? Don't let anybody tell you that the Conried case isn't going to be a test. That's what it is. Everybody agreed that it should be, and, under the agreement, however the case goes, it will be appealed, so that a final ruling may be had on just what does and what does not constitute a violation of the law bearing on Sunday performances.

"It's not the theatrical managers that are being hurt it the Sunday concerts are prohibited—it's the public. We are here to give the people what they want. Some of the houses are losing money on their Sunday performances, and the few dollars that I may make don't amount to anything. We managers will have no kick coming however the cat jumps.

"This is a big city, and there are all kinds of people in it. Before the Conried case is through it's not impossible that the whole Sunday law regarding amusements will be declared unconstitutional. If the law was carried out to the letter Coney Island would have to shut up at midnight Saturday."

"Tannhaeuser" at the Opera.

"Tannhäuser" was sung last night at the Metropolitan Opera House by the best forces in the German wing of Mr. Conried's company, and was heard by an audience of good size. Mme. Eames, who has returned this year to the part of Elisabeth, in which she won her first successes as a Wagnerian singer, repeated a performance which has exceptional charm on its pictorial side and exhibits some of her most delightful qualities as a singer.

Her associates were Mmes. Fremstad and Alten and MM. Knote, Van Rooy, Blass, and Reiss, who have been heard in the same rôles before, and repeated their familiar impersonations in excellent fashion. Mr. Hertz conducted.

Bravery of Hippodrome Elephants.

Elephants, or at least the Hippodrome elephants, are no longer afraid of mice, according to the veracious press agent of that prosperous playhouse. He reported last night that Lou, one of the elephants of the Powers troupe, noticed a mouse at her feet and picked it up in her trunk and tossed it over to Jenny, another elephant. Jenny put the mouse under foot. The rodent, says the conscientious press agent, died at once.

ROOSEVELT ACCEPTS.

Will Be Honorary Vice President of the Legal Aid Society.

President Roosevelt has accepted the office of Honorary Vice President of the Legal Aid Society. At the annual meeting of the society, held yesterday, a letter of acceptance from Mr. Roosevelt, dated Feb. 18, was read. It says:

"I accept the election of Honorary Vice President of the Legal Aid Society. I do it because I feel that no society is doing more valuable work for the country than this. You befriend the helpless in the most effective possible manner. Ever since I have been Police Commissioner I have followed closely the work that your society has done, and I cannot speak too highly of it. You right wrongs for the very people who, of all others, most need to have their wrongs righted, and who are yet most helpless to secure their righting."

President von Briesen announced that on March 15 Humperdinck's opera, "Haensel und Gretel," is to be produced at the Metropolitan Opera House for the benefit of the society, and that Mrs. Roosevelt, who is also a member of the organization, had selected the opera and with her children would attend the performance.

Joseph H. Choate, Andrew Carnegie, Julien T. Davies, and Charles S. Fairchild were elected Honorary Vice Presidents.

The annual report of the President showed that the number of separate cases handled in 1905 was 21,372, or 1,095 more than in 1904.

GILLETTE QUITS THE ARMY.

Mayor Weaver Then Makes Him Engineer of Filtration Plant.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Having been unable to obtain an indefinite leave of absence, Major Cassius E. Gillette, one of the best-known engineers in the United States Army, to-day resigned his commission. Mayor Weaver immediately appointed and swore him in as chief engineer of the Bureau of Filtration of the City of Philadelphia. The position pays $17,000 a year.

Major Gillette has been in practical charge of the Filtration Bureau since last Summer, when John W. Hill, the former chief, resigned. He had obtained a leave of absence from the War Department through the instrumentality of Secretary of State Root. An attempt to have this leave extended met with such opposition that it was abandoned.

Major Gillette to-night said that he had been urged by the Mayor and other citizens of the city to carry on the work of completing the filtration system, and he felt it his duty to comply with the request.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Secretary Taft said to-night that he had not received the resignation of Major Cassius E. Gillette and declined to discuss the question whether or not the resignation would be accepted. It was reported today that Major Gillette had sent his resignation direct to President Roosevelt.

RAM FOUND RUBBER WEED.

It Died, but Colorado Will Have a New Industry.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Feb. 28.—Through the death of a valuable ram from Vermont, on the ranch of M. G. Brownell of Durango, Colorado is to have a rubber industry.

The ram died mysteriously, and its owner had an autopsy made. Its intestines were found to be clogged by small balls of gum. A chemist said the gum resembled rubber.

Brownell gathered samples of all vegetable growth on his pasture. This resulted in the discovery that millions of acres in Colorado and adjacent States are covered with a weed that makes fine rubber. Michigan capitalists, among them a brother of the late Senator McMillan, will soon have in operation a factory to extract the gum.

OLD TARIFF FOR GERMANY.

President Orders That the Present Schedule Be Continued.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Roosevelt to-day issued a proclamation imposing the rates of duties provided by Section 3 of the Dingley act upon imports from Germany in return for Germany's concession of minimum tariff rates on United States products.

The articles and the rates of duty named in the proclamation are the same as those now in force, but which would have been terminated to-day but for the recent action of the German Government in giving this country the benefit of its minimum tariff.

SCANDAL IN BANKER'S TRIAL.

Georger Prosecutor Makes Midnight Inquiry Into Attempted Jury Fixing.

ALBION, Feb. 28.—At midnight two men, their names unknown, were locked up in a room at the Orleans County Hotel and their affidavits were taken by District Attorney Abbott of Erie County.

Justice Kenefick, the presiding Judge at the trial of Eugene A. Georger, ex-President of the wrecked German Bank of Buffalo, who is under indictment on a charge of grand larceny, was in another room awaiting the result of Mr. Abbott's investigation.

"This," said Mr. Abbott to the newspaper men, "is the result of revelations made to me by Detective Sergeant O'Loughlin of Buffalo, who has charge of the work of watching the jury. He overheard a conversation between these two men and as a result they were apprehended and brought before me. I am taking their affidavits, which wil be presented in court to-morrow."

Justice Kenefick announced that they were investigating charges against two talesmen, not on the Georger jury. Detective O'Loughlin learned to-day, it is said, that certain men had been going through the county before the trial began, offering large sums of money to induce men to get on the Georger jury.

F. F. Williams, who had been hailed as the prosecution's star witness, gave evidence tending to show that the transactions involved in financing the Lima and Honeoye Falls trolley line were conducted with the bank, and not with Georger as an individual.

JAPAN'S CONSUL URGES A COMMERCIAL TREATY

Says We Should Join Japan and England for Eastern Trade.

CONDEMNS SPEAKER'S POWERS

Representative Adams Tells Wisconsin Society It's Too Great for a Free Government.

If England, the United States, and Japan don't want to cut each other's throats in the Far East, said Japanese Consul General Uchida at the Wisconsin Society dinner last night, they had better make a three-cornered commercial treaty. This is the only way, in Mr. Uchida's judgment, in which Japan and her two closest friends (as he called England and America) can keep the Continental nations from getting the best of the open door to China and Manchuria. He said:

"We are building railroads now in new countries—let England and the United States join in and help us. Such an alliance as I propose would be the best thing for all of us."

America, though not tied by an alliance, was just as good a friend of Japan as England, said Mr. Uchida, and that friendship had been proved in the most substantial way during the Russian war—by a willingness to supply dollars.

H. C. Adams, Representative in Congress from Wisconsin, made a speech about the excessive power of the Speaker. If he wanted power, he said, he'd rather be Speaker of the House than President of the United States. Put down to speak on "Insurgents," Congressman Adams said:

"Some of us in the House of Representatives were called insurgents because we voted against the Philippines bill and the joint Statehood bill. As members of a party pledged to protect American labor from the competition of cheap foreign labor, we were loyal to our party.

"As regards the House rules we are insurgents. There is nothing else like these rules, in heaven above or in earth beneath. They make the Speaker the absolute master of the House. I would rather be Speaker than President if I wanted real power. We are not insurgents as regards Mr. Cannon personally. But no officer should have his power. He names every man on every committee. Bills are not considered in calendar order, and the Speaker's consent must be gained before a member is recognized to bring up a bill. This is a condition which should not exist in a free Government, and it will be changed when the people realize the facts.

"The so-called insurgents were charged with enmity to the President. Each and every one of them is an admirer of the President. But does loyalty to party require that Presidential opinion override honesty, individual judgment in all matters of legislation? President Roosevelt never sanctioned and will never sanction such a doctrine."

Congressman J. H. Davidson, Chairman of the House Committee on Railways and Canals, spoke on the country's waterways.

"Last year," he said, "we spent $100,000,000 on the navy, $75,000,000 on the army, $175,000,000 on policing the country, and only $18,000,000 on improving the waterways. And this in a day when the big stick is only a perch for the white dove."

GALA NIGHT FOR BUCKEYES.

Graduates' Club Meets Ohio Society—Col. McCook on Ohio's Star Lobbyist.

The Graduates' Club, which, though only two years old, has a membership of nearly 400, entertained the Ohio Society last night. There was a reception and plenty of speechmaking. When the Graduates' Club was organized and had no home of its own the Ohio Society adopted it, and offered the club the use of its quarters. Last night's affair was the formal expression of the gratitude cherished by the organization.

The club rooms, in the Constable Building, 111 Fifth Avenue, were well filled. Clancy Meleney, the President, welcomed the guests. Lee B. Dunstine was master of ceremonies. Mr. Dunstine announced Col. John J. McCook as the first speaker. He said:

"The man who opened Ohio to settlement, the Rev. Manasseh Cutler, was the premier lobbyist and the kingpin of them all. From his home in Ipswich the good preacher drove to New York in his one-horse shay. Congress was in session in this city. He got busy with its members, and in less than a week he had secured a grant for the principal part of the Northwest to the Ohio Company of Associates. That opened the way, and once started, Ohio, nourished going and coming, began to wax strong. Everybody who went West and everybody who came back East contributed their quota."

Dr. John L. N. Hunt spoke of the educational resources of Ohio and paid a tribute to the memory of Horace Mann, whom he characterized as the "father of the public school system in America."

Dr. James H. Canfield, Columbia's librarian and an ex-President of the Ohio University, told of the blessings of a university training. President Meleney also made a few remarks, in which he referred flatteringly to the graduates' club.

Supreme Court Justice Fitzgerald reserved decision yesterday on a motion to vacate the order for the examination of Abraham White, President of the American De Forest Wireless Telegraph Company.

Justice Dugro in the Supreme Court yesterday dismissed the complaint in a suit brought against the Aetna Life Insurance Company of Hartford by Mrs. J. Alden Gaylord. Mrs. Gaylord sued to recover $6,000 on an accident insurance policy held by her husband, a bond broker. The company proved that Mr. Gaylord had settled the case for less than $100, giving a release.

The Savannah Line officials are installing the American De Forest Wireless system on their steamships City of Memphis and City of Macon. The new ship now building at Roach's shipyard, which will be launched next Fall, will also be equipped with the system.

United States District Attorney Henry L. Stimson, former law partner of Secretary of State Elihu Root, made his first official appearance yesterday as the chief Federal attorney of this district, before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

LASSOED DROWNING MAN.

Van Cortlandt Employes Saved Mayer, Who Broke Through the Ice.

Max Mayer, 65 years old, of 2,076 Seventh Avenue, was rescued from drowning last night by Henry Turgis and William Boland, employed at Van Cortlandt Park, after he had broken through the ice on the lake at the park.

Mayer was crossing the lake on his way home when the ice broke under him about fifty yards from the shore. He sank out of sight and when he came to the surface again was so benumbed that he was unable to call for assistance loudly enough to be heard. Just then Turgis and Boland, who were at the far end of the lake and the golf course came along and saw Mayer struggling in the water. They got a rope. Turgis made a noose in one end of it and succeeded in throwing it over Mayer's shoulders.

Turgis and Boland then began to haul Mayer toward the shore. Boland, in his eagerness, walked out about ten feet on the ice, and he, too, broke through. Turgis with the help of several other park employes landed Boland and Mayer. Neither was in a serious condition.

BAN JOHNSON'S OFFICE TO BE LOCATED HERE

American League's Headquarters to be Removed from Chicago.

CHANGE IS MADE NECESSARY

Leaders of Major Leagues Should Be in Position to Confer as Often as Possible.

The much-discussed question as to whether the headquarters of the American Baseball League should remain in Chicago or be removed to New York is in a fair way of solution, and it need not surprise club officials or others directly interested in that organization if a change of base were made either before or shortly after the coming championship season has begun. President Johnson, it is known, is more favorably disposed to coming here than he ever has been, and this present feeling was brought about by the favorable expression of club owners, especially those in the East, who attended the late meeting of the league in the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

According to President Johnson's notion New York, in its commercial relations, is unquestionably the greatest distributing centre on this continent, and baseball affairs should be directed from such a city. In a baseball sense its geographical location does not possess any more advantages than some other places in the American League circuit, but the fact that the Eastern part of the circuit is made up of three of the largest cities in the country—New York, Philadelphia, and Boston—and the excellent telegraphic and transportation facilities which New York possesses, makes this city, according to the American League leader, an ideal spot to transact the business of the organization.

Another good reason why the American League headquarters should be located here is the fact that in the amicable relations now existing between the two major leagues matters frequently arise, which instead of being taken to the National Commission might be settled at a conference between Presidents Pulliam and Johnson. As it is now, with the National League headquarters in New York and the American League headquarters in Chicago, the Presidents of the two organizations never see each other until a National Commission meeting, which is only called at the pleasure of the Chairman, August Herrmann of Cincinnati. It is contended that if the two headquarters had been in close proximity to each other before the recent meetings here, so that Presidents Pulliam and Johnson could have freely conferred, a better understanding would have prevailed.

President Johnson's present intention to remove his office to New York is not the first instance in which he has looked favorably upon such a scheme. Early last year Treasurer Farrell of the Greater New York Club was so certain that the league leader would come here to stay that he secured a commodious room adjoining that of the Greater New Yorks, and had painted on the door: "Headquarters of the American League." Where President Johnson will locate when he does come here has not been determined upon, but it is certain that in a short while there will be another sign on some door in a New York office building which will read "Headquarters of the American League."

GIANTS TO PLAY PUSHBALL.

Will Be Part of Their Preliminary Training at Memphis.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 28.—If weather prophets keep their promise balmy temperature will greet the New York National League players, who mobilize here to-morrow morning for the inauguration of preliminary training for their efforts to win a third straight championship. Manager John J. McGraw arrived in advance of the squad of veterans and youngsters this morning and lost no time inspecting Red Elm Park, the play ground where the Giants will do most of their out-of-door work. McGraw also visited the Young Men's Christian Association "gym," which has been courteously offered to the New Yorks for indoor work. McGraw selected rowing machines, boxing gloves, and a half dozen mats for wrestling, which will be utilized by the players when rainy days arrive.

A pushball, six feet in diameter, however, will be the unique part of preliminary baseball work to be dished out to the Giants. This huge piece of leather will be employed by the "colts" and the "vets," who will tug and push for the first several days, trying to advance the ball in the direction of the opponents' goal. McGraw has great faith in this style of exercise as a starter, believing that the strain is gradual and will harden the muscles for the strenuous times later on. According to his opinion, the old-fashioned system of running and walking will be practically sidetracked for games which occupy the mind while the body is being exercised. "Broadway Alex" Smith and "Whitey" Langdon accompanied McGraw.

Changes Among Baseball Players.

Harry C. Pulliam, President of the National League, announced in an official bulletin yesterday that Frank Leroy Dickinson had signed a contract to play with the Chicago Club this year. Among the releases were: By Philadelphia to Toledo, John Suthoff; by Pittsburg to Nashville, William Sorrell; by Pittsburg to Springfield, Mass., T. Altizer; by Brooklyn to Baltimore, Hugh Jennings, J. W. Byers, J. H. McNeal, and F. D. Burchell; by Brooklyn to Toledo, Edward Frank; by Boston to Columbus, W. V. Cannoll; by St. Louis to Denver, I. Hickman; by St. Louis to Kansas City, I. Swann, and by St. Louis to Louisville, S. Sullivan.

Lumley Signs with Brooklyn Club.

Harry Lumley, the right fielder of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, has signed a contract to play with the club another year. In the absence of President Ebbets, Lumley had a conference with Treasurer Medicus, and appeared to be well satisfied with the conditions of his contract, for he appended his name without hesitation. Lumley has taken on some weight during the Winter, but otherwise appears in splendid health. He stood well up in the batting list of the National League last year, and led the Brooklyn Club with an average of .293.

President Ebbets is said to be much concerned over the movements of McCarthy and Maloney, two of the players exchanged by Chicago for Sheckard. He has been out of town for several days, and it is said that he would visit the two players, who are holding out for more pay.

Columbia's Weekly Track Meet.

At the third weekly track meet of the Columbia Track Association for the University Point Prize C. E. Grimsky, 1907 S., in the one-lap 176-yard dash made first place in 0:20 4-5. Grimsky has won the dashes at three successive meets and appears to be good 'Varsity material. B. Landers, 1909 C., again led in the half-mile run, reducing his time made in previous meets by three seconds. Summary:

One-Lap Dash, (176 Yards.)—C. E. Grimsky, 1907 S., (scratch,) first; W. R. Morgan, 1909 C., (2 yards,) second; J. A. Edgar, 1906 S., (5 yards,) third. Time—0:20 4-5.

Half-Mile Run—B. Sanders, 1909 C., (scratch,) first; G. E. Hutchinson, 1909 S., (10 yards,) second; H. E. Slade, 1909 S., (40 yards,) third. Time—2:07.

Fordham Games Have 500 Entries.

With an entry list of more than 500 athletes the games of Fordham University in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory on Saturday night promise to be among the most successful of the season. Yale, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Princeton, and Holy Cross will be represented, and all the local clubs have entered full teams. Among the individual competitors will be Bonhag, Frank Sheldon, Hillman, Sullivan, and others selected to represent America at the Olympic games in Athens next month. Princeton will be quite prominent at the meet, twenty-five of Old Nassau's students being entered. The 600-yard Amateur Athletic Union championship will be contested for by a dozen of the speediest middle-distance men.

JIU-JITSU PLAYED OUT.

Yamishita Leaves Annapolis Soon—Academy Drops the System.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 28.—Prof. Y. Yamishita, the most noted of the jiu-jitsu experts who have come to this country in the last two years, will leave for Japan in a few weeks, having stated that the United States is worked out in his line.

Although he has been giving his lessons to the midshipmen three times a week during the last three months, he would not have been retained but for the fact that his contract was for two years. The authorities here will not retain the system.

Prof. Yamishita instructed President Roosevelt in his art.

Sprinter Hahn for Pastime's Games.

Archie Hahn, the famous little Western sprinter, who has been selected to represent America in the Olympic games at Athens, Greece, next month, has notified the officials of the Pastime Athletic Club that he will start in the sixty-yard Amateur Athletic Union championship event at the Pastime's games, to be held in Madison Square Garden on the evening of March 7. The Westerner is regarded as one of the fastest men in the country at any distance from 100 to 220 yards, and at the indoor championships of the Central Association of the A. A. U. last year he ran 75 yards in the world's record time of 0:07 3-5. His greatest feat, however, was accomplished at the last revival of the Olympic games at St. Louis in 1904, when he finished first in the 60, 100, and 200 meter events, equaling the Olympian record at 60 yards and setting up the present figures of 0:21 3-5 in the latter event.

Best Cross-Country Runners to Race.

A record entry list is looked for at the cross-country run of the Mohawk Athletic Club, which will be held next Sunday, and already many of the best runners of the metropolitan district have entered. Among the field of starters will be W. G. Frank of the Irish-American Athletic Club, who will represent this country in the Marathon race of twenty-five miles at Athens. Frank, it is believed, will be placed on the mark of honor in Sunday's race, and it is thought he will have much difficulty in overcoming the field of long-mark men, judging from the class of entries that has been received. Opposed to Frank will be "Sam" Meller, "Little Dick" Devlin, N. C. Manley, and "Mike" McGarry, the former cross-country champion, who has been in training for the past two months.

Final Make-Up of Olympic Team.

When the American Committee of the Olympic games meets on next Monday evening the final make-up of the team which will be sent to Athens, Greece, will be announced. It has been suggested that the athletes should wear one uniform, the club emblem to be omitted, by reason of its being a distinctively American team and not one attached to a club. In place of a club emblem an American flag will be displayed.

A letter has been sent to all the members of the Finance Committee and American Committee requesting that they make final reports on the soliciting of funds for the team's trip to Athens to Julian W. Curtiss on next Saturday. After that day no more funds will be received. At the meeting on the following Monday Treasurer Curtiss will report how much money has been received.

The Executive Committee next week will decide upon transportation, select a manager and trainer, and make conditions to govern the team while abroad.

J. E. Sullivan to Referee Games.

Anticipating a series of desperate struggles for supremacy, the Executive Committee of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America has selected James E. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, as referee of the annual field meeting to be held at Cambridge, Mass., on May 25 and 26.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Louis Moore, who stamps the letters and runs errands for the Saratoga Racing Association officials, is one person in the Windsor Arcade who is not worrying over the turf situation. Young Moore won the skating championship for fourteen-year-old schoolboys last week and would not trade his medal for the $2,500 gold cup that goes to the winner of the Great Saratoga Special.

The Goughacres stable of horses has been shipped to Benning. Trainer Al Weston is in charge, and will be busy until the opening of the meeting whipping his horses into condition. Weston, Garth, and Brooks, who handle the Oxnard horses, will hold the centre of the stage at Benning until the horses from New York and New Orleans arrive.

S. M. Williams, who was warned away from the Oakland track, will ship two carloads of horses to Hot Springs. He apparently does not fear that the action of the California Jockey Club will count against him at the Vapor City.

The Iroquois Stock Farm, where Major Daingerfield and Lady Schorr were foaled, will be sold. The farm was the property of Capt. James B. Clay, who died recently while en route from Lexington to New York.

C. R. Ellison has claimed the name of Elsie Janis for a two-year-old half-sister to Ram's Horn by George Kessler-Aunt Tessa. Ellison had previously claimed the name of Rollicking Girl for this filly, but the name was a substitute.

James W. Colt's steeplechasers are expected to be shipped from Geneseo Valley to Benning to-morrow. The open Winter has been very favorable to the training and schooling of jumpers, even in Northern New York, and James Mara's lot will be ready when called upon. Bernhardt will be the second jockey for the stable.

A number of the Saratoga track patrons have made application for a renewal of the box privileges they held last year. They are mostly from persons going abroad and who do not expect to return until just before the meeting.

Texas turfmen are in a turmoil over the dates for the short circuit of racing in that State. Dallas, where as a matter of fact the racing was best last season, chose dates from Oct. 20 to Nov. 4, and this arrangement does not fit in with the wishes of those interested in racing at Houston and San Antonio, the other two racing points. Houston desires to have the meeting in conjunction with its carnival Nov. 12 to 17.

INDIAN SUPERSTITIONS BY ALASKAN GUIDE

Capt. Dick Craine Tells of Experiences in the Yukon.

NATIVES ARE IMPROVIDENT

Skin Walrus and Put Them Back in the Water to Grow a New Hide—Nootichunoo.

Capt. Dick Craine, the naturalist and guide at the Canadian camp in the Sportsmen's Show, was in a reminiscent mood yesterday. He was talking to a few visitors about Indian superstitions and peculiarities of the Yukon country. Beside the counter that separated him from the passerby at the camp there stood several who pretended to examine trinkets from Alaska, but who were in reality listening to the yarns he spun. Soon they forgot to pretend, and there gathered a knot of auditors choking the aisle eager to catch his every word.

"You know there are many ideas about Alaska down here that are ridiculous to the man who is familiar with that country," he said. "For instance, take the weather. People have an idea that the Winters are terribly severe, and that a man going there suffers the greatest privations. I tell you you can go there, and you'll spend your first Winter as comfortaly as any native. You will begin to wonder when Winter comes on when this fearful 50 degrees below zero is coming along. You ask some one about it, and he tells you to look at the thermometer. You look and find it forty below, and you never knew it. You'll suffer more right here in New York in zero weather with a wind off the bay than you will in Alaska. And you'll freeze quicker here.

"You know there is no wind in the Yukon Valley. It's so still that the snow won't blow off the trees. Occasionally you will see a bit of a mist move slowly up the valley, but you can't feel any air on your hand. All you have to do to go through an Alaskan Winter without trouble is to keep your skin protected so the air don't touch it.

"The Indians that are exposed to the weather more than any one else suffer more from hunger and improvidence than any cold. When they die off it's from famine. The whalers who have gone up there have taught the Indian how to brew a home-made whisky out of fermented flour, molasses, and water. They drink that stuff, which they call nootichunoo, and whole villages stay beastly drunk, and when the hard season sets in they have no food to sustain them. I have known them to take their boats, which are made out of walrus hide covering, take the covers off and cut the hide up into small pieces and boil it into a soup and live on that.

"The boats are made in two sizes. The smaller is called kyak or canoe. The other is called omeak, which is a boat propelled by sail and big enough to carry thirty natives. They make the sails out of the walrus intestines. The walrus used are those that are found dead and thrown up on the beach or else are caught and skinned and turned back into the water, as the Indians say, "to grow a fresh hide." They will not kill a walrus if they can avoid it. That is one of their superstitions. They do not mind skinning it alive as long as they turn it back, and when remonstrated with seem to think they have not been cruel. Once in a famine on St. Lawrence Island, in the Bering Sea, the natives, after making soup of their canoes as I have recited, speared a walrus and purposely avoided killing it, skinned it, turned it back and made soup of the skin.

"The Indians' superstitions are the most peculiar and characteristic. Each island in the Bering Sea is inhabited with different tribes, and has customs and superstitions all their own. Buffalo Jones tells of an experience in attempting to get musk ox, which, like the walrus, is regarded as a sort of holy animal or at least is exempted from killing by some spirit sentiment, and they will not kill them even in dire extremity. But their superstition against allowing musk ox calves to be taken out of the country is such that when Jones caught two calves and brought them to the border, he says they slit their throats in the night to prevent them being carried off, all other means failing.

"The superstition of the Indian extends as well to bear, in this sense that from each bear they kill they cut off and preserve the nose. Even the fact that this depreciates the value of the skin one-half does not deter them, though they are notoriously a mercenary race. A superstition to overcome their cupidity must be pretty strong. They do the same with the skin of the musk ox.

"It is impossible to explain these superstitions or to account for them. The most incongruous things are done because of them. But it is a fact that they exist. A man could spend a lifetime studying them and still not exhaust the field. That is only one of the many attractions of the Alaskan country, and every man who loves nature and an open life never finds any other quite so attractive. If I were to chose now the land where I would end my days it would be along the Alaskan boundary or in the Yukon Valley."

Schick to Join New York A. C.

W. A. Schick, ex-intercollegiate champion sprinter, has become a New Yorker. He is engaged in business with one of the prominent banking institutions of the city. The love for athletics on the part of Schick has brought him in contact with many of the local amateurs, and it was said last night that he would in a short time become a member of the New York Athletic Club. Schick has been named as one of the American team of athletes for the contests at Athens.

Schick won the intercollegiate championship at 100 yards in 1904 and 1905. He repeatedly sprinted the distance in 9 4-5 seconds. He also won the 100 yards for four consecutive years in the Yale-Harvard dual meet in 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905. He was the Captain of the Harvard track team in the latter year. He also won the intercollegiate championship at 220 yards for two years, his best time being 21 2-5 seconds.

Hoppe Makes High Billiard Average.

Splendid averages were made in the billiard match between Willie Hoppe, the world's champion, and Peterson at Hoppe's Billiard Academy yesterday. The champion ran out his string of 300 in nine innings, averaging 33⅓, playing the 18.1 game, while Peterson, playing 18.2, scored 209 in the same number of innings, averaging 23 2-9. Hoppe's best inning was his last, when he ran 113 unfinished, while 79 and 44 were recorded in his eighth and fourth innings. Peterson's best was 86 in his sixth inning. He took the lead then and held it until Hoppe ran out his string in the final inning. The detailed score was:

Hoppe......	16	1	2	44	1	29	15	79	113—300
Peterson....	0	12	6	2	3	86	46	30	24—209

Willie Hoppe visited Paterson last evening and played Foss, the ex-amateur champion. Frank Hoppe met Peterson and was defeated by a score of 300 to 126. Peterson averaged 16¾ against Hoppe's 7 7-17, with a high run of 71 against Frank's 26.

Columbia Bowlers Win Trial Match.

Columbia's bowling team, which is to meet Pennsylvania, is getting down to business. Yesterday the Blue and White boys in preparation for this match with the Quakers rolled a three-game, five-man match with a picked team, defeating their oponents by 99 pins. Although the Harlem bowlers only won one game, the Columbia boys had to roll hard to win, but the Morningside collegians seem to be masters of the game, and finally came out victors. Summary:

NAVAL NIGHT AT THE GARDEN.

Officers of the Brooklyn Navy Yard Attend the Sportsman's Show.

Last night was Naval Night at the Sportsman's Show. Officials from the Brooklyn Navy Yard were visitors. Among the officers in the party were Capts. W. J. Baxter and W. H. Emory, Naval Constructor D. J. Nutting, Lieut. Robinson, and Lieutenant Commander Marbury Johnson. The party made a tour of the main floor of the Garden examining the motor boat devices and were seemingly much impressed by the display. The Garden was well crowded both afternoon and evening.

The two bear cubs that had been lost in transit from New Brunswick appeared at the Garden yesterday morning. Though they had suffered from long deprivation of food and were crying piteously when the box containing them arrived, they were none the worse for their prolonged confinement, and after a nap in the big cage provided for them in the Canadian camp they were frolicking about with their fellow who preceded them by two days like any trio of kittens.

The day marked by the addition to the ranks, also recorded one loss, and a severe one. The White House Stork, that has attracted so much attention from visitors, was an absentee, having been shipped to Connecticut to his new home in the lake on the estate of Fred Gallatin, Jr. The loss was in a measure offset by the arrival of a new flock of ducks, decoys, and other water fowl.

Some interest was aroused in the afternoon by the sight of two guides of the Virginia camp moving about the Garden enshrouded by three huge live snakes. One, a King snake, was fully eight feet long and about eight inches in diameter, striped and brilliantly colored. The other two were blacksnakes, long, slender, willowy bodies that wound about the hands and fingers of their bearer with wonderful knots and curves. They clung with a tenacity that was surprising to the clothing of the guides, and it was with difficulty that they could be dislodged when returned to their quarters on the island in the centre of the lagoon.

These three reptiles, with others of their ilk, have been unsuspected inhabitants of the island since the opening of the show. They illustrate what snakes are found in Virginia, and, of course, are harmless. They bite when aroused, piercing the skin with their fangs, but the fangs are not poisoned and have no power to do more than prick the victim. They live on insects and mice, eating at long intervals, the last meal having been enjoyed by the blacksnake last October, when he caught a mouse.

The endless variety of camp devices, utensils, equipment, and arms continue to hold the attention of the sportsmen who visit the show, and the tales of the guides in the various camps have a never-ending charm to all when they can be induced to open the flood gates of their inexhaustible supply of anecdotes.

The water sports again attracted much attention. The contests between the members of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps held yesterday resulted as follows:

Canoe Singles, Two Laps.—Won by Frederick Tewes, College Point; Frank Pendrill, New York, second.

50-Yard Swimming Match.—Won by Frederick Tewes, College Point; H. Kopff, Rockaway, second; L. Emanuel, Rockaway, third.

50-Yard Swimming Match.—Won by H. Kopff, Rockaway; Frederick Tewes, College Point, second; L. Emanuel, Rockaway, third.

Radtke's Good and Bad Day.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 28.—Jockey Radtke redeemed himself to-day after losing the first three races by winning the last three. Radtke was set down for three days by Starter Snyder for disobedience at the post. The feature of the card, the handicap, was won by Cutter, and caused no small amount of criticism. Cutter was out the day before, and ran an ordinary race.

200 to 1 Shot Nearly Won.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—Utica at 200 to 1 caused excitement by opening up a big gap in a field of fast two-year-olds at Oakland today, and barely losing to Grace G. The winner was fiercely driven down the stretch and won by a neck.

Another Cornell Athlete Laid Up.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 28.—It was learned today from Trainer Moakley that M. L. Simpson, one of the most promising distance runners at Cornell, is ill at his home with pneumonia, and that the prospects of his running this Spring are small. This is the second serious loss that the Ithacans have suffered in a few weeks, and it makes the track situation more critical than ever. Trainer Moakley intended to develop Simpson into a mile runner to take Munson's place, and his work in the indoor meets so far this season was very satisfactory.

AUTO RUN TO BOSTON AT OPENING OF SHOW

Three Cars of Exhibitors and Tourists to Leave March 10.

NOVEL PHILADELPHIA TRIP

French Tri-Car Preparing to Make Economy Test When Roads Are in Good Condition.

A number of New York automobilists who are going to attend the big show in Boston, which will open in that city on Saturday night, March 10, have made arrangements to hold an automobile run from this city to Boston, starting soon after 6 o'clock Saturday morning next week. A stop will be made at Hartford for luncheon, and the automobilists there are making arrangements to entertain the motor tourists while passing through their city. The Boston autoists and managers of the show are also planning a novel entertainment for the tourists during the evening of the opening of the exhibit.

Three cars are already prepared to make the run, but it is possible that the number may be increased provided the demand among New York automobilists who are desirous of going to Boston by motor car is greater than the carrying capacity of the three cars assured for the trip. One of the cars will be driven by Guy Vaughan, who held the 1,000-mile non-stop record last year until Charles Wridgway eclipsed it at the Empire City track. Vaughan will drive a forty horse power C. G. V. car. The other two cars will be English Daimlers, one being a thirty-five horse power machine, to be driven by J. E. Demar, and the other a forty-five horse power car, to be driven by W. Hardy.

The usual touring route to Boston will be followed, the distance being about 225 miles. The tourists will go through Greenwich, Stamford, Bridgeport, New Haven, and, after leaving Hartford, will go through Springfield and Worcester. It is expected that the cars will reach Boston by 7 o'clock in the evening, as the legal speed requirements will be carefully adhered to.

The Boston automobile show will be held in the Mechanics' Building, and every inch of space was taken weeks ago. With the exception of the two big National shows in this city and the Chicago show that followed immediately after, the Boston show will be the largest held since the auto show season opened. A large number of New York exhibitors will be present, and the show will last for one week.

This New York-Boston run will virtually mark the opening of the regular touring season. It will be the first organized run of the year, but as soon as the roads get in good condition formal and informal club runs and tests will follow in rapid order.

Plans are now being made by the local representatives of a French tri-car that has lately been introduced in the city to hold an economy run from New York to Philadelphia and back within a short time. The tri-cars are very popular in both England and France, thousands of them being used in the suburbs for pleasure purposes. They are also being very generally adopted for light delivery purposes on the same plan as was done to a limited extent a few years ago with tricycles. The tri-car in its appearance and construction resembles a motor cycle. It is made stronger and equipped to carry heavier weights.

The two cars of this type now in the city are known as the Austral cars. They have been imported by the Aster Company of 1,591 Broadway, and one has been used for over a month by the company in making light deliveries. The operator sits in the rear, while between the two forward wheels is suspended a wicker seat which accommodates the passenger. Their popularity in Europe in localities where there is no lack of good roads is due to the fact that these cars appeal to persons of moderate means, as they afford the making of pleasant trips through the country at very little expense. The car costs $550. It holds 2½ gallons of gasoline, sufficient to run over 70 miles, and is guaranteed to carry a weight of 750 pounds. The Austral cars are fitted with 4½ horse power motors and are air cooled. When not used for touring the seat can be removed and a large box to hold parcels for delivery substituted.

A. J. Myers, President of the American agency, said yesterday that he would make the run to Philadelphia as soon as the roads are in good touring condition. He will take with him as the passenger W. R. Coleman. The run will be conducted as an economy test, the purpose being to ascertain how cheaply and comfortably the little machines may be run on ordinary American roads.

LONG ISLAND AUTOISTS BUSY.

Prizes Offered for New Members—Exhibition of Cars Popular.

President Alfred Wilmarth of the Long Island Automobile Club, which maintains a garage for members as well as its club rooms at 360 to 366 Cumberland Street, Brooklyn, has formulated a plan to increase the membership to 500 by June 1. At present there are 340 members, a big increase during the past year. Mr. Wilmarth states that 1,700 automobile owners are registered from Brooklyn, and he is desirous of extending the usefulness of the club as well as making it mutually beneficial to motorists.

The Friday night entertainments that have been held for several weeks have been popular, particularly the exhibition of different cars. Every Friday night two or three different makes of cars are shown, and some member or representative from the factory or agency, if the cars are loaned, is present to explain the characteristics of the various machines. This instruction on different makes of automobiles has been very helpful. To-morrow night a Rainier and a Bliss car will be shown, and the Waltham-Orient agency in this city will send two or three models of their air cooled cars.

Two prizes have been offered to the members securing the largest number of new members during the year. Last season the winner of first prize got twenty-three. The initiation fee of $25 was waived some time ago, but when the membership reaches the 500 mark it will probably be restored.

The club garage is one of the valuable attributes of the club. The facilities for storing and repairing cars have been greatly improved since last Summer, and nearly all of the available storage room has been taken. The club will probably repeat its economy run this season.

REVOKE HAVANA CONCESSION.

Cuban Officials Cancel the Franchise of an American Company.

HAVANA, Feb. 28.—A decree prepared by Secretary of the Interior Freyre Andrade has been signed by President Palma, revoking the ninety-nine year concession granted by the Havana City Council to the Havana Subway Company, a Delaware corporation, permitting the construction of conduits for wires, &c., throughout the city.

The original concession required that the work be completed in two years. The company failed to fulfill this condition, partly because it became involved in litigation. The Council recently granted an extension of six months, but this the Secretary of the Interior, by the authority of President Palma, revoked, and the concession was declared void. This action has rendered useless much material brought by the company to Cuba since work was suspended. The company had no knowledge of the contemplated revocation of its concession until the decree was issued. The company has now presented the matter before the American Legation in the hope that Minister Morgan's representation may secure it a hearing without formal recourse to the Government at Washington.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—Under almost the same conditions as the previous day wheat displayed a different action, and at the close instead of being higher was ⅛ to ⅜c under the close of Tuesday. This change of front was largely due to the fact that short interests had been greatly reduced. In fact, it was believed by many that the market has not been so well evened up in a long time. Short sellers covered Tuesday with good profits. The opening was practically unchanged from the previous night, and reflected a steadiness that had as its basis better Liverpool cables. In the afternoon there was some good buying at Chicago, but Western markets all showed considerable weakness. The cash market was easy with sales of ten loads on export account. No. 2 red was quoted at 86¼c, elevator, and 89c nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 91c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—Trade in the corn market was slower than usual, and the range of prices narrow, yet revealing a fairly steady tone until near the close when it developed more or less easiness with wheat. Seaboard clearances dropped off to 183,000 bushels, but interior receipts were a little more than half those of last year. Early steadiness in the market and a slight advance over the previous night were due to the slight advance at Liverpool and room covering. For the balance of the day prices showed little change from Tuesday except in the last half hour, when they dropped off. Export sales consisted of seven loads. The cash market in New York closed steady at 48½c, elevator, for No. 2; do, free on board, afloat, 48c; No. 2 white, 49c, and No. 2 yellow, 48c, free on board afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was more active yesterday and ruled firmer, the close being at a net advance of 10@18 points. Sales were estimated at 300,000 bales.

The opening was firm at an advance of 9@12 points in response to higher cables. The market worked gradually higher, and in the early afternoon was about 19@21 points net higher on the active months. The reports of a continued big spot demand, smaller interior receipts, and prospects for unsettled weather in the Eastern belt made a strong argument in favor of the market, but did not seem to be attracting much outside demand, and the bull party has not yet recovered confidence in the market owing to the absence of Southern support.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

MORRIS RUBIN.—Morris Rubin of 134 Avenue C, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $1,529 and no assets.

George Hiram Mann, attorney for employes of the United Heating Company, informs THE TIMES that his clients offered to pay the creditors dollar for dollar and to give the principal stockholder a small bonus in return for the stock and good-will. The principal stockholder, he says, has refused this offer.

EDWIN C. HEATHCOTE.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Edwin C. Heathcote, wholesale dealer in jewelry at 1 Maiden Lane, by David Mayer, a creditor, for $1,3?9, for diamonds sold to him. It was alleged that he is insolvent, and in the past three months has transferred money and property to certain creditors. Heathcote is the jeweler who said he lost a package containing $10,000 worth of diamonds in a Brooklyn Bridge car a few weeks ago. He offered to settle at 45 cents on the dollar in cash and notes. The offer was not accepted.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

New Record in Structural Steel Likely—New York a Heavy Buyer.

New structural steel orders continue to flow into the mills at a rate which confirms the earlier promise that new high records will be established during the Summer months. It has been estimated by one structural steel manufacturer that the business in sight in the principal centres aggregates 500,000 tons. The Iron Age says:

> The pig iron markets are dull, so far as new buying is concerned, in nearly all markets, and what is very much like a deadlock between buyers and sellers prevails. It is accompanied by the indications of weakness, which are created by a small minority of uneasy sellers. Some consumers believe that the top has been reached, and are withholding orders.
>
> Current consumption is enormous, and in spite of the record-breaking output stocks are still shrinking in quantity. Shipments of finished material from the steel works and rolling mills are unparalleled in the history of the industry. Thus the United States Steel Corporation during February—from the 1st to the 17th—shipped to customers a total of 494,500 gross tons.
>
> The pressure for steel continues undiminished, and so far as the Central West is concerned the situation is likely to be aggravated by the fact that the Ohio mill will go on steel rails in the middle of next month.
>
> The outlook for the structural mills continues brilliant. It is estimated by the highest authority that builders and contractors in the metropolitan district alone will place, before May 1, a total of at least 200,000 tons of shapes, and that there is a good prospect that there will be added to this 300,000 tons more before the Summer is over.
>
> During February the American Bridge Company closed 60,000 tons. The Pennsylvania Railroad is understood to be in the market for 25,000 tons of rails in addition to its former purchases. The 'Frisco system has placed 11,000 tons. With the exception of cast scrap, old material is weak in all the leading markets.

The Iron Trade Review will say to-day:

> News of the last few days concerning the threatened coal strike, although somewhat conflicting, has given much reason for hoping that there will be no cessation of mining in either anthracite or bituminous regions. While the active interest of the President and other powerful influences will undoubtedly be regretted by some who have believed that no concessions should be made to the miners, the overwhelming sentiment of the country will heartily indorse the efforts which have been made to prevent industrial war.
>
> The pig iron market continues to be quiet and is dull in some places, particularly in Southern iron, although very heavy shipments have been made from the South during the week on account of the advance of 25 cents per ton in freight rates effective March 1.
>
> Specifications on sheet contracts are very heavy and mills are running to their full capacity, so far as the supply of semi-finished material will permit.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Copper metal for future delivery made further gains in London yesterday and Tuesday's advance was maintained in the local market. Trade advices from England report that buyers continue to avoid taking the metal at present prices as far as possible; but that small orders put out through necessity have absorbed practically all the metal available for immediate delivery. Producers, recognizing the inherent strength of their position, make no concessions to bring out the orders which they know must come sooner or later.

Spot copper closed in London yesterday at £78 15s., a recession of 2s. 6d. from Tuesday's closing. Futures closed at £77 5s., an advance of 7s. 6d. over Tuesday's last price.

The prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of Tuesday:

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Break—Call Money Rates 4½@6¾ Per Cent.

Hill, Copper, and Smelting Shares Fall Abruptly — Time Money, 5½ Per Cent.

Continued losses by the banks to the Sub-Treasury, the total of this drain already reaching above $5,000,000, and a sharp rise in the rates demanded for both call and time money, coupled with fresh disappointment over the hitch in the ore deal negotiations, a development which made the outlook less bright for the materialization of many of the minor "deals" upon which speculators for the rise have been in large measure relying, found reflection yesterday in a stock market which in the morning hours was exceedingly near the point of demoralization. Prices of the Hill shares and of other issues, such as American Smelting, National Lead, Tennessee Coal and Iron, Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron, and Anaconda and Amalgamated Copper, which have been the subject of roseate reports, fell away point after point, while the apprehension bred by this spectacle prompted hurried liquidation and tumbling prices in all sections of the list, the selling movement promoting a volume of transactions which ran 500,000 shares or more beyond that of many days in the recent past. Of the issues mentioned, Great Northern fell 7⅝ points, Northern Pacific 10½ points, National Lead 7½ points, American Smelting 4¾ points, Anaconda Copper 11½ points, Amalgamated Copper 2½ points, Tennessee Coal and Iron 6¼ points, and Sloss-Sheffield 3½ points. To the uneasiness which naturally followed such breaks in stocks which have been more or less pivotal, there was added the pressure brought to bear upon the general market by speculators for the fall. United States Steel shares, in spite of the fact that interviews with prominent officers of the Steel Corporation revealed fully the evil effects which would follow a strike in the bituminous fields upon the business of that and other steelmakers, as well as manufacturing plants generally, were comparatively firm. The Metropolitan issues were the sole shares in a list of fifty active stocks to close the day with advances, a development for which there was no adequate explanation. Consolidated Gas fell again following the action of the Assembly, which, independent of the recent decree of the State Gas Commission, passed a measure yesterday establishing the price of gas at 80 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

The firmness in money rates was directly due, of course, to the unusual losses which the banks are now undergoing to the Sub-Treasury. A drain of over $5,000,000 in the brief period which has elapsed since the publication of the last bank statement is an exceptional occurrence for this time of the year, and when it happens with surplus reserves standing lower than they have been in many years, a quick response in money rates is entirely natural. Yesterday banking institutions were able to put out millions of dollars at 6 per cent., a rate for day-to-day loans which has not been attained at this season in many years. The same statement applies also to the 5½ per cent. rate which was paid by borrowers of money for periods running up to five months. The direct result of these rates, of course, was the decline of 25 points in demand sterling, this fall indicating a resumption of the placing here of foreign funds, which were so important an influence upon the money situation in the second week of the present month. An acceptable adjustment of Moroccan differences and the abstention of Russia from the European money markets, coupled with a continuation of favorable trade balances might limit, through receipts of gold, the unpleasant promises of our own money market. Interior banks were calling upon Chicago yesterday for funds, and our own banks are gaining practically nothing on transactions with the interior, so that there is little prospect of permanent relief from this quarter. Liquidation of the nature of that which went on yesterday is in itself, of course, a corrective of money market ills.

LEATHER TRUST'S GOOD YEAR.

Profits Increased Nearly $2,000,000 Over 1904—Annual Election.

The annual meetings of the Central Leather Company and its chief subsidiary company, the United States Leather Company, were held in Jersey City yesterday. In answer to criticisms of stockholders it was stated that reduction was made in the number of Directors from 27 to 9 simply to obtain greater efficiency. The following nine Directors were chosen: John J. Lapham, Samuel P. Davidge, Walter G. Garrett, A. Augustus Healy, Edward C. Hoyt, Eugene Horton, P. A. Valentine, Henry P. Darlington, and Nathan Allen.

The retiring officers were re-elected with the exception of Josiah T. Tubby, who was succeeded by Frederick E. Knapp. John J. Lapham was elected a member of the Executive Committee in place of Samuel P. Davidge.

The United States Leather Company's annual report shows profits for the year of $6,178,456, compared with $4,402,564 in 1904. The statement of the Central Leather Company shows net earnings of $1,205,790 for one-third of the year up to Dec. 31 last. After deducting dividends, &c., there remained undivided profits of $118,038.

The new Board of Directors includes E. C. Hoyt, P. A. Valentine, J. Ogden Armour, L. C. Krauthoff, A. A. Healy, W. G. Garrett, Eugene Horton, Samuel P. Davidge, Nathan Allen, L. H. Lapham, John J. Lapham, Paul M. Warburg, C. S. Horton, C. W. Allen, Henry P. Darlington, and George W. Childs. The old officers were re-elected.

Roulette Wheels Not Assessable as "Toys"—Other Decisions.

In a decision by I. F. Fischer the Board of United States General Appraisers denied yesterday a claim filed by G. W. Sheldon & Co. of Chicago, and held that pocket roulette wheels fashioned like watches cannot be deemed "toys" under the schedules of the Dingley tariff law. The Collector assessed duty on the articles at the rate of 45 per cent. under the provision in the tariff law for manufactures of metal. In affirming the assessment made by the Custom House authorities the board holds that the gambling devices "are not fit or suitable for the amusement of children," and therefore cannot be admitted at the rate of 35 per cent.

In a decision by Judge Somerville the board overruled a contention raised by the Waldorf-Astoria Segar Company of New York. In making entry of cigars from Cuba the importers added to make market value an item consisting of the Cuban internal revenue tax of $2 per thousand cigars. The importers alleged that the item had been added under duress exerted by customs officers. In dismissing the protest Judge Somerville says there is nothing to show that either Collector Stranahan or Appraiser Whitehead exerted any pressure to compel the inclusion of the tax in the dutiable value of the merchandise.

General Appraiser McClelland wrote a decision for the board sustaining a claim made by John Reeve of Newport, Vt. It was decided that Canadian fir balsam is entitled to free entry.

TRANSACTIONS IN FEBRUARY.

Transactions in stocks on the New York Stock Exchange for the month of February aggregated 21,687,579 shares, a decrease of 16,860,289 shares as compared with the previous month. Some of the latter was due to the lessened number of business days as well as to the occurrence of two holidays, but the daily average of transactions last month, excluding Saturdays, was barely 1,000,000 shares, while in January it was 1,750,000 shares. There were only nine days in February on which the total exceeded 1,000,000, as against twenty-three in January. The heaviest total, 1,670,081 occurred on the very first day of the month, and business thereafter was on an irregularly decreasing scale until the 23d, when the sales were only 624,153 shares, the smallest total since Oct. 18 of last year. Some increase was shown in the latter days of the month, particularly yesterday, when the total was close to 1,500,000 shares. The heaviest dealings for the two business hours of Saturday were 985,540, on the 17th, and the smallest, 314,898, on the 24th. Last month's total of 21,687,579 shares compares with 38,547,868 shares in January, 31,408,900 in December, 26,884,067 in November, 17,742,534 in October, 16,002,702 in September, 20,253,170 in August, 13,018,538 in July, 12,536,767 in June, 20,538,324 in May, 29,372,190 in April, and 29,063,353 in March of last year.

The following table gives the total transactions in stocks for February, and since Jan. 1 this year, as compared with corresponding periods in each year back to 1889:

MARCH 1906

C., H. & D. RAILROAD DEFAULTS ON ITS NOTES

Interest Due To-day, but It Will Not Be Paid.

ISSUE WAS FOR $15,000,000

J. P. Morgan & Co.'s Offer to Settle Conditionally Refused—Likely to be Paid Ultimately.

The half yearly interest on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton collateral trust 4½ per cent. notes, which falls due to-day, will in all probability not be paid. This was admitted yesterday by bankers closely associated with the flotation of the note issue. The interest is payable by the Central Trust Company and it was said late yesterday afternoon that no funds had been provided for the purpose. Bond houses interested in the notes who made inquiry at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. concerning the payment of the interest were informed that inquiries had been sent to Judson Harmon, receiver of the road, but that he had not yet informed the firm whether the money for the interest payment on the notes would be provided or not. The receiver has said on several occasions recently that he would pay the interest on these notes if he had the money, but beyond that he has given no information on the subject.

The Morgan interests in the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, who control practically all the company's common stock, have made several offers for a settlement of the note issue, it was learned yesterday. One of these offers took the form of a proposed agreement to pay the interest on the bonds and to meet them in full at maturity, provided certain collateral now pledged under the notes were released by the note holders. The proposal that the representatives of the note holders considered fairest was an offer to issue in place of the notes an equal amount of C., H. and D. consolidated mortgage 4½ per cent. bonds with a bonus in cash and with the proviso that the Morgan interests would strengthen the general position of the company by providing between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 in cash for improvements. This offer was regarded as perfectly fair, but it was not accepted for the reason that the note holders are not individual investors, but for the most part banking institutions which purchased the notes as a short-time investment. These institutions did not care to accept long-term bonds in exchange for the three-and-a-half-year notes. Bankers familiar with the details of the note issue said yesterday that practically the entire issue of $15,000,000 of these notes was held in large lots ranging from $250,000 upward. Half of the issue was placed here and half abroad.

Even though the interest on the notes be not paid to-day, no formal steps toward declaring the road in default on this issue could be taken until the end of sixty days. This period of grace is given the company to provide for the necessary funds for the payment of interest.

Bankers interested in this particular issue of securities said yesterday that they felt entirely confident of the position of the notes, and that they had every reason to believe that the holders would receive their entire principal and interest whatever action might be taken at this time in reference to the payment of the half-yearly interest. It is said that J. P. Morgan, just before sailing for Europe, gave his personal assurance to the noteholders that they would be taken care of. These notes were issued last year to the amount of $15,000,000 and are secured by the deposit of $15,000,000 4½ per cent. general consolidated mortgage bonds of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railway Company and of $7,750,000 of the 4 and 5 per cent. preferred stocks of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railway, in addition to 7,501 shares of the Southwestern Construction Company and $375,000 of bonds of subsidiary companies. The Construction Company stock represents the joint ownership with the Southern Railway of a controlling interest in the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway. The noteholders claim that in the event of any default on the notes the right will revert to them of voting the preferred stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, which is pledged as part collateral for the notes. If this claim stands, it will give the noteholders an important voice in the management of the company, so far as this can be exerted by the stockholders, during the life of the receivership. The stock control of the property now lies absolutely with the Morgan interests, who acquired all the common stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railway, which was taken back from the Erie Railroad.

U. R. I. CO. DEAL COMPLETED.

$20,500,000 Stock of the Philadelphia Company Acquired.

Stock of the Philadelphia Company to the amount of 411,000 shares of a total par value of $20,500,000, it was announced yesterday, has been deposited under the plan for the purchase of a controlling interest in the company by the United Railways Investment Company of San Francisco. The United Railways Investment Company at a meeting of the Board of Directors yesterday determined to purchase this entire amount of stock. Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. have arranged to purchase at $95 a share, at the option of the depositing stockholders, all the common stock of the United Railways Investment Company, which will be issued in exchange for the 411,000 shares of Philadelphia Company's stock.

The certificates of deposit representing the stock of the Philadelphia Company will bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. until May 1, and after that date interest at the rate of 5 per cent. will be paid on the bonds to be issued in exchange for the Philadelphia Company's stock. The cash portion of the purchase price will also carry interest at the rate of 6 per cent. from May 1 until the final adjustment of the transaction.

Bankers interested in the transaction figured yesterday that the terms of exchange, including the interest carried by the certificates, give the certificates of deposit a present cash value of $55 a share for the fifty-dollar shares of Philadelphia Company stock.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Yesterday's decline in prices was the most violent that has occurred since the break which came at the end of the January boom, and the market as a whole reached a level materially lower than that on which the last general selling movement was arrested. The bear party succeeded in dislodging stocks in considerable amounts. The volume of transactions was greatly increased as compared with the average for the month of February. A good deal of the selling was highly suggestive of pool liquidation. Thus the Guggenheim stocks, which hitherto have been protected in a very determined manner, gave way sharply. National Lead suffered a break of 10 points, and American Smelting had a maximum decline of 6 points. There was, of course, a lot of commission house selling, but it was the appearance of exhausted support in stocks which had been maintained at high prices by pools and cliques that gave the market its look of vulnerability. Interest charges must have been running heavily against some of these pools, and now that bullish enthusiasm has gone out of the market they are evidently unwilling to take stocks on declining prices as freely as they did some time ago.

The growing scarcity of money for speculative employment has apparently given rise to conservatism in quarters where until recently there was maintained a pretense of absolute indifference to that feature of the situation. Many inexperienced observers doubtless are puzzled to know why those who carried a bull campaign through the month of December, when call money got as high as 125 per cent., should find it inexpedient to bull stocks at this time with time money worth 5½ per cent. and call money 5 to 6 per cent. The difference is that in December the market was at a high pitch of enthusiasm, and the bull leaders believed that the speculation would run into a period of very easy money after the first of the year. The prohibitive rates that obtained for money in December, therefore, were regarded merely as a temporary premium on speculation. Moreover, in December, most of the pools were still operating with time money, which had cost them 4 per cent. or less. After the first of the year there was a period of easy money, but it was of much briefer duration than the bull interests expected it to be. In the January boom some of the very shrewdest people got out of their stocks, knowing that easy money was not going to last. Then, when the pools came to renew their time loans they found it impossible to procure fresh accommodations on the old terms. Many of them came out of the January boom still loaded up with stocks, facing an indeterminate period of higher interest rates than those on which their operations were originally cast, and a market in which speculative enthusiasm had all flattened out. It was not a cheerful prospect; it evidently has led in the last few days to some unprofitable liquidation.

⁂

The Gates crowd turned openly bearish yesterday, and not only sold stocks heavily on its own account, but advised others to sell as diligently as they knew how. On Monday the Gates following was urged to load up with Union Pacific on the advance to 154, and the Gates crowd set the example by trying to buy up all the Union Pacific in sight in Monday's market. It was reported on Tuesday to be taking profits in Union Pacific and other stocks, and yesterday it sold perhaps 20,000 shares of Union Pacific in the first hour. On Monday John W. Gates delivered himself of some very bullish views. "With grain prospects so good," said he, "and industries, particularly steel, thriving as they never thrived before, one cannot help feeling optimistic." The only logical inference one could have drawn from the extreme bearish views promulgated from Gates sources yesterday, accompanied by heavy selling of stocks, was that within forty-eight hours grain prospects had changed completely, and the industries, especially steel, had ceased to thrive. It is the privilege of a speculator to be inconsistent. He is under no obligation to hold one set of opinions over night. But when one sets himself up for an oracle and backs his avowed sentiments by buying or selling stocks on a very large scale, thereby effecting rapid price fluctuations, he submits his operations to public scrutiny.

There are several very prominent speculative houses in the Street whose methods can be understood only on the supposition that they are intended to produce commissions. These houses are bullish one day and bearish the next. Each has its following, or clientele, and is capable of influencing an enormous volume of trading. In at least one case the interests of the house itself are so merged with the private interests of the speculating partners that nobody can tell where it ceases to be a matter of commissions and becomes a question of using the clients to help the partners make their turn in the market. The speculating partners take hold of something for a turn of three or four points, and when they have bought their line the house suddenly becomes very enthusiastic about that particular stock and touts it to its clients as an alluring speculation. The clients buy and the partners sell. Again, the partners look over the books and find that the house is heavily long of certain stocks. They put out a short line and then get very bearish. While they are scaring the clients out they buy for their private account.

⁂

It seems perfectly obvious that no combination of speculators can make money buying stocks one day as high as possible and selling them the next day as low as possible, but that is precisely what certain speculative houses appear to do. The fact that they have been doing it for years and continue to do it shows that there must be a hidden profit in it somewhere—either in the commissions that fall to the house or in the private accounts of the speculating partners. The wonder is that they can keep a following. On this point a cynic might say that the credulity of the speculative public is past all understanding.

⁂

There was some very good buying of the Hill stocks yesterday. It was accompanied by a report that Mr. Hill had been prevailed upon to return and reopen the ore deal negotiations.

⁂

There is evidence of a definite bear crowd in the market. For a long time bearish opinion has been unorganized and leaderless. The room crowd has been bearish for several weeks, finding the lines of least resistance to lie on the short side; but operations of this character do not pretend to the dignity of a campaign. It is now understood that several very aggressive operators have taken a position on the bear side. One of them is Harry Weil, who will be remembered as one of the bear operators who overstayed the decline in 1903. He is a man of considerable resourcefulness, and is preferably a bear. His talents run that way. The uptown crowd came into the market yesterday expecting an attack to be made upon Amalgamated Copper. That was the stock that everybody had been tipped to sell. It is something new to get bearish tips. They have been out of circulation for nearly two years.

⁂

The heaviest speculative selling in yesterday's market converged upon stocks in which the bull account might be supposed to be vulnerable, notably Union Pacific, the United States Steel shares, and Amalgamated Copper, with side attacks upon National Lead and American Smelting and Refining. Amalgamated Copper broke nearly 3½ points. Although Union Pacific and the Steel stocks gave way sharply under pressure, they declined in an orderly manner, being less subject to wide fluctuations between sales. Steel common was stoutly supported for an hour or so at 41, but the selling at length overcame the support, and the stock broke to 40⅜. It closed at 40⅞. Union Pacific, in spite of the good buying on a scale down reported by brokers, went lower than on the break at the end of January, touching 149⅛. The extreme weakness of the Guggenheim stocks, notably National Lead, adversely affected sentiment.

⁂

When the general list is under pressure there is a very poor market for the so-called "cliqued stocks," as well as for specialties in which the bull account has gone stale.

⁂

The recovery which occurred in the last hour was rather disappointing in view of the violence of the decline. Either the bear crowd was in no haste to take its profits or the stocks were readily forthcoming when anybody bid for them. The most discouraging feature of the market was the inadequacy of the support where selling pressure developed.

⁂

Amalgamated Copper is the stock in which nearly everybody expects to see a contest. The bear crowd is evidently making a target of it, and from the ease with which it yielded yesterday and the feebleness of its recovery after an abrupt break of nearly 3½ points, it might be supposed that the bull account was somewhat vulnerable. Yesterday's attack doubtless increased the actual short interest materially. In spite of an active borrowing demand for the stock, it has been lending slightly over the ruling money rate, which would indicate that the borrowing has represented a technical rather than an actual short interest. The position of the Heinze contingent in the stock is still uncertain. The belief has been encouraged that its holdings had been heavily scaled down, which is, doubtless, true, but there is probably a good deal left in the Butte crowd's accounts. Speculative sentiment on the stock has become very bearish. A large proportion of the selling yesterday was for short account.

MORGAN IN CANADIAN BANK.

German Bank Also Extends Its Interests Across the Border.

It was reported in Wall Street yesterday that J. P. Morgan & Co., in connection with the Dresdner Bank, which is the firm's German representative, and for which reciprocally Morgan & Co. are the American agents and attorneys, had taken the proposed $2,000,000 increase of the stock of the Sovereign Bank of Canada. The report excited great interest because the Morgan influence has hitherto stopped sharply at the Canadian border. The Sovereign Bank is opening branches along the line of the Canadian Pacific, and this fact was taken as giving added significance to the Morgan and Dresdner Bank interest in the concern.

No confirmation of the story could be obtained at the office of Morgan & Co., but it was learned that when the bank was founded, only a year or two ago, Morgan interests took a small block of the $2,000,000 capital. Soon afterward the Dresdner Bank, looking for a Canadian connection, also bought a small holding of the stock.

The Sovereign Bank has a total paid-up capital of $1,617,322, a reserve fund of $479,330, total liabilities of $12,799,373, and assets of $14,944,704.

Thomas, son of the late President, was elected permanent President and General Manager of the road; H. F. Smith, Traffic Manager, was chosen Vice President and General Traffic Manager, and Major E. NEW CANADIAN ROAD'S FUNDS.

Increase of Stock to $50,000,000—Debentures to be Issued.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28.—It is announced on authority of President C. M. Hayes that the Grand Trunk Pacific has increased its capital stock from $45,000,000 to $50,000,000. Instead of $20,000,000 preferred stock $25,000,000 debenture stock will be issued.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway recently began work on an extension of the Grand Trunk system to the Pacific Coast. The new line is to be built partly by the railway company and partly by the Canadian Government. Speyer & Co. last year purchased $15,000,000 bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific's subsidiary companies, the proceeds of which are being used in construction.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Slump in Curb Stocks Follows Break on 'Change.

Losses General Throughout the List—Interborough Chief Loser—United Copper Down.

Prices on the curb reflected the break on the Exchange yesterday, and losses were general throughout the list. Interborough Rapid Transit was one of the heaviest sufferers, selling down to 219 and closing at 220, a net loss for the day on sales of 2,500 shares of 5 points. The merger stocks, on the contrary, were well supported, and remained practically stationary. In Copper the drop was almost universal, and varied from fractions to 2⅝ in United. This stock, which opened at 72½, sold down to 69, but recovered before the close to 70⅞. Industrials fell off in about the same measure. Mackay Companies common lost a point after sales of 2,500, closing at 60¼. Bethlehem Steel, both common and preferred, lost ½ point, as did International Mercantile Marine. Havana Tobacco preferred sold down from 37 to 35, and Houston Oil preferred lost 1½ points on the day's trading.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company has been called for March 30 to consider an increase of $1,000,000 in the preferred stock.

The annual report of the Empire Steel Company shows net earnings of $135,751, and, after allowance for improvements, depreciation of mining property, &c., net profits of $91,511. Out of this $75,000 was paid in dividends on the preferred stock. The retiring Directors were re-elected, Archer H. Brown filling the vacancy caused by the death of Anderson Fowler.

The stockholders of the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company voted yesterday to increase the Directors from seven to nine. These were elected: Ferdinand Sulzberger, M. F. Sulzberger, German Sulzberger, J. N. Sulzberger, Frederick Joseph, M. H. Joseph, Nathan Grabenheimer, Sigmund Grabenheimer, and Samuel Grabenheimer. The new Directors are German Sulzberger and Samuel Grabenheimer. The old officers were re-elected.

The firm of Lohrke, Rosen & Co. will be dissolved to-day. Felix Rosen, George S. Stillman, Lion Gardiner and J. Nevett Steele, Jr., have formed a copartnership as Rosen, Stillman & Co., which will take over the business of Lohrke, Rosen & Co., retaining the present offices at 30 Pine Street.

J. F. Fairlamb, who has been auditor of passenger accounts of the New York Central for years, has been appointed General Passenger Agent of that road. The appointment takes effect to-day.

The stockholders of the Rutland Transit Company, a subsidiary company of the Rutland Railroad, which is controlled by the New York Central, authorized yesterday a bond issue of $1,000,000. The proceeds of these bonds are to be used to develop the Rutland's grain business on the great lakes between Chicago, Milwaukee, and other ports and Ogdensburg, N. Y.

LITTLE EXCHANGE TO MOVE.

Members Want a Change, but Will Get New Quarters First.

The Board of Directors of the Consolidated Exchange, at a meeting yesterday afternoon, discussed the plan to sell the Exchange building and its leasehold on the Exchange site. After the meeting it was announced that the members of the board were of the opinion that it would be wise to dispose of the present Exchange under the terms offered.

No definite action, however, was taken at the meeting. The deal will be held open while the Directors proceed to negotiate for other Exchange quarters.

The Consolidated Exchange's building, on the northeast corner of Broadway and Exchange Place, occupies ground held by the Exchange under a lease which has six more years to run, with the right to renew the lease for 21 years more.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—The local market, in sympathy with New York, was weak and lower. The most active stocks were the arbitrage issues, or those shares in which New York has been an important factor for some time past. Lehigh Valley broke 2½ points, but subsequently made partial recovery. Cambria Steel was forced off ⅝, but it made up the loss in the late trading.

Philadelphia Rapid Transit opened strong, but on comparatively light trading declined 1¼ and rallied rather feebly. Other declines were Bell Telephone ¾, General Asphalt common and preferred ½ each, Guarantee Trust 4½, Keystone Telephone ½, the receipts 1, Philadelphia Company ¾, United Gas Improvement 1⅛, Westmoreland Coal 1, and Western New York and Pennsylvania 1½. The selling came largely from traders whose margins were exhausted, or operators who sold on the idea that they could get their stocks back cheaper.

Commission houses did not encourage buying, even on the decline, expressing doubt as to the immediate future of the money market.

Total sales, 40,256 shares.

ONE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS

is the value of the mineral output of Nevada to date, a sum so vast as to be almost incomprehensible, yet if the reports of the best mining engineers in the country are correct, only a beginning has been made, and the next ten years will witness such a development of Southern Nevada's mines as the world has never known, with a mineral output so stupendous as will make the above figures seem small by comparison.

ALREADY THE BULLFROG DISTRICT has shipped more ore to the smelters than was produced on the Comstock in the first year of its history, and that, too, with a freight rate of TWO AND A HALF CENTS A POUND!

WITH THE ADVENT OF THE RAILROADS (three different lines are now under construction to Bullfrog, and the "Clark Road," which is laying its rails at the rate of two miles per day, will be completed in May) there will be such an increased output of gold that no figures of comparison can avail.

NO CAMP IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD HAS PRODUCED SO MANY BIG MINES IN SO SHORT A SPACE OF TIME AS BULLFROG, AND THERE HAS NOT BEEN A FAILURE IN THE PROVEN MINERAL DISTRICT.

TO GET IN ON THE GROUND FLOOR of a company operating here is almost equivalent to the practical certainty of 1,000 per cent. return on your investment. (If you question this, look up the records of ALL the companies operating in this District for six months past.)

THE PROPERTIES OF THE PITTSBURGH BULLFROG MINING CORPORATION, LTD., are believed to be an extension of the great Montgomery Shoshone Vein, which in nine months has been developed from practically a raw prospect to having over $8,000,000 of ore in sight.

THE RHYOLITE OUTCROP IN WHICH THIS VEIN is carried extends across our property for 3,000 feet, with its values proven to within 300 feet of our line, and our belief that its values extend through is shown in the strongest possible manner, our Directors and their friends having subscribed for 500,000 shares out of the total capitalization of 1,000,000 before offering a share for sale, and so in becoming a stockholder you become an equal partner on the basis of a share for share participation in the profits.

WE BELIEVE THERE IS NOT A MINING COMPANY in existence whose shares present a more ideal investment than ours. This is a strong statement, but an examination into the facts will warrant it.

OUR PROPERTY IS LOCATED IN A PROVEN MINERAL ZONE; the company is officered by experienced men of unquestioned integrity; the properties are fully paid for and one-half of the entire capital stock has been set aside for working capital.

FULL REPORTS AT REGULAR INTERVALS will be sent all stockholders showing disposition of funds and progress of work.

For the purpose of continuing the development work now in progress, a limited issue of stock is offered at the price of which is subject to advance without notice as developments proceed.

SUBSCRIPTIONS BY MAIL should be accompanied by check to the order of this corporation, at the rate of 35 cents per share. Minimum subscription accepted—one hundred shares.

Public notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department, at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three commissioners in the above entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. A description of the route and general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York:

In the Borough of Manhattan: From the Williamsburg Bridge the route passes underground in Delancey Street, near Norfolk, and then runs west under Delancey Street to the Bowery, and under the proposed extension of Delancey Street to the corner of Centre and Grand Streets. The line then continues southerly through Centre Street and William Street.

Provision is made for three tunnels, which may be described as the Old Slip Tunnel, the Maiden Lane Tunnel, and the Beekman Street Tunnel.

The route of the Old Slip Tunnel is under William Street and Old Slip.

The Maiden Lane Tunnel begins at the corner of William Street and Liberty Street, and then passes under Maiden Lane.

The Beekman Street Tunnel passes under Beekman Street.

Each of these three tunnels passes under the East River to the easterly boundary of the County of New York.

There are several spurs forming a part of this route. One spur begins at Grand and Centre Streets in Manhattan, and runs west under Grand Street and Desbrosses Street to the Desbrosses Street ferry. Another spur forms a connection, by means of a line under Canal Street, with the Manhattan end of the Manhattan Bridge. A third connects with the City Hall loop of the present subway by means of a line under Beekman Street.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of commissioners who shall determine after public hearing of all parties interested whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways, (as this Board will ask that it shall be,) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

Marlborough-Blenheim

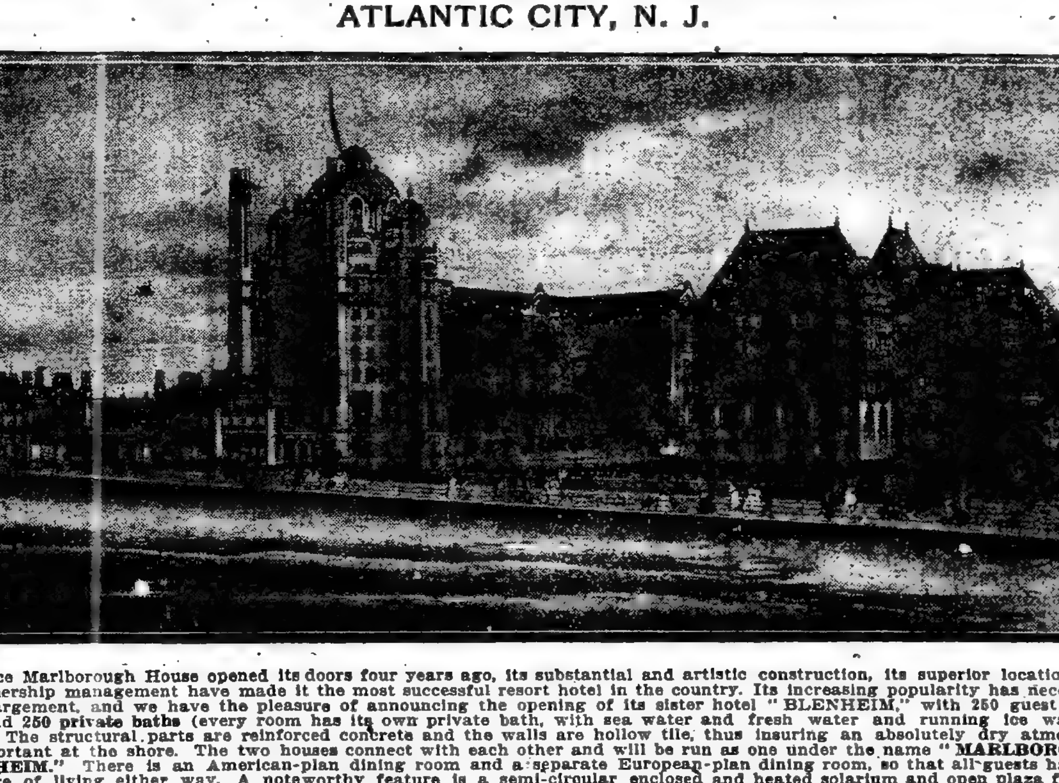
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

CAPACITY 1100



Since Marlborough House opened its doors four years ago, its substantial and artistic construction, its superior location, and its ownership management have made it the most successful resort hotel in the country. Its increasing popularity has necessitated enlargement, and we have the pleasure of announcing the opening of its sister hotel "BLENHEIM," with 250 guest chambers and 250 private baths (every room has its own private bath, with sea water and fresh water and running ice water in each.) The structural parts are reinforced concrete and the walls are hollow tile, thus insuring an absolutely dry atmosphere so important at the shore. The two houses connect with each other and will be run as one under the name "MARLBOROUGH-BLENHEIM." There is an American-plan dining room and a separate European-plan dining room, so that all guests have the privilege of living either way. A noteworthy feature is a semi-circular enclosed and heated solarium and open plaza fronting along the ocean and overlooking the Boardwalk. As heretofore high-class music will be a feature throughout the year. Golf privileges.

MANHATTAN.
FOR SALE.

Forgotten for a Century.

Land conveyed in 1773 for the use of the society of Quakers, was reconveyed in 1855 and a condition in the old deed overlooked.

Nearly fifty years later the heirs of the parties signing the deed in 1773 sought the enforcement of the original condition. Their contention was sustained and the present day holders ejected—practically ruined.

Yet the loss could easily have been borne by a ten-million dollar company, under a policy of title insurance.

SISTER DEAD, PLUMBER KILLS HER HUSBAND

Funeral Set for 10, He Shoots Brother-in-law at 8:30.

THEN HE COMMITS SUICIDE

Brooklyn Man Supposed to Have Brooded Over Sister's Marriage —She Took His Furniture.

A man ran out of the flat house at 156 West Ninth Street, Brooklyn, at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Around the corner of Court Street he went, into S. Chess's drug store, and behind him he left a red trail on the pavement. The man was Fritz Fennen, a bartender. He had been shot by his brother-in-law, Thomas Beetman, a plumber.

Fennen fell dead as he entered the drug store. Back in 156 Beetman put a bullet through his head and killed himself instantly. Mrs. Fennen, who died Sunday of blood poisoning, lay in her coffin in the front room of the flat awaiting burial. The funeral had been set for 10 o'clock.

Fennen married Beetman's sister only three months ago. She had been sick a month before her death. One story had it that Beetman blamed the husband for not giving proper care to the wife, and that this lay at the bottom of the crime. But Beetman's brother told the police yesterday afternoon that the plumber was angry because Mr. and Mrs. Fennen had taken his furniture and had not paid him. The police think that brooding over his troubles led Beetman to the shooting.

Yesterday Beetman and Fennen ate breakfast together. The dead woman's brother had come to the house on her account, and addressed few remarks to his brother-in-law. There was no quarrel. When Fennen rose from the table Beetman quietly pulled a .44 calibre revolver and fired at him four times. Two shots took effect.

The wounded man made a dash for the door, bound for his pharmacist friend, Chess, to seek aid. As he went Beetman turned the pistol on himself. The first shot went wild and shattered a mirror hanging on the wall. The second went through his head and killed him instantly.

Mrs. Louise Lower, sister of Mrs. Fennen, and Mrs. Anna Larsen, a nurse, were sitting in the front room with the coffin. Hearing the first shots they ran into the dining room and narrowly escaped being hit by the flying bullets.

Policeman Mehaffy of the Hamilton Avenue station was standing in Court Street when Fennen ran out of the house. Hearing the man's cries and seeing the blood Mehaffy ran toward him, but before he reached him Fennen was dead in the arms of the druggist. The floor of the little shop was soaked with blood.

In three minutes an ambulance had come, and the surgeon had pronounced the bartender dead. Mehaffy telephoned to his station, and the Sergeant sent four men to the scene of the tragedy. Leaving the telephone, Mehaffy followed the trail of blood into 156 West Ninth Street, and there found Beetman dead, and the two women in hysterics.

A year ago Beetman was employed by the India Wharf Brewery, near the foot of Hamilton Avenue. He got to drinking and was discharged. Shortly afterward his wife died. Up to that time his sister had lived with him in a flat in Sixteenth Street, Brooklyn, and after the death of Mrs. Beetman acted as housekeeper. Then Fennen married her, and took her away. Beetman went to live in a furnished room at 25 Atlantic Avenue.

The druggist, Chess, said that Mrs. Fennen had had plenty of medical assistance, and was in the care of a good nurse.

The bodies of the dead men were given over to an undertaker. Mrs. Fennen's burial was postponed.

FOR MORTGAGE TAX REPEAL.

Big Delegation to Go to Albany To-day to Aid in the Fight.

Allan Robinson, Secretary of the Allied Real Estate Interests of New York, denies that the protests against the present mortgage tax law are in the interest of money lenders. He says that it is the borrowers whom it is sought to protect and that the law has increased rents. Usually, Mr. Robinson says, these borrowers are not men of means and are not able to make known their protests against the law, but that the Allied Real Estate Interests is in receipt of hundreds of communications from them showing their feelings on the question.

Several hundred persons, representing civic, political, and real estate organizations in Greater New York will go to Albany to-day to attend the hearing by committees of the Senate and Assembly on the Mortgage Tax Repeal bill this afternoon and urge its enactment. Some of the Republican organizations and east side clubs are expected to be represented. Among the organizations from New York to be represented will be:

The Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association, the Long Island City Taxpayers' Association, United Real Estate Owners' Association, German-American League, Manufacturers' Association of Brooklyn, Broadway Board of Trade of Brooklyn, Harlem Property Owners' Association, Patriotic Republican Club, Republican County Committee, New York Chamber of Commerce, Maritime Association of the Port of New York, South Side Citizens' Improvement Association of Jamaica, Real Estate Board of Brokers, West End Association, Builders' Protective League, Builders' Association of Brooklyn, and the Property Owners' Association of the Bronx.

It is expected that other sections of the State will be represented by members of the Chambers of Commerce of Troy, Syracuse, Rochester, and Geneva, the Real Estate Association of the State of New York, the Yonkers Landlords' Protective Association, and the Dunkirk Board of Trade.

DIAMOND MEN WANT A. GANS.

They Say He Got Much Jewelry on Worthless Checks.

Representing himself as "A. Gans," a prosperous coal merchant from Norwalk, Conn., a man has succeeded within a few days in buying diamond jewelry from a number of Maiden Lane houses, making payment with worthless checks drawn on the Norwalk National Bank. His firm, he said, was E. Gans & Co., and he gave reference to houses in Philadelphia and other cities.

The first call was on M. Hailparn & Co., 40 Maiden Lane, where he bought several plain rings, paying for them with a good $30 check. The visitor then ordered some rings made in a special pattern, and passed another check.

Gans was hard to please in his selection of diamonds and watches, and the dealers had to show articles of fine quality before he accepted them. H. Lichtenstein, at 54 Maiden Lane, parted with a $220 diamond ring in exchange for a check. Freudenheim Brothers & Levy, at the same address, sold the man a diamond brooch. J. Freudenheim & Sons, 9 Maiden Lane, furnished diamond earrings. Leon Hirsch, 37 Maiden Lane, sold some Swiss watches. Altogether the man got more than $2,000 worth of jewelry.

Other houses were about to add to the Gans collection of diamonds when they were stopped by Mr. Hailparn, who had become suspicious. While others were waiting to learn if their checks had gone through the banks, Mr. Lichtenstein took the first train to Norwalk and presented his check on the bank on which it was drawn. He was told that the small deposit which had been made by Gans a short time before had already been overdrawn.

Lichtenstein learned that Gans was not in the coal business at the Norwalk address he gave. Several of the firms mentioned by Gans for reference have since written that they do not know him.

ALARMS, BUT NO BURGLARS.

A Returning Tenant and an Inoffensive Tree Call Out the Police.

The police reserves were called out twice early yesterday morning to round up gangs of burglars, but found none in either case. At 1 o'clock Police Headquarters was notified by telephone that burglars were busy at 108 West 111th Street. The janitor was the informant.

The West 125th Street Police Station was notified, and two Roundsmen and six policemen hurried there in the patrol wagon. That wasn't fast enough for Detective Goodell; he jumped in a cab. The police rang the janitor's bell and were told in a whisper that the thieves were in the Clark apartment. The Clarks, the janitor said, were in the country. Just then Mr. Clark himself walked out. They seized him, and when he got a chance he said he had stopped in to get some things before he went out of town again. The janitor identified him.

Mrs. Winifred Scott of 129 East Sixty-fourth Street called up Police Headquarters half an hour later, and said that her burglar alarm wouldn't stop ringing, and that thieves were undoubtedly trying to break in. The reserves of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station turned out, and found that the branches of a tree were being blown against the electric wire, causing the alarm to ring.

TO MAKE SUBWAY SANITARY.

Rapid Transit Commission to Take Up Unhealthful Conditions.

When the Rapid Transit Commission meets this afternoon, it will be called upon to take some action on Prof. Soper's report to the effect that the Subway is in an unsanitary condition. Mayor McClellan said yesterday that he had seen the reports of the Soper examination, and that something should be done about it at once.

There was some question yesterday whether the Rapid Transit Commission or the Department of Health had jurisdiction in the case. The Mayor said he would turn the entire matter over to Dr. Darlington if he found the Health Department had the proper authority, but at the Health Department it was said that the Attorney General had ruled that the Rapid Transit Commission was responsible for the maintenance of health conditions in the Subway.

The matter will be thrashed out thoroughly this afternoon by the Rapid Transit Commission, of which the Mayor is a member.

At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen yesterday Alderman Cronin offered a resolution recommending that the Committee on Railroads investigate the conditions of the air in the Subway, and make recommendations for proper ventilation. The resolution was sent to the Committee on Railroads.

TAX EXPERTS DISAGREE ON SAXE TAX BILL

It's Useless, Says Lawson Purdy; Try It, Pleads O'Donnel.

FORMER POINTS OUT FLAWS

It Muddles Present Law, He Says—Deputy Chamberlain Campbell Also Against It.

Lawson Purdy of the New York Tax Reform Association attacked the Saxe "Anti-Tax Dodging bill" yesterday. He says that it would merely litter the statute books and would be absolutely ineffective, and that the city would not benefit by a single cent of additional revenue if Gov. Higgins should sign the measure. It has passed both branches of the Legislature, and is now in the Governor's hands.

President O'Donnel of the Tax Department and Deputy Commissioner Bell, who collaborated with Senator Saxe in the preparation of the bill, took another view. They said that they hoped the bill would be signed, so they could experiment on the collection of the taxes under the measure. Neither of them, however, would venture an estimate of the sum they expected to collect. Mr. Purdy, on the other hand, declared that the law would merely increase the personal assessments to an enormous extent, and that none of the taxes could be collected unless the persons so taxed should be willing to make a present to the city.

"The Saxe bill," said Mr. Purdy, "claims to change the place for the taxation of the personal property, other than capital invested in business, belonging to non-residents from the residence of the agent in charge of the property to the place where the property is situated. This means that if an agent of a foreign corporation lived in Mount Vernon and the property of the corporation was in New York City, the agent would not be taxed on it in Mount Vernon as now, and would not in effect be taxed at all. The tax would be entered against the property here and not against any person, and therefore there would be no one to collect from.

"According to the original theory, the bill was not intended to render any property liable to taxation which was not already liable to be taxed. Section III. of the tax law now provides that 'all personal property situated or owned within this State is taxable unless exempt from taxation by law.'

"The law now provides further that every person shall be taxed where he resides for all personal property under his control as agent. The Saxe amendment requires the assessment of personal property of non-residents where it is situated instead of at the residence of the person who controls it. Money sent here for investment, accounts sent for collection, and goods consigned for sale on commission are now exempt by law.

"Many persons feared that the Saxe amendment would be construed to repeal these exemptions. It is hard to tell whether it would or not. The bill has been amended so as to exempt money on deposit which was not formerly taxable, because it is only a debt from a local bank to a non-resident, and the situs of a debt is almost always the residence of the creditor. This amendment really renders the bill more dangerous, for by making a specific exemption it may be construed to exclude all other exemptions.

"The bill muddles the law because it changes the rule that in taxing personal property we deal with persons, not property. There is no provision in the assessment roll for assessing personal property, irrespective of persons.

"However dangerous the bill might be if it could be made effective, it is not likely to do much damage because there is no process now, nor does the Saxe bill provide any process, for the collection of the tax. The personal property of non-residents and their invested capital may lawfully be assessed now, but no tax can be collected unless the non-resident makes a present to the city.

"The bill may increase the enormous amount of our uncollectible personal taxes, but there is no occasion for any panic concerning the injury it might inflict if the taxes were collectible."

When asked about the measure President O'Donnel referred to Deputy Commissioner Bell, who helped to draw the bill.

"The Saxe bill," said Mr. Bell, "reaffirms and improves the tax law of 1896 and will enable us to collect personal taxes against non-residents. It will not in any way refer to merchandise in warehouses in original packages, as Senator McCarren said on the floor of the Senate when he voted against the passage of the measure, for such packages are exempt from taxation under the United States statutes. There was no valid objection to the passage of the bill and every objection raised against it was of a technical nature. As for the talk that we shall be unable to make collections under the act we simply hope it will be signed so we may be able to make the experiment."

"How much revenue do you think the measure will give the city?"

"I should rather try to predict the weather we shall have on next Fourth of July," replied Mr. Bell.

Deputy Chamberlain Campbell spoke strongly against the bill yesterday.

"It will be bad law if it gets to the statute books," he said. "For every dollar it would bring to the city, it will drive five dollars away. If the law should be made to cover goods in warehouses it would mean the building up of the Jersey water front and the putting out of business within five years of every warehouse in New York."

BIG BOILERMAKERS MERGE.

Babcock & Wilcox Company and Stirling Consolidated to Combine.

The Babcock & Wilcox Company and the Stirling Consolidated Boiler Company, the two largest boiler manufacturers in the country, which have been keen competitors, have practically closed a deal to consolidate. Both companies make water-tube boilers for stationary and marine use and have a large export trade.

The Babcock & Wilcox Company has a capital of $3,000,000. Interests affiliated with the Singer Manufacturing Company are understood to be largely interested in the company. The company has its main shops in Bayonne. The Stirling Consolidated Boiler Company has big plants in Mansfield and Barberton, Ohio. Its capital is $4,875,000. O. C. Barber, President of the Diamond Match Company, is President, and John W. Gates is credited with being a heavy stockholder.

It can be stated on excellent authority that the completion of the merger only awaits the formal confirmation of the stockholders of the Babcock & Wilcox Company, who hold their annual meeting March 14. Immediately after that date a new company will be incorporated with a capital of $15,000,000.

Good Clothing Company in Difficulties.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the Good Clothing Company, manufacturer of clothing at 105 Bleecker Street, by Harry Coslow and Thomas Kramer, creditors, for $422 and $216, respectively. They alleged that it is insolvent and has concealed property valued at $5,000. Joseph W. Grollman was President. On Jan. 25 the company had a fire. The liabilities are put at $25,000 and the assets $10,000, including the insurance money.

PRESIDENT NOW TO FIGHT FOR RATE BILL CHANGES

Favors Restricted Review Amendment, Among Others.

ROOT AND TAFT OBJECT

Roosevelt to Reach End by Other Means If Proposed Legislation Is Unconstitutional.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—President Roosevelt is again in the railroad fight with all his might. The announcement of a few days ago that he had taken his hands off and was going to await the result merely as a looker-on was descriptive of his attitude for only a few days. Very soon he was conferring with Senators and Representatives, members of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and members of his Cabinet even more extensively than before. The last two days have seen a number of these conferences at the White House, and to-day comes the authoritative announcement from the White House itself that he is mixing up in the rate situation once more.

With this announcement comes also the information that his attitude against any amendment of the Hepburn bill has also undergone a change and that he is now willing to accept three or four amendments, in fact, would welcome anything in the amendment line tending to strengthen the Hepburn bill for its trial before the courts. He wants that bill buttressed in every possible manner in order to meet the assaults that are certain to be made against it, and he is now willing to accept what his trusted advisers agree on as the best thing to do.

He has been not a little perplexed by the difference of opinion among the legal giants of his Cabinet as to different phases of the question. Root, Taft, and Moody, as well as Knox and Spooner, have been consulted exhaustively, with contradictory results, but out of it all has come the President's determination in favor of the amendment of the Hepburn bill to make it as strong as possible, and then its enactment into law.

MANY CONFLICTING VERSIONS.

To-day Mr. Roosevelt made known authoritatively his attitude on the amendments desired by him. There have been, he said, so many contradictory statements within the last few days in regard to his position that he found this course a necessity. These conflicting versions of his views have come from Senators and Representatives who have gone to the White House to talk over the bill and the proposed amendments with the President. In one or two cases two men going together have come away and each told a different account of what the President thought, their variation evidently being made innocently, but because of a different interpretation of the President's remarks.

Some have had it that he had weakened, others have declared that he would stand for nothing except the Hepburn bill unamended, while some have asserted that the President now desired that the Republicans should get together upon a new bill which would unite the party.

In an informal way the President this afternoon made it clear that none of these views correctly represented him. He has not weakened in any particular. He is in favor of at least three amendments to the Hepburn bill. He is not opposed to a judicial review amendment, provided it is properly worded.

In a discussion of this judicial review amendment there has been perhaps more misrepresentation than on any other phase of the controversy. The President is unalterably opposed to any review amendment which gives the courts any greater authority to inquire into rates than the Constitution guarantees the interested parties. The least judicial review which will meet the Constitutional requirements is what he desires.

In this attitude the President is opposed by Secretary Root and Secretary Taft, and is supported by Attorney General Moody. Secretary Root has been opposed from the beginning to the President's policy regarding rate legislation, and does not believe it advisable to attempt to confer the authority on the Inter-State Commerce Commission which the Hepburn bill or any kindred measure seeks to do.

Secretary Taft has recently changed his views regarding the judicial review amendment, and agrees with Senator Knox and other of the President's advisers that such a provision is necessary in order to make the Hepburn law constitutional. There is a difference of opinion between the President, the Secretary of War, and Senator Knox as to the extent to which this review provision should go. The President is opposed to the insertion of any amendment which would give the railroad companies any advantage that is not guaranteed them by the Constitution.

Attorney General Moody, representing the President, has so revised the judicial review clause in the Knox Rate bill as to make it acceptable.

DETERMINED TO SUCCEED.

Much has been said about the constitutionality of the proposed rate legislation. The President would be in nowise deterred from pressing the proposed legislation even though he knew it were practically certain to be declared unconstitutional. He is not wedded to any particular form. His object is to obtain relief from existing conditions, and if the proposed legislation shall turn out to be unconstitutional he will make an effort to attain the object through other legal means.

A second amendment to the Rate bill which the President regards as almost essential is one relating to the time when a rate order by the commission shall take effect. The Hepburn bill provides that the rate shall go into effect within thirty days unless suspended by the court or the commission. The President believes it should be amended so as to provide that the rate

SPRINGFIELD MOB ROUTED.

Soldier Mortally Injured—Belief That Victim of Negroes Is Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, March 1.—Fearing another night of terror, the authorities took extra precautions early this evening.

Despite the efforts of the military and the police, however, a large-sized mob formed early in the evening in Section Street and set two houses on fire, one in Race Street and the other in High Street. Not much damage was done to either house.

The militia charged the mob and dispersed it.

Further rioting is feared.

Arthur Ancil, a member of the Xenia military company, was to-night hit on the head with a missile, said to have been thrown by a rioter, and was mortally hurt. His assailant used a piece of brick wrapped in a handkerchief.

As a precautionary measure, two machine guns and a company of troops have been posted at the Court House and jail, and the entire square is cut off.

The railroad brakeman M. M. Davis, the shooting of whom was the cause of the rioting, this afternoon identified the negro Dean as one of his assailants. He was unable to say whether Ladd, the other negro, was with Dean when the assault was made.

The two negroes were brought here unexpectedly this afternoon under guard of two companies from Dayton and were returned to that city after Dean had been identified.

The authorities at the hospital where Davis is lying refuse to answer telephone calls to-night, and it is believed that the negroes' victim is dead and that the news is being suppressed in fear of a fresh outbreak on the part of the mob.

Ten alleged rioters faced Police Judge Miller to-day. Those who pleaded guilty were fined $200 each and sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse. The Judge said he would conribute his share toward suppressing lawlessness by giving the rioters summary punishment. Threats have been made to burn Judge Miller's house.

Henry Davis, the State Fire Marshal, says he can get no information on which to base prosecutions for the fires started by the mobs. He declares that even prominent men excuse the offenders, and that the people are protecting the incendiaries.

The members of the Commercial Club met to-night to take action for the enforcement of the law. In speeches it was stated that the present conditions were due to politicians catering to negroes and low whites and to the lax police and court methods.

ELECTRICITY BLINDING US.

Sensitizing and Burning of the Hands Will Follow, Expert Says.

CHICAGO, March 1.—That universal blindness is to be humanity's tribute to electricity was the theory expressed by Dr. H. Preston Pratt, X ray and therapeutic expert in the trial of a personal injury suit in Judge Windes's court yesterday.

The Union Traction Company is being sued for $50,000 damages in behalf of Ruth Bostrom. The girl on April 10, 1902, was standing at a street corner when a wire fell across the trolley wire, its loose end dropping within four feet of her. She was then 11 years old. Almost immediately she became nearly blind and was paralyzed on her right side, the one nearest the swinging wire. The Traction Company asserts that the girl's condition could not have resulted from the current carried by the wire unless it came in contact with her.

Eye specialists have been the first to discover the corroding effects of the electrical currents being generated by millions of dynamos in every corner of the civilized globe explained the witness. Day or night we are never free from their influence. The eyes, the most delicate portion of the human body, will suffer first. Dr. Pratt cited the increasing prevalence of failing eyesight, and added that later will come a gradual sensitizing and burning of the hands.

ADDICKS HEARS OF HIMSELF.

Barber While Shaving Him Expresses Uncomplimentary Views.

Special to The New York Times.

SMYRNA, Del., March 1.—J. Edward Addicks, who is here on a trolley deal, entered William Garner's barber's shop for a shave this morning. As Garner lathered him and began to sweep Addicks's face with the razor he talked.

"This here trolley scheme is a steal," he said. "I understand Addicks is behind it. He's fooled the people of this State long enough. It's about time to give him 23."

"That so?" responded Mr. Addicks rather uncomfortably as the razor slipped over his throat. "What's the matter with Addicks?"

"Well," responded the barber, stropping the blade and reaching for the tightly drawn throat again, "Addicks put up a forfeit of $35,000 with the State on the first deal and now he's trying to get it back."

"Do you mean Senator Addicks?" asked the man in the chair, still ill at ease.

"Senator the devil," warmly replied the barber, as he swept the blade over the Adam's apple. "He's all in now." Then the barber jumped back, and Mr. Addicks, with a jerk, sat up and looked about hurriedly. He got out of the chair, and as he was being helped on with his coat he said:

"I'm that devil of a Senator Addicks. I hope we part friends."

The barber dropped his razor to the floor and sat down with a bump, as Mr. Addicks passed out.

TO INCREASE RACING TAX.

$60,000 County Fair Deficiency—Coggeshall's Reason.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 1.—Senator Coggeshall said to-day that a committee representing the county fair associations had asked him to introduce the bill increasing the tax on racing associations from 5 to 8 per cent. of gross receipts. He said that in his opinion the racing people would make no serious opposition to the bill.

"The best argument for the bill," he said, "is that there is before the Legislature a request for a direct appropriation of $60,000 to enable the fair associations to meet expenses of their premiums. It has been intimated that it would be wise for the racing associations not to haggle over an increase with the Cassidy-Lansing bill pending to repeal the Percy-Gray pool-selling act."

A hearing on the Cassidy bill has been set for March 7. Members of both houses are being deluged with requests to support the bill.

After all, Usher's the Scotch that made the highball famous.—Adv.

DOLAN, LOSING SIGHT, STILL FIGHTS MITCHELL

Will Defy Doctors and Go to Second Indianapolis Meeting.

CALL FOR MINERS, MARCH 15

Mitchell Recalls His Advisers to This City on News That Baer Had Gone to Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 1.—Patrick Dolan, District President of the United Mine Workers, is suffering from a collapse which his friends fear may result in the loss of eyesight. He attributes his condition to the worry and strain to which he has been subjected in his fight with John Mitchell.

"Some of them may think they have me down now, and they say I will not be in the convention at Indianapolis," said Dolan to-day. "Well, I'll be there, even if I'm stone blind, and have to be led. I will represent this district, too, for I am the representative, and neither Mitchell nor any one else will keep me out. The doctors have ordered me to be quiet. I will not become excited, but I will be on the floor of that convention at Indianapolis telling some things."

According to close friends of Dolan, the desertion of Secretary William Dodds of the local miners was the blow which hurt Dolan worst. It was for Dodds that Dolan first fell out with Mitchell. The International President sent word to Pittsburg that Secretary Dodds, who was running for office as Clerk of Courts in Allegheny County, paying $10,000 a year, must not be a candidate for re-election as Secretary of the miners. Dolan replied that Dodds would run for both offices if he wanted to. Dolan went among the miners and electioneered for Dodds, practically electing him to both offices.

"I expected Billy Dodds of all men to stick by me through thick and thin," said Dolan to-night, "but he hasn't."

INDIANAPOLIS, March 1.—W. B. Wilson, International Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, to-day issued the call for a special National convention in Tomlinson Hall on Thursday, March 15. The call is signed by President Mitchell and Secretary Wilson. Local unions are to send 1,300 delegates as before.

"For the purpose of considering the wage scale and the transaction of such other business as may lawfully be brought before the convention," is the declaration in the call.

The Ohio Bituminous Coal Operators' Association will meet in Cleveland next Thursday to lay out a plan of campaign.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—It was stated at the White House to-day that the President had not extended an invitation to John Mitchell and Francis L. Robbins, to come to Washington and confer with him regarding the coal situation.

President Mitchell, while maintaining silence as to the general situation, appeared more cheerful than usual yesterday and was more in evidence in the corridors of the Ashland House.

It was rumored last evening that the demand for higher wages would be pressed, at least as far as the outside men are concerned. The miners say the outside men are not paid as well in proportion as the men inside of the mines under the sliding scale.

Thomas Dettrey, President of District No. 7, and J. Hartlein, Secretary of District No. 9 of the Anthracite Miners, who left for home yesterday morning, returned to the Ashland House last night. They had been sent for by Mitchell in haste, after he was told of the report that President Baer of the Jersey Central Railroad had gone to Washington to see President Roosevelt, on the chance that the report might be true, so that he could have the full committee on hand in case of need.

BAER WITH "THE FARMERS."

In Brief Stay at Washington He Doesn't See the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—President George F. Baer of the Reading Railroad reached Washington at 6 o'clock this evening, attended a dinner given by Gen. E. De V. Morrell, and left for Philadelphia in his special car attached to the midnight train. Expectation that Mr. Baer would confer with the President with reference to the coal situation was not realized.

The President himself to-night said that he had not seen the head of the Reading interests and did not expect to. The dinner was given by Gen. Morrell as a member of the Farmers' Club of Philadelphia in honor of Mr. Baer. There were seventeen covers. Five members of the club present were Mr. Baer, Provost C. C. Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania, Rudolph Ellis, Wayne MacVeagh, and the host. Guests were Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, Bourke Cockran, Senator Aldrich, L. Hengelmuller von Hengevar, Austrian Ambassador; Col. Henry May of Washington, John G. Johnson, Charles E. Etting, J. Percy Keating, Edward T. Stotesbury, George H. Frazier, and T. De Witt Cuyler.

CENTRAL'S FIGURES GROW.

Franchise Taxed at $1,480,000 to Cost City $100,000,000, Counsel Says.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 1.—The difference between the value of a franchise when a corporation wants to sell it or force the city to take it and the value it fixes for taxable purposes is illustrated in the case of the New York Central Railroad's Eleventh Avenue tracks. Ira A. Place, counsel for the company, has said that the road did not propose to build a subway as provided in the Saxe bill, but would force the city to condemn its franchise. He put the value of it at $100,000,000.

Under the special franchise assessment by the State Board the franchise of the New York Central Railroad for tracks lengthwise on Hudson Street, Canal Street, West Street, Gansevoort Street, Thirty-first, Thirty-second, Thirty-third, and Thirty-ninth Streets, and on Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Avenues, was assessed in 1905 at $1,480,000.

The Central, however, objected to this valuation as excessive and payment of its taxes upon this franchise is held up in Supreme Court.

4-INCH LIFT MEANT DEATH.

So Driver Hurt in Collision Was Raised on Thin Plank.

Three men were injured, one fatally, in a collision last night between a southbound Third Avenue car and a moving van at Thirty-first Street and Third Avenue. The injured men are John Cherry, driver, of 5 Forsyth Street, whose back is broken; William O'Donnell, motorman, of 1,214 First Avenue, and Frank Mizner, helper, of 8 Stanton Street, less badly hurt.

When the car smashed into the van the crash was heard in the Third Avenue Theatre, several blocks away. The motorman landed in the street unconscious. Mizner fell several feet distant, but Cherry tumbled beneath the wreckage.

It was almost certain that to lift Cherry to the ambulance stretcher from the ground, a distance of only four inches, would kill him instantly. A thin plank was brought, and Ambulance Surgeon Goeller with great care rolled Cherry onto the plank. With equal care he was put in the ambulance.

Traffic was suspended for more than half an hour because of Policeman Drum's refusal to allow Cherry to be moved until the arrival of the ambulance surgeon. This action prolonged Cherry's life. The passengers in the car were shaken and the van was smashed.

PALMA RECEIVES MORGAN.

Tells New Minister Cuba Wants Closer Trade Relations with Us.

HAVANA, March 1.—Edwin V. Morgan, the new American Minister to Cuba, presented his credentials to President Palma to-day. He was received with ceremonial honors, and in the course of an address said:

"It is my good fortune to enter upon my official duties at a moment when the republic has evinced its friendship toward the United States by bestowing upon the President's daughter a wedding gift of singular fitness and value, and to have reached this island in company with her and her husband, who, by their presence among the Cuban people, desire to demonstrate the gratitude they feel for this gift.

"The President also charged me to convey an expression of his appreciation and to testify anew to the cordiality of the sentiment he and the American people entertain for the person of your Excellency and the nation of which you are the Chief Executive."

President Palma, in responding, said:

"I assure you it is the desire of my Government, and personally my desire, that the cordial understanding now existing between Cuba and the United States shall serve as a firm basis by virtue of which the ties of friendship between them and their mercantile relations may be continuously closer and stronger."

TUG CAPSIZES, THREE LOST.

Captain Says a Huge Iron Digger Made the Willard Top Heavy.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 1.—The little Yarmouth, Me., tug, Willard, bound from Boston for York, Me., capsized off Rockport Breakwater early to-day and sank while her Captain was trying to beach her. Two of the tug's crew, Capt. Emery Sawyer and Fireman Webber, were rescued by the Pigeon Cove life savers, but three other men on board the tug were drowned.

Capt. Sawyer and Fireman Webber owe their escape to a most fortunate circumstance, according to the story which the life savers were able to gain from them. The Captain says that the tug was top-heavy from the fact that she carried on the forward deck a huge iron digger used by dredging machines. This caused her to turn over.

As she rolled a dory which was on deck was thrown off, and it landed right side up. Engineer Webber was quick enough to jump in, but Capt. Sawyer was thrown into the water. He reached the dory by swimming. When the life savers reached them the Captain's hands and feet were frozen so badly that it is feared an operation will have to be performed. Webber, who was rowing, suffered less severely, although his extremities were painfully frostbitten.

LAWSON TELLS OF REBATES.

Entertaining but Not Legally Convincing, Says State Official.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 1.—Thomas W. Lawson called on Insurance Commissioner Cutting to-day to present evidence to the latter as to the violation of the anti-rebate law by some of the insurance companies. He showed the Commissioner a copy of a policy for which nothing was paid and an affidavit.

He said he had called to present these facts to the Insurance Commissioner because the latter had been quoted as saying that evidence of this sort was very hard to get. He himself had not found much difficulty in obtaining the evidence.

"On the evidence which I have," said Mr. Lawson, "insurance companies may be enjoined from doing business in this State, and some one may go to jail."

Commissioner Cutting said that Mr. Lawson was "a very entertaining gentleman and pleasing conversationalist," but a company could not be driven out of business in this State for merely violating the rebate law. The Commissioner said he would have to have more than the policy and affidavit.

BRIDGE TRUST ARREST.

Companies Contest Court's Jurisdiction in Ohio Ouster Suit.

SANDUSKY, Ohio, March 1.—Henry Hughes of Fremont, agent for the Massillon Bridge Company, is the first to be arrested of the fifteen officials of the so-called Bridge Trust, against whom indictments were returned by the Grand Jury last night under the Valentine anti-trust law. He was taken into custody to-day and brought here to be arraigned.

BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio, March 1.—The ouster suit against the so-called Bridge Trust was heard in the Circuit Court here to-day on the preliminary question of jurisdiction of the court. The defendant companies, fourteen in number, filed motions to quash, claiming that the Attorney General, who brought the action under the provisions of the Valentine law, should have filed it in Franklin County, at Columbus. The court took the question under advisement.

To Hang General's Daughter.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 1.—Anna Izmailovich, daughter of a prominent General, and Ivan Kulikhoff, principals in the plot to assassinate the Governor, Prefect, and other high officials of Minsk in the course of a funeral at the cathedral, were to-day condemned by a military court to be hanged, though their attempt miscarried. A bomb was thrown and four shots were fired without result.

WALLACE IN THE PLACE HE QUIT CANAL TO GET

Westinghouse Engages Former Chief Engineer at Panama.

SALARY IS $50,000 A YEAR

Will Be Engaged in Building Electric Lines to Parallel Steam Railroads.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 1.—John F. Wallace, formerly chief engineer for the Panama Canal Commission, went to New York from Washington to-day as an employe of George Westinghouse at a salary of $50,000 a year.

Mr. Wallace is to assist in building electric railways paralleling steam railroad lines in many parts of the country.

Mr. Wallace completed his arrangement with Mr. Westinghouse several months ago.

When Mr. Wallace withdrew from the Panama Canal work, to the displeasure of President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft, he said he had an offer with a salary of $50,000 and a personal interest in the work worth $15,000.

Although he did not say so at the time, it was assumed by persons who knew Mr. Wallace that Mr. Westinghouse's offer was the one which drew him away from the Isthmus.

John Findley Wallace, while Chief Engineer of the Illinois Central Railroad, with headquarters at Chicago, was appointed Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal in May, 1904. The salary was $25,000 a year. In June, 1905, word reached New York that Mr. Wallace had resigned. Report had it that he had had disagreements with several members of the commission and wished to retire on that ground. It developed subsequently, however, that Mr. Wallace had received an offer of a position in the United States and had decided to accept it.

Mr. Wallace came to New York from Panama and met Secretary Taft, when the two men had a stormy interview. The President, upon learning that Mr. Wallace had decided to retire from the commission, issued a statement in which he referred to Mr. Wallace's action as "unpatriotic."

Mr. Wallace testified before a Senate committee recently that he had never accepted the position the offer of which had induced him to resign from the commission.

GEN. GREENWOOD HURT.

Former Confederate Officer Bruised by Motor Car in Fifth Avenue.

Gen. Alexander Greenwood of 401 Green Street, Brooklyn, was knocked down by an automobile while trying to cross Fifth Avenue at Twenty-first Street yesterday afternoon. The car was driven by William Miller of 126 East Twenty-sixth Street. Several women were passengers.

Dr. Hawkes from Bellevue Hospital attended Gen. Greenwood. Then the motorists asked the bruised man to allow them to take him home in the machine, which he did.

Gen. Greenwood was an officer in the Confederate Army. He is well known in the Southern colony in New York.

SEWER FRAUD WAS HIGH UP.

City Officials and Several Lawyers Will Be Indicted.

Interesting reports are expected to come from the Kings County Grand Jury this morning, when, in closing its work for February, indictments and presentments in connection with the investigation into the sewer damage claims scandal will be handed to Judge Crane in the County Court. It became known yesterday that one of the men in the scandal was an officer of the last city administration who is known throughout the State.

It is said to be certain that officials employed in the Controller's office, as well as several lawyers, will be indicted. All will be accused of conspiring to defraud the city by means of fraudulent claims for damage by defective sewers.

EVANGELIST SANKEY ROBBED.

Burglars Carry Away Plate and Pictures Valued at $1,000.

The news that the home of Ira D. Sankey, the famous evangelist, at 148 South Oxford Street, Brooklyn, was entered by burglars early on Monday morning, came out at local Police Headquarters yesterday. The robbery was reported to the police soon after it was discovered, but they did not make it public.

The burglars forced open a rear window and, while the servants and members of the family slept, gathered together about $1,000 worth of plunder, with which they got away without disturbing anybody. The property stolen consisted of about $250 worth of silverware and several oil paintings, which were cut from their frames. The robbery was not discovered until the servants went downstairs later in the morning. None of the loot has been recovered.

Mr. Sankey has been an invalid for some time. He is suffering from nervous breakdown and is almost blind.

EUTHANASIA IS MURDER,

Says Archbishop Farley at Dedication of St. Francis Hospital.

Archbishop Farley dedicated the new St. Francis Hospital yesterday. It occupies the entire block bounded by 142d and 143d Streets, Brook and St. Ann's Avenues, and contains 400 beds. Sister Etiphania and the fifty sisters assisting her in the charge of the hospital have their quarters in a house behind the main building.

In his address Archbishop Farley condemned euthanasia or the shortening of the lives of those suffering from incurable diseases.

"The very idea," he said, "is contrary to Christian teaching. It is but legalized murder. Think, too, of the mental agony of the man thus to be slain. Would it not be far worse than any bodily suffering, however excruciating?"

Apologize or Jail for Madden.

To apologize for his refusal to answer questions in a proceeding brought by his wife, Anna Louise Madden, for a separation was the sentence imposed by Supreme Court Justice Burr in Brooklyn upon John E. Madden, the horse breeder and turfman, yesterday. In addition, Madden will be compelled to pay a fine of $250 or stand committed to jail.

When the young woman got to the Subway station there was a big crush, and she was forced into the thick of it. About half way down the stairs she was knocked down, and badly trampled upon and knocked down several steps. When she was rescued she had lapsed into unconsciousness. She was carried to the station platform. Dr. Hunt, who came from Bellevue Hospital, worked over her half an hour before he succeeded in reviving her.

She said that she would act as executor and that she was willing to accept the terms of the will. It will be probated on March 15 and Mrs. Mizner expects to remain here until then.

NO PAY FOR YONKERS FIREMEN

Nobody'll Buy the City Bonds and No Funds Are Available.

The employes of the Yonkers Fire Department did not get their pay warrants Saturday because no money was available with which to pay them. Bond buyers refuse to take Yonkers bonds, the question of the constitutionality of the third-class government obtaining here for a second-class city being in dispute.

Last Friday Mayor Coyne opened bids for the issuance of $15,000 worth of fire bonds, and there was rejoicing because five bids had been received.

The bid of Hayes & Co. of Cleveland was accepted. Yesterday the firm was to have taken the bonds, but failed to do so. To-day there was no money to pay the salary account.

The new fiscal year begins to-day, and it will be some time before taxes are collected.

WAR OVER MOROCCO FEARED BY AMERICA

State Department Pessimistic and Blames Germany.

FRENCH FIRMS STOP BUYING

Say It Is Not Wise to Store Goods Before a War—Report That King Edward and Kaiser Are to Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—It may be stated on the best authority that this Government takes a very serious and gloomy view of the situation at Algeciras and would not be surprised to see the Moroccan Conference end in a rupture within a short time. Furthermore, it can be stated on the same authority that if the conference does break up there will be grave danger of war.

M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, called at the State Department this afternoon and spent an hour with Secretary Root, talking about the Algeciras situation. After the interview both the Secretary and the Ambassador declined to discuss what had passed between them.

Up to to-day the views of the State Department with regard to the outcome at Algeciras had been steadily optimistic, but now a marked change has occurred, and the prevailing opinion is decidedly pessimistic.

It can be said that if the apprehended break-up of the conference occurs it will be due, in the opinion of the State Department, to the obstinate tenacity of Germany in clinging to her demands and rejecting the French concessions. The fear of a European war as a result of the failure of the conference is based, not so much upon the importance of the subjects discussed at Algeciras, as upon consideration of the general political situation in Europe, and the opinion that probably Germany believes this to be the desirable time for war if war is to come.

The pessimistic view of the State Department is not generally accepted in diplomatic circles. It is pretty thoroughly recognized that the failure of the conference is imminent, but it is not believed that such failure would necessarily mean war. On the contrary, the attitude of Germany is construed as foreshadowing a private settlement with France after the conference has ended. In such a settlement Germany would probably receive satisfactory compensation in Palestine in Asia Minor for allowing a free hand to France in Morocco.

This is believed in many diplomatic quarters to be the real purpose of Germany, her appearance at Algeciras being merely to cover her plans in the Holy Land. The diplomatic view here is that, with England standing in the way of such an understanding between Germany and France in the conference, Germany has deliberately concluded to break up the conference and effect her settlement with France privately, leaving England out in the cold.

The attitude of the State Department is taken to mean that the efforts at peacemaking on the part of the American delegates at Algeciras will need to cease, and that Germany is warned that she can no longer rely upon the support of the United States in the conference.

Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 1.—The Moroccan Conference is still marking time. The German delegates say they are not yet prepared to enter upon a discussion of the essential questions at a plenary sitting. They have agreed, it is said, that there shall be a sitting, that it shall be held on Saturday to discuss the State Bank, and that a meeting of the General Committee shall take place on Monday to consider the thorny problem of police organization, but agreements of this sort are subject to alteration.

No one has discovered a wholly satisfactory explanation of Germany's unwillingness to come to close quarters. One set of theorists believe that the cautious officials of the Wilhelmstrasse are probably occupied in elaborate calculations as to whether it would be more advantageous to accept the internationalization of Morocco with a slight preponderance of French influence or to break up the conference and thus, complete freedom of action at Fez, where the German representative, as the protector of the Sultan, may be expected to enjoy, for some time a privileged position.

Another set of theorists, who believe that Germany has been beginning diplomatic action without a carefully prepared plan of campaign, argue that she is trying to obtain in the conference all she wants by wearing out and enervating her antagonist, whose peace of mind is already disturbed by the approaching general election.

A third group of theorists, more eclectic in their methods, combine the two explanations.

Before deciding between the three groups, it may be well to wait till Germany plays a few more trump cards.

ALGECIRAS, March 1.—A division of British cruisers is due at Gibraltar to-day and another division of battleships will arrive there to-morrow. This formidable assemblage embraces thirty warships and 25,000 men.

The German delegates to the Moroccan Conference, after reflection, wish the Diplomatic Corps at Tangier to exercise surveillance over the police, thus preventing its use to further French political ends. The French resist this, asserting that Germany is chiefly occupied with minimizing French influence in Morocco.

The delegates now talk of the struggle being prolonged until the latter part of March.

BERLIN, March 1.—The Confectionair, the principal dry goods journal here, says: "German firms complain bitterly of bad business with France. Commercial travelers are unable to book orders because of the political feeling. Representatives of a famous Berlin house who have been traveling for twenty years in Southern France have been sent back to Berlin this season in spite of the friendly relations which exist between them and their customers.

"The French merchants say that it is not wise to store goods shortly before an outbreak of war."

ST. PETERSBURG, March 1.—The Moroccan conference continues to absorb the attention of the diplomats here. King Edward's approaching visit to the Continent is regarded as a hopeful sign. In Government circles, however, the crisis is not considered to be past.

The Svet says it believes France was drawn into her present position by the belief that she would have Great Britain's support, but that she is doomed to disappointment.

"England, as usual," says the Svet, "will prefer to reap the fruits of the quarrels of others. England will not draw the sword, and France cannot now withdraw. The world will wake up some fine morning and find German troops at Nancy."

It is learned from an indisputable source that France feels assured of the support on the question of policing Morocco of a majority of the delegates to the conference, and her present plan is to force a vote in the conference in order to demonstrate the falsity of Germany's contention that France represents only the minority view.

LONDON, March 1.—Reuter's Telegram Company is informed that King Edward will shortly meet Emperor William at sea or at some port.

The announcement is unofficial.

HER ADMIRER SUPPRESSED.

Bass Drummer Who Wrote Letters to Miss Hopper Put Under Bail.

Max Hildebrandt, a bass drummer of the Garrick Theatre is now under $500 bail for his good behavior in the new three months.

Edna Wallace Hopper, the actress, caused his arrest on Wednesday evening. She charged Hildebrandt, in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday, with having written her many annoying letters, in at least one of which he referred to her as "Mrs. Edna Wallace Hopper Hildebrandt." These letters had been coming to her for four years, and lately going back to him.

The actress's manager, C. T. Boykin, read some of the letters in court. One of the epistles assured Miss Hopper that she would be "quite a distinguished person" some day. Hildebrandt wrote that he was not afraid of being arrested; in fact, he had nerved himself for such a contingency by "taking a ride on the Greenpoint Ferry" and taking a look at Riker's Island. That he half expected Miss Hopper might cause his arrest was evident from a postcard which was put in evidence. It read:

"You know how Delilah got the best of Samson. She made him shave. That's what!"

In another letter Hildebrandt, after relating an experience on a street car, wrote: "How different actresses are off the stage."

The actress, though she had counsel in the person of Henry J. Goldsmith, conducted the case herself and personally tackled John J. Meare, who appeared for Hildebrandt. When Mr. Meare asked that his client be discharged, Miss Hopper turned on him with:

"Well, he won't be discharged," and added to Magistrate Walsh with a toss of her head, "I won't let him be discharged." She also said that if the Magistrate would grant an adjournment she would produce twice as many letters which she had received, but had not brought them to court. Magistrate Walsh, however, decided to hold the man in bail for his good behavior. Afterward Miss Hopper turned to Hildebrandt's counsel and said:

"I don't like to see him go to the island. I'll withdraw the charge if you'll take him to Bellevue for examination as to—"

"Certainly not," said Mr. Meare.

"Oh, very well," said Miss Hopper airly.

So until the bail wos forthcoming Hildebrandt was put behind the bars.

SEVEN FIREMEN HURT.

Naphtha Explodes at Blaze in Brooklyn Dyeing Plant.

At a fire yesterday morning in the Dewey Steam Dyeing Establishment at 1,283 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, a barrel of naphtha exploded, injuring seven firemen, three of them badly. The fire, the cause of which has not been determined, started at 10 o'clock in a one-story frame extension building in the rear of the store. All the workers in the place got out safely.

The first of the firemen to arrive dashed into the place with a line of hose and were playing a stream on the fire when the flames reached a metal cask containing naphtha. The cask exploded and the firemen were knocked off their feet. Others in the rear of the store ran into the extension and dragged their comrades out. The side of the extension had been blown out and the place wrecked.

The firemen who were injured are Lieut. John Kane and Firemen John G. Maloney and James K. Overend of Engine Company No. 135, Fireman Joseph Healey, Edward Dunphy, and Joseph De Zine of Engine Company No. 114, and Fireman Joseph Quinlan of Truck Company No. 61. Kane was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Maloney and Overend to St. John's Hospital, and the others to their homes. It is believed that all will recover.

The fire caused $1,000 damage.

NEW YORK CENTRAL EXPANDS.

Building Trunk Line from Central and Western Pennsylvania.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., March 1.—A new trunk line, from central and western Pennsylvania to New York State and the East, has resolved itself out of several connecting lines which have been under construction within the past few months, and when they are completed the New York Central will have its own tracks from Cleveland and Franklin across Pennsylvania to the East. A direct connection to this line at Dubois will be afforded to the Pittsburg district by the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad, which is, by traffic and trackage agreements, closely allied with the New York Central.

The project is evidently aimed at the Pennsylvania, which will next year build a line from near Newcastle to the Allegheny Valley, thus having a through east and west freight line via Driftwood and the Philadelphia and Erie. The New York Central, by the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg and its own lines will have preceded the Pennsylvania in getting a freight line across Pennsylvania, and will have as low grades as the latter.

At the meeting of the Board of Estimate to-day he will vote to grant the authority asked.

NORTHCLIFFE WITH FISH FOR A MUTUAL INQUIRY

World-Wide Movement Indicated in Exchange of Cablegrams.

FISH LIKELY TO HEAD IT

The Mutual's Board Gets a New Request for Information and Considers the Armstrong Report.

The existence of a Mutual Life policy holders' movement of worldwide scope, at the head of which will undoubtedly be Stuyvesant Fish, became known yesterday through the exchange of cablegrams by Lord Northcliffe, the former Sir Alfred Harmsworth, and Mr. Fish. Efforts are now being made to organize a policy holders' committee that will be inclusive of all the other policy holders' organizations of the Mutual Life, and definite developments are expected in the near future.

Lord Northcliffe is Chairman of the British Protection Committee of Mutual Life Policy Holders. This is his message to Mr. Fish:

British Policy Holders' Protection Association Committee view with apprehension your resignation from investigation committee. Does this imply abandoning your strenuous efforts for thorough investigation and genuine reform? They urge you to continue support with all your power and influence general movement to liberate Mutual from trusts and Wall Street, making it once more really mutual, managed solely in the policy holders' interests. Reply Carmelite House.
NORTHCLIFFE, Chairman.

Mr. Fish's Reply.

Mr. Fish sent this reply:

Cable received. Having become satisfied thorough investigation from inside impracticable, I resigned from committee and later from board. The committee's four counsel also resigned. Am invited to join policy holders' movement for investigation and reform. What would you suggest? Would you also join International Policy Holders' Committee and provide suitable French and German representatives for whom you can vouch? FISH.

No official announcement was made yesterday as to this general Mutual Life Policy Holders' Committee. It was learned, however, that the idea involved in it is entirely acceptable to those who have been concerned in the various policy holders' movements in the Mutual Life, and no substantial difficulty is anticipated in uniting all on a common basis. It is not unlikely that the committee will include the so-called Governors' Committee which was organized originally to receive the proxies that Thomas W. Lawson collected, and this would naturally involve the selection of Samuel Untermyer as its counsel.

Mr. Fish has received many letters from prominent men the country over urging him to head some movement that would assure a thorough investigation of the Mutual Life, which has appeared impossible since the break in the Truesdale Committee that resulted in Mr. Fish's withdrawal. The message which Mr. Fish sent yesterday to Lord Northcliffe contains his flat statement that thorough investigation from the inside is impracticable and that this was the reason he resigned from the Truesdale Committee and from the board.

The English committee, it is learned, three weeks ago took steps looking to the appointment of a representative on the board of the Mutual, and it appointed a sub-committee to watch developments in the Mutual Life and, if necessary, call matters to the attention of the English Parliament. The general scope of the international committee, such as is now in contemplation, would be such that its activities might well include suits for the recovery of money improperly diverted from the Mutual under the old administration, the punishment of individuals responsible for the misuse of funds, and a thorough change in the management of the company.

New Mutual Requisition.

The Trustees of the Mutual Life at their meeting yesterday received from William H. Truesdale and John W. Auchincloss, the remaining members of the Mutual's Investigation Committee, a new requisition for information in lieu of the dragnet requisition which President Peabody refused to honor and which led to the withdrawal of Mr. Fish from the committee. Both Mr. Truesdale and Mr. Peabody declined to make this requisition public. It is understood, however, that its scope was much more limited than that of its predecessor. This statement was given out by Mr. Peabody regarding the action which the meeting took on the Armstrong Committee's report and other matters:

"The resignations of Messrs. Effingham B. Morris and Stuyvesant Fish as members of the board were presented and accepted.

"The opinion of the Hon. Joseph H. Choate advising the bringing of suits against Messrs. Richard A. McCurdy and Robert H. McCurdy and the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., including L. A. Thébaud, was read and a statement made by the President that suits were instituted on receipt of Mr. Choate's first expression of his views, before the presentation of the formal opinion.

"A letter from Messrs. Truesdale and Auchincloss, the special committee, addressed to the President, calling for information from the company on many points, in lieu of a prior communication, which had been withdrawn, was read for the information of the board.

"The report of the Armstrong Committee and its recommendations for legislation were brought up by the President, and at his request Vice President McClintock made explanations in detail, after which the following resolutions were proposed by Commodore Gerry and adopted:

"'The board, having duly considered the report of the Armstrong Committee and the pending legislation which is proposed by the Armstrong Committee in pursuance of the said report, it is now,

"'Resolved, That so much of the report of the committee as recommends remedial legislation be referred to the President and counsel, with authority to appear before the Legislature at any hearing on the bills introduced by the committee and to present such facts and considerations as in their judgment may most effectively protect the interests of the company and its policy holders;

"'Resolved, That as to the other matters contained in the report the same be referred to the President, to examine and report to this board what action, if any, should be taken thereon; and that until the reception of his report further action on the report of the committee be postponed.'"

MUTUAL FIRST TO UNLOAD.

Sold Washington Traction Stock Worth $1,650,000 Last Year.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company in 1905 unloaded $1,650,000 worth of Washington Railway and Electric Company preferred stock, according to the evidence of its list of securities made public yesterday.

The stock is traded in on the curb market here, and on 'Change in Washington, but specialists said yesterday that the market in the past year has not indicated the sale of such a large block, and suggested that it had been disposed of at private sale.

This is the first considerable parcel of stock that any of the big insurance companies is known to have unloaded since the insurance troubles began.

shall go into effect "within a reasonable time, to be determined by the commission."

This amendment he regards as necessary because the court might hold that thirty days was not a reasonable time and that a general policy might be inaugurated through the courts of staying all rates ordered by the commission on the ground that the time allowed was too short. The President believes that a commission which is competent to fix a maximum rate is competent to determine the time when it shall go into effect.

An amendment which has been worked out in careful detail by Senator Spooner is another which meets the President's approval. It provides that the railroad companies when a stay has been granted shall be required to deposit a sufficient sum of money with the court to protect all shippers against loss, provided the rate fixed by the commission is sustained by the court.

The Knox bill provides that the railroads shall be required to give a bond for the protection of shippers. The Spooner amendment is believed by the President to have a distinct advantage over the clause in the Knox bill because it will have a tendency to deter railroads from instituting suits merely to cause delay.

The President does not believe that amendments should be made a part of the Hepburn bill which seeks to prevent the ownership of coal lands by carriers. It is not that he is opposed to this idea, but because he believes it should be a separate enactment, if made a law at all, and not a part of the Hepburn act.

Since the commitment of the Hepburn bill to the hands of the Democrats the President has not been in actual conference with Democratic Senators on the bill, but he has received messages from some of them and has sent replies. Only this afternoon a message came to him from Senator Bailey, and his reply was delivered by the same messenger.

There is one proposed amendment which the President will not accept. It is that favored by Senator Crane. It affects the court review proposition, and includes the words "or legal," so that the clause would confer the right of review upon the carrier's "constitutional or legal" rights.

The insistence of the advocates of "or legal" has made the President suspicious, and he will not consent to the inclusion of these words. He has not said he would go to the extent of vetoing a bill which contained such a provision, but he has declared his unalterable oposition to them.

When Seantor Bailey sent word that he favored inserting an amendment to the Hepburn bill providing for the fixing by the Inter-State Commerce Commission of a specific or absolute rate, the President replied that he, too, favored such a provision, but had hesitated to urge it. He asked Bailey, in case the Texas Senator should succeed in having that provision included, to make it a separate paragraph, so that if it were declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court it would not vitiate the entire bill.

DOLLIVER ON RATE BILL.

Not a Line Drawn in Hostility to Railroads, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Senator Dolliver to-day made his announced speech on the rate question in the Senate. He took up the speech of Senator Lodge, and, playfully going back with the Massachusetts Senator into history, read the laws of the remotest ancients, which seemed to be a travesty of rate legislation in these modern times. Then he took up the necessity in the time of Queen Anne for controlling common carriers, and read a tariff of rates published in her reign, which wound up with the words "performed by the will of God.—Ebenezer Brooks, proprietor."

"You will observe," said Dolliver, dryly, "that they held exactly the same philosophy in those days that our friends the common carriers of these times now entertain, that they have certain God-given rights with which we must not meddle."

Then he took up the utterances recently made by ex-Secretary Olney. The latter, he said, had made rate fixing synonymous with Government ownership. This was a proposition that needed an answer by somebody "who does not need to unload a bunch of railroad securities to fit him to study the first principles of the subject."

"The same Olney," said Dolliver, "as Attorney General in the Cabinet of Grover Cleveland, supported the use of the army to invade the soil of Illinois against the protests of shrieking Mayors and a frantic Governor, and all for the sake of maintaining the public peace, the Constitution of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding. I can hardly account for the incongruity. It may be that the ex-Attorney General in trying to defend the Constitution of the United States undermined his own."

Discussing the merits of the Hepburn bill, the Iowa Senator said:

"There is not a line in this bill that is drawn in hostility to the railroads. Every word is in the line of a better understanding. Not a word appears in malice. It is the epitome and forecast of a harmonious relation between the business of the carriers and the productive energies of the country. It is bound up with the welfare of the Nation. Long before the politicians were awake to the demand for such a remedy the memorials of commercial bodies all over the land were there [pointing to the desk and with a gesture toward the other end of the Capitol] and in the files of the other branch of Congress. The business interests of the country and the people of the United States have asked for this legislation."

Without abandoning his ground that the power to control railroad rates rests on what might be called the higher law, the Iowa Senator took Senator Foraker's reasoning yesterday when he said that Congress could not fix rates, and that if it should it could not do so through the instrumentality of a commission.

"Now, there," appealed Dolliver, "let us not be forever shut out from grace by this circular reasoning of the Senator. If Congress cannot fix rates why should we not have the opinion of the United States Supreme Court that Congress has not this power? Or if Congress has the power and cannot use it through a commission, shall we be harmed if we ask the Supreme Court to decide whether this is so or not?"

THE McCURDYS SAIL.

Mutual's ex-President Remained in His Stateroom—Servant Missed Boat.

Richard A. McCurdy, ex-President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, sailed for Europe on the Hamburg-American liner Amerika yesterday morning. He remained in his suite on the ship all Wednesday night and yesterday morning, and, so far as known, did not even show himself at a porthole from the minute he boarded the liner until the time of sailing, a few minutes after 10 o'clock. Mr. McCurdy was accompanied by his wife and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Thébaud.

Early yesterday morning a score or so of reporters and half as many photographers journeyed to Hoboken, the former in the hope of getting Mr. McCurdy to say something for publication and the latter to get his picture should he show himself on deck. Both reporters and photographers failed to see the former insurance President.

The movements of the McCurdy party were guarded with the greatest secrecy by the officials of the steamship company. No one was allowed to go near the suite occupied by the elder Mr. McCurdy unless he was able to show credentials acceptable to Mr. McCurdy. One of the officials of the line even went so far as to intimate that the McCurdys were not on board at all.

It was reported on the pier that Mr. McCurdy was not in very good health yesterday morning. His son, who had accompanied him to the pier on Wednesday night, was not on the pier yesterday morning to bid his father good-bye. The McCurdy baggage, it was said, was checked to Cherbourg, from which place it was said Mr. McCurdy will go to Paris. The Amerika was delayed several minutes after her sailing time to allow a big freighter to get past the pier.

The McCurdy servant who was arrested on Wednesday night for striking a reporter and was locked up in the Hoboken Police Station was discharged in court yesterday morning. The reporter did not press the charge. The servant missed the Amerika and will follow his employer across on another steamship.

Dead Holding a Man's Pictures.

Mamie L. Williams, 30 years old, was found dead in bed last night in her room at 302 West Twenty-first Street, a rubber tube stretching from the gas jet to her mouth. She was holding two pictures of a man, and in a locket on her breast was another picture of the same person. Till two weeks ago he passed as her husband.

WEST SIDE MEETING CHEERS SENATOR SAXE

Jollification Over the Eleventh Avenue Track Victory.

CALL THE BLUFF, HE SAYS

Declares the Central Isn't Sincere in Its Declaration That It Won't Build a Subway.

State Senator Martin Saxe got a rousing round of cheers last night at the Amsterdam Opera House in West Forty-fourth Street, when he appeared at a mass meeting held under the auspices of the Long Acre League in support of his bill for the removal of the New York Central tracks from Eleventh Avenue and other west side streets. The bill has passed and the meeting was turned into a jollification.

The auditorium was filled with the Senator's constituents, while the boxes were occupied by delegations from civic organizations which had taken a hand in the fight to oust the railroad company from the crowded west side thoroughfares. The box assigned to the City Club remained unoccupied.

Senator Saxe made a speech in which he declared the statement made by Ira Place, counsel for the New York Central, that the company never would consent to build a subway for its tracks, but would compel the city to take over its franchise through condemnation proceedings for $100,000,000, was nothing but a stupendous bluff.

"It is up to you to call the bluff," he said to the audience. "Call it as we called some of the company's other bluffs up in Albany."

"I am proud to be here to-night," said Mr. Saxe. "A little more than two years ago I stood on this same platform in the heat of a political campaign and promised that if you would give me your votes I would do my best to take the railroad tracks out of Eleventh Avenue. You gave me your votes, and now I take pleasure in telling you that I have made good my promise.

"Last year I tried hard to get this bill through, but it was impossible to get it out of committee, because the New York Central simply owned the committee. This year things are slightly different in Albany, but during the days before the bills passed there began to happen the things that we do not see and do not understand.

"When I told the Chairman of the Cities Committee on Tuesday morning that I would have my bill called up, he said: 'Well, you know that we agreed to let the New York Central suggest amendments to the bill before it was reported out.' I said: 'And you know that I have made it plain I would not permit any amendment, not even the dotting of an i or the crossing of a t in the original measure.' Finally the bill was reported. If the railroad company had had a chance to amend it they would have been amending it yet.

"I spent an anxious evening Tuesday, because I knew that efforts would not be lacking to defeat my plans. The committee went into session at 8 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock adjourned, after having reported the bill without amendment. By a strange coincidence—one that I believe was fatal to the enemies of the bill—a man was killed that very hour at Thirtieth Street and Eleventh Avenue by a New York Central train. I believe that fatal accident had something to do with the success of the measure. Some Senators left the Chamber, but of those present not a man voted against the bill.

"The success of this bill is not a Republican success. My Democratic colleagues from this city stood by it to a man. Now, you must be as obstinate in insisting that the Mayor and Governor shall sign this bill as we have been in refusing to permit any amendment to it. And the Mayor and the Governor will not dare to refuse.

"When the New York Central says it will not build a subway it is merely bluffing. They were doing the same in Albany. They objected to the condemnation provision, saying it was not necessary, as the railroad always obeyed the mandates of the Legislature. Why? Because laws affecting the New York Central up to this time have been drawn in the office of the company. This is the first time in history the New York Central people have had a law they did not want crammed down their throat."

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Henry Parsons, President of the Long Acre League, who introduced Miles M. Dawson of the Committee of Fifty as Chairman.

"We meet partly for jollification," said he, "but don't get any notion into your head that this fight is won. It has just only begun. The Mayor has not yet been heard from. He has sent word to us that he would help us, but one of his advisers has questioned the power of the Rapid Transit Commission to deal with the New York Central under the provisions of the Saxe bill. Everybody knows the Rapid Transit Commissioners have that power already, and that the Saxe bill merely instructs them to exercise it."

Dr. Felix Adler said he saw no reason why Eleventh Avenue should endure conditions that would not be tolerated in Fifth Avenue.

J. Aspinwall Hodge said that if the tracks remain in Eleventh Avenue it is largely due to the failure of the District Attorney, the Board of Health, and the State Railroad Commission to do their duty. Assemblyman Stanley, who introduced the bill and led the fight for it in the Assembly, spoke and received an ovation. The other speakers included Senator Ford, the Rev. Father Chidwick, John C. Coleman, the Rev. W. R. Ackert, and Charles Sprague Smith.

A telegram was sent to Gov. Higgins, asking him to sign the Saxe bill.

13-YEAR-OLD ROUTS FLATHOUSE THIEVES

They Beat Him, but He Clung on Like a Bulldog.

THEY SAID THEY'D KILL HIM

But Fled When the Lad Set Out to Thrash Both—One Caught After Hot Chase.

Thirteen-year-old Peter Petrosino was playing yesterday afternoon in front of the tenement at 185 Bleecker Street, where he lives with his mother, when Mrs. Petrosino appeared.

"I'm going to buy something for dinner," she said. "Mind the flat while I'm away."

"Sure," said Peter, and he started upstairs, three steps at a time.

The door of the Petrosino flat, on the third floor, was ajar. It had been jimmied, but the lad thought his mother had forgotten to lock it. When he entered he heard a noise in the dining room and hurried to investigate.

Stepping into the room he saw two men busily piling up a lot of stuff they had hastily gathered. They looked up frowningly when Peter appeared.

"What are you doin' here?" he demanded. "You're thieves, that's what you are, and you'd better get out in a hurry."

"Shut up and beat it," the intruders growled. "If you don't, we'll kill you."

Peter didn't wait to be killed. Instead he launched himself, like a small catapult, at the nearest thief! His clenched fists were going like flails. For a moment the men were dazed. The sheer audacity of their youthful assailant robbed them of the power to act. Then one of them, the biggest, drew back his fist, loosed it, and Peter went down on the floor, sprawling.

The boy was on his feet in an instant, yelling "Thieves!" with all his might. The men took to their heels, leaving their intended booty on the floor. They were half way down the first flight of stairs when Peter started after them. To overtake them, Peter slid down the bannisters. He was at the front door as soon as they were, and grabbed the coat of the hindmost, still shouting for help. For the second time he was knocked down, but he tenaciously got up and resumed his pursuit.

In the open air his cries brought assistance, and within a few seconds a large crowd was in pursuit. Hearing the shouts of "Stopthief!" Policeman Solomon headed the men off. The foremost fugitive managed to get by, but Solomon was right behind the other one as he turned into McDougal Street and ran into a tenement. The chase led to the roof, where the thief turned and put up a fight. It required the liberal use of the policeman's night stick to subdue him.

In the meantime the other thief had turned in a fire alarm at McDougal and Bleecker Streets, and escaped in the resultant confusion. The prisoner was taken to the Mercer Street Station, where a jimmy, a bunch of skeleton keys, and $17 in money were found in his pockets.

Peter came around to the station house to identify the man. He had a black eye, but was still game and walked right up to the prisoner.

"That's him," the lad announced. "He's the feller that punched me."

Mrs. Petrosino appeared about this time and gathered Peter into her arms. Peter wriggled free.

"You told me to mind the flat, didn't you?" he asked, much disgusted. "Well, I done it. That's nothin'."

The thief gave the name of Louis Harris. He said he was 35 years old and lived in West Twenty-first Street. He will be taken to Police Headquarters this morning and photographed for the Rogues' Gallery.

FACT No. 1

When whiskey is bottled in bond there is NO GUARANTEE in the Government's stamp that it is wholesome. Standard blended whiskies, so universal in use, have in them 99-8.10 per cent. of pure ethyl, and only about 2.10 of 1 per cent. at most of fusel oil; therefore, blended whiskies are purer and healthier than any other alcoholic beverage or stimulant.

DIDN'T PAY COAL EXPERT.

So Execution Issues Against Municipal Bond and Securities Company.

An execution for $1,570 in favor of Robert E. McQuay of Kentucky was received by Deputy Seriff Porges yesterday against the Municipal Bond and Securities Compan of 170 Broadway. The execution was obtained on a judgment for damages because of an agreement made with the company by McQuay Nov. 26, 1904, whereby he paid $1,000 to the concern for the examination of coal lands by an expert with the understanding that if the examination proved satisfactory the company was to finance a corporation to work mines on the property and operate a railroad thereto. The company had the land examined, but did not pay the expert, and McQuay entered suit for $1,500. The agreement was made when A. Norvale was President of the company.

Robert D. Campbell is President now. He could not be found yesterday.

CURB CAVALRYMAN MOURNED.

Brokers Want Policeman Joe Donohue Back with Them.

Ever since the curb brokers who buy and sell stocks on the Broad Street asphalt south of Exchange Place were made a crowd apart by a fence of Mr. McAdoo's traffic squad ropes, they have been watched over by Mounted Policeman Joe Donohue. Donahue's "job" was to keep the brokers within their inclosure. He knew by sight every member of the outside market, and from his point of vantage in the saddle was able to spot every stranger inside the ropes, and kept the brokers free from non-members.

The Commissioner transferred Donohue on Wednesday. Yesterday the brokers decided that the infantry policeman who takes his place would never be able to fill it properly, and got a petition to Commissioner Bingham under way which they hope will give them Donohue back.

$80,000 FACTORY FIRE.

Two Williamsburg Houses Also Burned—Firemen Suffer from Cold.

A six-story brick factory building on the southeast corner of Throop Avenue and Lorimer Street, Williamsburg, was burned early yesterday morning. The loss was $80,000. The factory caught fire from a blaze on the top floor of a three-story frame dwelling adjoining, at 36 Throop Avenue. The dwelling at 38 Throop Avenue was also burned.

The Roll Plate Metal Company, the Brooklyn Briar Wood Pipe Company, Longmore's gold beating shop, a hosiery factory, the Brooklyn Handkerchief Company, and the Wagner Tortoise Shell Company were the heaviest losers. At one time the Gaiety Theatre near by was in danger.

The firemen suffered severely from exposure and were obliged to work in relays.

The tenants of near-by apartment houses which were threatened were driven to the street by the police.

PATRICK'S CHAMPION MAY TESTIFY TO-DAY

Milliken Has Spent $71,000 for the Defense, He Says.

RUMOR OF VISIT TO SING SING

There May Be Another Motion for a New Trial—Execution Likely to be Again Postponed.

It was said last evening that W. M. K. Olcott, counsel for Albert T. Patrick in the proceedings for a new trial now pending before Recorder Goff in General Sessions, will visit Sing Sing to-day to consult his client, and that John T. Milliken of St. Louis, Patrick's brother-in-law, who has furnished all the money for his defense, will accompany him there. They had not reached Sing Sing late last night, though inquiries at Mr. Olcott's house brought the reply that he was out of town and would not return. Where he had gone could not be learned.

Mr. Olcott had intended to visit Patrick last Saturday to ascertain if the prisoner was willing to waive the privilege restraining his former counsel, Frederick B. House, from going on the stand to testify concerning a confession alleged to have been given to him by Patrick. Mr. Jerome showed a strong desire to obtain from Patrick a clear-cut statement as to whether he would permit Mr. House to testify or not.

After the Recorder had expressed doubt as to his own right to compel the appearance of Patrick here for the purpose of waiving or refusing to waive those rights, Mr. Jerome turned to Mr. Olcott with a request that he communicate with his client and ascertain his position in the matter. Mr. Olcott refused to do so on the ground that the court had it in its power to send for Patrick.

If Mr. Olcott goes to Sing Sing it is supposed therefore that the object of his visit must be a different one. Mr. Milliken is one of the affiants in the case, and has been ordered by Recorder Goff to appear when the hearing is resumed at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Mr. Olcott said on Wednesday that he had telegraphed for the St. Louis manufacturer, and had no doubt he would be here when called. Mr. Jerome has asked for Mr. Milliken several times and has declared himself unable to proceed further with the examination of the witnesses until he has heard him. Mr. Milliken cannot be compelled to appear, but if he fails to do so his affidavit will be stricken from the motion papers, and his absence will undoubtedly unfavorably affect his brother-in-law's case.

If Mr. Milliken appears he will have to face many questions by Mr. Jerome concerning the manner in which the Texan witnesses brought here were discovered and their affidavits obtained. The hearing so far has proved two of them to be ex-convicts. Judge A. R. Railey of Houston, who took the affidavits of the witnesses and arranged their coming here, showed remarkable ignorance on the stand of all the details connected with the work done by him. He did not even remember what affidavits had been sent to this city from his office. In the affidavit of Mr. Milliken it appears that the St. Louis man himself had obtained one of the eight original affidavits. When asked about this, Judge Railey said he could not imagine whose affidavit Mr. Milliken was referring to, and as Mr. Jerome read the names of the original affiants one by one Mr. Railey asserted in each case that he had taken and forwarded that man's deposition.

Jerome may also go into the matter of compensation. All the witnesses have testified on the stand that they have received neither money nor promises beyond their immediate expenses for the New York trip. But Mr. Milliken has said that he has spent $71,000 in the defense of his brother-in-law so far. In his affidavit he swears that he spent large sums on getting detectives to find the witnesses brought North.

Judge Railey said on the stand that he had employed no detectives. The affidavit of Mr. Milliken being read to him, he said he had heard vague talk about detectives being sent down from New York, but that he knew nothing definite about it. Of these and related things Mr. Jerome may inquire should Mr. Milliken take the stand. So far Patrick has personally directed the campaign in his defense, and hardly a step has been taken by his lawyers except after conference with him. It seems likely therefore that Mr. Milliken will want to talk the matter over with his brother-in-law before proceeding to New York.

Mr. Olcott will endeavor to-day to have three new affidavits of Texas witnesses accepted by the District Attorney and admitted by the court as part of the motion papers. Both the Recorder and the District Attorney refused on Wednesday to open the way for new evidence beyond what was included in the original motion papers. The three new affidants, all of whom are here ready to appear in court, are of a different class from those put on the stand hitherto. They are Edwin D. McKenzie, official stenographer to Judge Kittrell of the Sixty-first Texas District; Adolph Goldman, a real estate dealer and ranchman of Houston, Texas, and former Chief of Police John G. Blackburn of that city.

Their affidavits present a picture of the life Valet Jones has lived since his return to Texas, shunned by all reputable people and thrown for companionship on such men as Joseph Jordan, the witness now in the Tombs awaiting sentence for perjury, and other witnesses brought here originally by the defense in the Patrick case. When he came across the path of such men as the new affiants he was driven away the moment they discovered his identity. On the fact that Jones in such instances invariably protested that he was innocent of the murder of Rice and had committed perjury against Patrick only to save his own life the defense now bases its latest demand for a new trial.

Mr. McKenzie ran across Jones while fishing near Houston in the Spring and Summer last year. Jones took to him like a sick dog to a tramp. The first time they met McKenzie did not know who the man was. The second time he learned it from Jones's own lips and made off. The third time he drove the ex-valet out of his boat. This was the manner, as related in his affidavit:

> Knowing and sharing in the general aversion to him (Jones) and to the part he had confessed he had taken in the matter, it occurred to me that I did not want to talk to him at all, and I said to him: "Here, I have enough business of my own not to want to bother with other people's business, and I won't talk to you about that matter at all." He still stayed in my boat, however, and a couple of times more tried to recur to the same subject, seeming to want to argue me into listening to him. Finally I got angry at his staying with me, and I told him to leave the boat, which he did, and he walked off without another word.

Goldman and Blackburn saw Jones pass through the hall in the Court House at Houston one day and heard a man remark:

"There goes that —— Jones!"

Moved by curiosity, Goldman went over to Jones and also asked Blackburn to shake hands with him. Blackburn asked instead if Jones was the man implicated in the Rice murder, to which Jones replied:

"Rice was not murdered—I told that lie to save myself."

It is said that if these new affidavits are refused by the court, Mr. Olcott will use them as a basis for a second and independent motion for a new trial. The execution of Patrick has been set for the week beginning March 18.

Whether an additional motion be made or not, it is not likely that the hearing now pending will be concluded by that time. This fact, it was said yesterday, will certainly result in another postponement of the execution either by order of the court or the Governor.

Jacob A. Riis Much Better.

It was said last night at the Post Graduate Hospital that Jacob A. Riis, who went to the hospital some time ago on the advice of his physician, Dr. A. Lambert, has been steadily improving in health ever since his reception, until all danger has been eliminated from his present condition.

TAMPERING WITH BILLS CHARGED TO NEW LEADER

Rogers Says Moreland Amended Budget, Telling Nobody.

REORGANIZERS WIN FIGHT

Assembly, After Debate, Passes Appropriation Bill, Rogers Dissenting—False Economy Alleged.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 1.—Changing of the records and tampering with bills were charged against Majority Leader Moreland to-day by former Leader Rogers in the bitterest fight the Assembly has witnessed this session. Minority Leader Palmer observed that for a similar offense a former Index Clerk had been indicted by the Grand Jury of Albany County.

The issue was the insertion of nearly a score of amendments into the Annual Appropriation bill by Moreland in what Rogers declared was an illegal manner. Moreland admitted that he inserted the amendments, but held that he had that right. Rogers held that it had been done surreptitiously and that Moreland should have called the attention of the House to what he had done before asking a vote on a bill containing amendments of which it knew nothing.

Rogers was indirectly attacking Gov. Higgins and the régime of Speaker Wadsworth, and Messrs. Moreland and Burnett, who made up the Appropriation bill by themselves. Though no one accused him of it, Rogers took occasion to remark that he did not hold a brief from State Chairman Odell.

A four-hour debate ended with the passage of the Appropriation bill by 118 votes. Rogers alone voted in the negative. A close call was maintained throughout.

"After the adjournment of the House last Friday," said Rogers, "I was furnished by the Journal Clerk, on request, with a correct copy of the amendments as adopted. When the bill came before us Monday I found that it had fifteen or eighteen changes which were not included in the copy furnished me on Friday.

"There had been no session of the House. There certainly could have been no way to adopt these amendments. I want to know how these amendments appear in the bill and by what authority they were made."

Moreland explained that in making these extra amendments he was simply following custom. He added:

"I think this House sees with a clear eye what the purpose of this inquiry is, and I call attention emphatically to the fact that whatever amendments were made by me are now on the desk of the members. It is not my purpose to accomplish anything in a subterranean manner."

"I regret," returned Rogers, "that the gentleman from Chemung flies into a passion and declares that I am actuated by some ulterior design. I disclaim that completely. My efforts to learn the contents of the Appropriation bill were met with scant courtesy, and the Chairman insisted that the members should vote out the bill without considering it. The fact remains that the gentleman from Chemung arrogated to himself the authority to go to the Journal Clerk and change the record of this House."

Moreland, pale with rage, accused Rogers of furnishing ammunition to the Democrats, and declared the attack a personal one. Rogers denied this. He said that in Speaker Nixon's administration the changing unlawfully of a Journal record, or tinkering with a bill with intent to deceive, was regarded as an offense which would not be tolerated. A high State officer was put out of the House by order of Speaker Nixon for fear that he was planning to "doctor" the Appropriation bill to favor his departments.

The Moreland amendments, Rogers declared, would increase the total appropriations about $90,000.

"I want to call the attention of this House," he added, "to the fact that we're now supposed to be under a régime that is especially open and above board. It has tried to make it appear that the management this year is much superior to that of last year."

Minority Leader Palmer said no man had the right to take out a bill from the record and change it as Moreland had. Rogers declared that the apparent economy in the bill was false and that the cuts in the appropriations were unwarranted.

On a request, on a motion incidental to the fight for a division of the House by a "party vote," Speaker Wadsworth ruled, "There can be no party vote recorded in this manner. There are three parties here."

CAN'T HAVE SON AS PARTNER.

Boss Mason's Union Hands Strike Until the Firm Is Dissolved.

When Theobald Hermann, a boss mason, filed in the County Clerk's Office at Newark, N. J., yesterday, a notice of the dissolution of his partnership with his son, John, it became known that labor unions had forced him to take the step. Hermann does a good business in South Twelfth Street, Newark. His son had been his assistant for some time, and had worked so diligently that the father took him into partnership.

A walking delegate of a local labor union heard of it and asked the age of the junior member of the firm. When Mr. Hermann said the boy was but 17 years old, the delegate declared that he must be dropped out of the partnership.

Mr. Hermann protested that he had a right to have whom he pleased as his partner, but thought more about the matter when an hour later all his hands quit work.

He had a number of pressing orders, and concluded that it would be cheaper to dissolve the partnership. When the notice of dissolution was filed yesterday the striking hands went back to work.

ARMY APPROPRIATION PASSED

Also Bill for Marking Northern Graves of Confederates.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The House to-day passed the Army Appropriation bill and also, amid applause from both sides, the Foraker bill, providing for the marking of the graves of Confederates buried in the North.

Points of order made to the provisions for a cable ship for the Atlantic Coast and to a ship for mine planting on the Pacific Coast eliminated these provisions from the Army Appropriation bill. The alleged powder trust came in for sharp criticism in debate and Democratic endeavor to have the Government begin the manufacture of its own powder met defeat both on points of order and finally by direct vote.

The Army bill, as passed, carries something more than $69,000,000.

Abolishes Lieutenant Generalcy.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The House Committee on Military Affairs to-day made a unanimous report on the Prince bill abolishing the grade of Lieutenant General. The bill is intended to take the place of the provision to the same end which was defeated in the Army Appropriation bill by a point of order, and provides that when the office shall next become vacant the grade shall cease.

H. B. Seaman Gets a $7,500 Bridge Job.

Bridge Commissioner Stevenson appointed Henry B. Seaman of 135 St. James's Place, Brooklyn, consulting engineer to the Department of Bridges, at $7,500 a year. O. L. Nichols, formerly chief engineer of the department, was appointed consulting engineer a few weeks ago.

CHARGES A POLICE PLOT.

Berthe Claiche's Lawyer Says His Client Was to be Sacrificed.

Three letters written by Berthe Claiche to Emil Gendron were introduced by Assistant District Attorney Ely yesterday at the trial before Justice Davis, in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. One of them was written three weeks before the shooting, while the Frenchman was away from the city for a fortnight. They are written in most affectionate terms.

The letters will be used by the prosecution to prove that, far from being cruel to the defendant, as asserted by her lawyers, Gendron was kind to the woman, but was forgotten for another man. In the courtroom yesterday the letters attracted more notice on account of the light they threw on a certain phase of police activity than for their bearing on the case. Here are some passages from them:

> Yesterday * * * they (the detectives) never moved away from the door, and there was a stool pigeon there who was planted behind the stairs to see where we lived, and the detectives were opposite.
>
> I have been to see the proprietor of the saloon opposite about the detectives, for he knew those who were there yesterday. He told me that he would go to talk with them.
>
> Then the detectives let me pass, and ran after the wife of old Lucian, who was taken. If I had warned her, she would have saved herself and he would have taken me, especially as he knew me because he had already arrested me once, and then he told me he would let me go whenever he was alone.

The people's case was concluded about 11 o'clock. After a brief recess, in which the defendant fainted and was restored with some difficulty, ex-Judge Rosalsky opened the case for the defense. He spoke so sharply of Gendron that on one occasion Justice Davis remarked to him: "I think you go too far."

Harry Forbach was the first witness called and testified to having seen Berthe Claiche run out of her room on the night of June 24 with a blackened eye.

Having failed to force the prosecution to place Policeman Henry Morton on the stand, Mr. Rosalsky called him at 3:30 o'clock. Morton said he had become acquainted with Berthe Claiche on June 16 and had visited her fifteen times between that date and the day of the shooting, (July 8.) He said he had helped her and her mother on June 18 to move away from the room where she had been living. Asked why he did so, he said he went there as a policeman to protect the defendant. He denied having arranged with the defendant "to lure Gendron to his destruction."

The examination of Morton will be continued this morning. The defendant will then take the stand in her own behalf.

ELSBERG BILL DISAPPROVED.

Chamber of Commerce Votes Against It—Pipe Galleries Dangerous.

The Chamber of Commerce, at its monthly meeting yesterday, adopted resolutions disapproving of every feature of the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill. The report of the Committee on Internal Trade and Improvements had excepted from its general condemnation the section of the bill which gives the Rapid Transit Commission broader powers for the building of pipe galleries; but when the report came up for discussion John C. Moore moved to strike out that section.

"I don't think it would be wise for the Chamber to go on record as approving pipe galleries," said Mr. Moore. "I regard the carrying of gas pipes and large water mains in the Subway parallel with it very dangerous. There have been accidents from gas explosions and the breaking of water mains. It would be madness, since the facilities for shutting off of gas and water mains are poor. Even now the leakage of gas in the Subway will, in a very short time, prove a dangerous factor in the lives of those who use the Subway."

The Chamber took Mr. Moore's view and the report as approved had nothing in it agreeing with any part of Mr. Elsberg's bill.

Jacob H. Schiff, who was one of a committee of five named at the last meeting to consider currency reform, sent a letter regretting his inability to serve because of his journey to Japan.

BATTALION CHIEFS SHIFTED.

Seven Change Places—Howe Sent Across to Brooklyn.

Seven battalion chiefs of the Fire Department were transferred yesterday by Chief Croker, with the approval of Commissioner O'Brien. Forty firemen were also transferred. Here are the transfers of battalion chiefs:

Crawley, First District, in Lower Manhattan, to the Eleventh, upper west side.

Duffy, Ninth District, Forty-seventh Street and Eighth Avenue, to the First.

Graham, Twenty-fifth District, Brooklyn, to the Eighth District, West Thirty-third Street.

Howe, Eighth District, to the Twenty-fifth District.

Hawk, Eleventh District, to the Thirty-second District, Brooklyn.

Barrett, from the repair shop to the Eighteenth District, the Bronx.

Travers, from the Thirty-second District, to the repair shop.

The transfers caused much comment about Fire Headquarters. The shifting of Battalion Chief Howe from one of the most important districts in Manhattan to a quiet district in Brooklyn was especially provocative of discussion. It was Howe who was sent to Baltimore, at the time of the big fire there, in command of the engines dispatched from this city.

The transfer of Battalion Chief Travers to the repair shop was insisted upon by the Civil Service Commission. He was the only one of the candidates taking the examination for the position of Chief of Construction who passed.

MAY GET CASTELLANE GOODS.

Creditors Attempting to Seize the Treasures in the Paris Mansion.

PARIS, March 1.—An application was made to the Civil Tribunal of the Seine to-day on behalf of a money lender for permission to levy on the household goods in the Castellane mansion in order to satisfy a claim for money advanced to Count Boni.

The lawyers of the Countess resisted the request on the ground that the goods are her separate property. The case was referred to a Judge in chambers to determine whether a portion of the Count's belongings are in the mansion.

The case is considered to be a test affecting numerous other creditors.

Spring Coats for Men

NEW TOP-COAT & OVERCOAT MODELS

$15.00 to $40.00

We find our Main Chance in this: the exclusive models which your master tailor of the to-order persuasion designs, are ours almost as soon as they are his. Yes, it is borrowed thunder, but keep in mind that it is thunder. To take this initiative compels us to maintain our own organization of tailormen. The benefit is accumulative. You will find it in the character of the garments—in their distinctiveness, which has its source in expressive tailoring.

Ready for the service of the discerning, we have a representative series of the new spring top-coats and overcoats in conservative and daring models, such as the long, "button-through" coat which has a velvet collar to match the shade of the fabric, hugs the waist snugly, flares over the hips and marks the full skirt with a deep centre vent.

Such are the new gray fabrics; double herring-bone weaves, medium and hair-line stripes and plaids, together with tan coverts and black or oxford rough surface materials.

MORTGAGE TAX REPEAL URGED ON LEGISLATURE

200 Business Men Joined by Up-State Interests at Hearing.

GOVERNOR IS UNFAVORABLE

Promises, However, to Consider Well Any Amendment That May Reach Him—Recording Tax Favored.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 1.—A delegation of more than 200 representing the Chamber of Commerce and nearly every organization of taxpayers, real estate, and savings bank interests of New York City came up to Albany to-day to demand repeal of the mortgage law. On their arrival by special train they were met by representatives of similar organizations from nearly every county in the State, the whole forming one of the largest and most influential delegations that have come here this session. The hearing was before the joint Committee on Taxation.

Ex-Justice William N. Cohen of New York made the principal address. Frequent questions were put to him by Assemblyman Wade, Chairman of the Assembly Committee, and Senator Lewis of the Senate Committee.

Judge Cohen contended that the mortgage tax came out of the land, and dilated on the injustice of it by showing that the real estate owners paid nearly 90 per cent. of the taxes in New York.

"It was the honest opinion of honest men a year ago," said Judge Cohen, "that an influx of money would come into mortgage security if the measure was passed. Carnegie, John Harsen Rhoades, and others said so. But the statistics show that this has not been the case."

"Cannot that be accounted for in a measure by the attacks made on the law?" asked Assemblyman Wade.

"I believe it can," was the reply. "But there is something radically wrong with the law. A lender does not want to put money into an investment where he is in danger of confiscation and liable to a probable defense of usury."

Addresses were made by Cassius C. Day of Rochester, Alderman B. W. B. Brown of New York, who presented a resolution passed by the Board of Aldermen yesterday; Lawson Purdy of New York, and Henry W. Sprague of Buffalo. Lawrence Veiller, Vice President of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, handed in a printed memorandum addressed to the Governor and the Legislature.

Before the hearing the delegation waited on Gov. Higgins in the Executive Chamber. The Governor said:

"While I am pleased to have citizens come to the Executive Chamber to explain their views on matters of pending legislation, I have neither the authority nor the desire to dictate to the Legislature what measures it should send to me for my approval or to communicate with it except by message. If I were a political boss, I might take your views at this time for the purpose of determining whether or not I should issue orders to carry them into effect; but, as a constitutional officer, I shall ask you to defer argument until some bill comes before me for official action on my part.

"The Mortgage Tax bill came from the Legislature last year without recommendation, or suggestion from me, except the general one that the cost of Government should be provided for. In my message this year I urged the Legislature to give the measure a fair trial, 'perfecting it, if necessary, before interfering with its fundamental principles.'

"If any amendment to the tax law reaches me, I can assure you that it will have my open and unprejudiced consideration."

DR. WOODBURY SILENT.

But the Mayor Favors Street Cleaning and Other Inquiries.

Persons who inquired at the office of the Department of Street Cleaning yesterday for Comissioner Woodbury, to see what he had to say in reply to the charges of graft brought against his department, were startled at being told that "Commissioner Woodbury has gone to Sing Sing."

"What!" exclaimed one of the visitors. He was reassured by the supplemental statement that the Commissioner had gone on business and would return later in the day. When the Commissioner did return much later he refused to talk about the charges made against the department under his administration.

Mayor McClellan was asked what he intended to do about the Aldermanic investigation of the Street Cleaning Department.

"I am glad to have any of the city departments investigated," he said, "and the more thoroughly they are investigated the better I shall be pleased. No investigation can do any harm, and if any evils are discovered the discovery will enable the administration to rectify them."

HIS PLAY WAS A SCORCHER.

Pinochle Enthusiast Started a Fire with an Exuberant Slap.

A party of convivial male servants of the German Club, at 112 West Fifty-ninth Street, were enjoying a quiet game of pinochle at the club last evening, when one of the players found four aces in his hand. With a shout of triumph he threw them down to "meld" them, exclaiming: "Mein Gott! a hundred aces."

At the same time he began to slap himself out of pure joy. One of his strenuous slaps struck his coat pocket, in which reposed a box of matches. The blow caused them to ignite, and quickly his coat was in flames. He ripped it off and tossed it on a bed, which in turn caught fire.

All then took to their heels, shouting "fire!" and filling the clubhouse with excitement. Some one turned in a fire alarm. The men had been playing in a fifth floor room, and the fire was confined to that room. The damage was small.

FATALLY POUNDED IN RING.

Tenny's Death May Stop Prizefighting in San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 1.—Harry Tenny, who was knocked out last night by Frankie Neil, the bantam champion pugilist, died to-day.

Tenny's stomach has been sent to a chemist, to determine whether the use of strychnine injected had poisoned his system and thus induced death.

The promoters of prize fighting are afraid that this death from blows in the ring will kill the game which has been so lucrative.

Neil has surrendered himself, as also have James Coffroth, Eddie Graney, Willis Britt, Morris Levy, and Mark Shaughnessy. All were charged with manslaughter. They promptly made arrangements for release on bail.

We have audited the books and accounts of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, both at its Home Office and its principal Domestic and Foreign Branches, and have compared the above statements therewith.

We have examined the Bonds and Stocks owned by the Society and the Secured Loans, together with the Collateral held as security therefor, and we are of the opinion that these Assets are fully worth the values at which they are stated; we have also verified the Cash Balances, both Domestic and Foreign, by certificates from the various Depositaries or by actual count, and we have examined the records of Overdue premiums and Agents' Advances and Balances and are satisfied that sufficient reserves have been made for possible losses thereon.

We have tested the clerical accuracy of the General Assurance Reserve, as certified by the Actuary of the Society, which exceeds the amount required by the Insurance Department of the State of New York, by the sum of $962,473. We also find that full provision has been made for all other Liabilities.

And WE HEREBY CERTIFY that in our opinion the above statement of Assets and Liabilities correctly sets forth the true financial position of the Society at December 31, 1905, and that the accompanying statement of Receipts and Disbursements is correct.

The Pulque Peddler of Mexico

Pulque is the Mexican's favorite beverage, and the pulque peddler a most picturesque individual. Pulque is the fermented sap taken from the stalk of an Aloe or Century plant.

When the plant is about to bloom, the stalk is cut off and the stem that is left standing is hollowed out into a bowl in which the sap collects. A gallon or two is drawn off each day and taken to the hacienda, fermented over night and then taken to the city and consumed the same day.

The pulque peddler is only one of hundreds of picturesque sights to be seen on a trip through Old Mexico.

An attractive booklet "Sights and Scenes in Old Mexico," is ready for distribution. It is replete with interesting facts and fiction about the Egypt of the New World. Write for free copy.

How to go to Old Mexico.

The principal highway to Old Mexico lies through St. Louis. Most roads run through trains to St. Louis, and the M. K. & T. Ry. runs through sleepers from St. Louis to the City of Mexico, without change. The route lies through the most interesting section of the United States—Indian Territory and Texas, where greatest activity and development are manifest. Most of the principal cities of Texas and Mexico: Dallas, Ft. Worth, Waco, San Antonio, Torreon, Zacatecas, Aguascalientes, Guanajuato, and etc., lie along the route, and stop-overs are allowed at pleasure. Ask your ticket agent to sell you a ticket via St. Louis and the M. K. & T. Ry. For rates and full information, write

ANTI-FOREIGN OFFICIAL MADE PEKING GOVERNOR

Yuan Is Regarded as Responsible for the Shanghai Riots.

POWERS TO BE REASSURED

China's Envoys to Tell Them There Is No Cause for Alarm in Situation—Nan-Chang Magistrate Dead.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

SHANGHAI, Wednesday, Feb. 28.—The native press and Peking telegrams report that the Chinese Government has decided to instruct its Ministers abroad to assure the powers that there is no cause for uneasiness in the present situation and that there are no signs of an anti-foreign movement.

While it is admitted that there is no apparent disposition to encourage overt acts of hostility, as in 1900, nevertheless the general unrest throughout the country is directly due to the Government's unmistakable support of the policy of China for the Chinese, the most aggressive manifestations of which are indorsed, if not directed, by the officials. The mot d'ordre, as shown in recent memorials and regulations of the Wai-Wu-Pu and the Board of Commerce, is to keep the foreigner at arm's length, an attitude reflected in every provincial yamen.

The policy of the Government is significantly indicated by the extraordinary promotion of the Shanghai Taotai, Yuan. This notoriously corrupt official, whom the Consular and diplomatic bodies regard as primarily responsible for the Shanghai riots, is now appointed Governor of Peking, the meaning of which appointment, outweighing all assurances, is fully appreciated by the Chinese.

SHANGHAI, March 1.—The Nan-Chang magistrate who was wounded in the course of the dispute with Catholic missionaries which resulted in the riot and the killing of a number of Catholic and Protestant missionaries is dead.

BANDIT HELD A TOWN HALL.

Killed a Finnish Police Commissary and Three Other Men.

HELSINGFORS, March 1.—The pursuit of the bandits who last Monday night entered the Russian State Bank here, killed the guardian, and obtained $37,500, resulted to-day in the loss of four more lives at Tammersfors, where two of the fugitives were cornered. One of the bandits got possession of the Town Hall and held it for hours, but finally was subdued by a stream of water directed by the firemen.

While Commissary of Police Balushin was examining the two captives, one of them grabbed a revolver from the belt of the Chief of Police and with it killed Balushin. The bandit then dashed up stairs, where he barricaded himself in a room commanding the stairs and lobby and the street outside. There he defied the police for three hours, meanwhile haranguing from the window a crowd of thousands of persons, many of whom were in sympathy with his Socialistic speeches.

Two policemen, who tried to pick off the desperado from a house opposite were killed by the bandit, who was an excellent marksman. After all other resources had been exhausted the firemen were called out and poured a flood of water into the window. Simultaneously a picked band of police and firemen stormed the stairs. One of the assailing party was killed and nine were wounded before the bandit, who fought desperately with a big knife, could be overpowered.

The robber, who is a Dorpat blacksmith, boasted of membership in the Baltic Revolutionary Committee, and said the robbery of the Russian State Bank was committed to swell the revolutionary war fund. Six thousand dollars of the booty was recaptured.

PETER B. OLNEY ROBBED.

New Butler Took 200 Pounds of Silverware—Jailed in a Jiffy.

Detectives of the Central Office made a record for speed yesterday morning in apprehending a man accused of stealing $4,000 worth of silverware from the home of Peter B. Olney at Lawrence, L. I. Mr. Olney was not at home on Wednesday night. On reaching his office in Wall Street yesterday morning he was notified by Mrs. Olney that their butler, August Larsen, had run away in the night with all their smaller silverware, in all 114 articles.

Mr. Olney hurried to Police Headquarters, where he gave a description of the stolen property and of the butler, whom he had employed three weeks ago. The man came to him, he said, with the best of recommendations from the steward of the steamship Oscar II. of the Scandinavian-American line. He was neat, obliging, and thoroughly understood the duties of his place. He proved to be an expert thief, as he had thought to cut the telephone wire and the burglar alarm wires of the house before he fled with the booty. Mrs. Olney discovered the cut wires when she tried to telephone their loss to her husband.

The sixteen detectives who search pawn shops for stolen goods were notified and before Mr. Olney reached his office again Larsen had been captured. He was carrying the silverware in a telescope bag when taken. Detective Sergeants Robert Charlton and John Boyle were hurrying to the Long Island Ferry when they saw a man get off a car and look about as if a little uncertain which way to go. He seemed to answer the description of the Olney butler. It was evident, too, that his burden was an unusually heavy one.

The detectives grabbed Larsen and rushed him into a pawn broker's shop where they found the 114 pieces of silver neatly incased in their coverings. The man would say nothing of himself, but acknowledged that he had meant to take the silver to a steamer at Hoboken and return to Norway, where he had a sweetheart.

When Mr. Olney returned to his office he was told that he was wanted at Police Headquarters. Arriving there he identified the prisoner and the silverware as his property. Mr. Olney was greatly elated and shook hands with the detectives warmly and counted the silver to be sure that it was all there. Not a piece was missing.

Among the many pieces were several family heirlooms which are priceless to their owners. There was a crudely shaped silver fork of unusual weight. There were six spoons known as "apostles." One was dated 1673 and another bore the inscription, "From Mama to Mary, 1824." There were many other articles, including a tray with the date 1763 stamped on it, which had belonged to Mrs. Olney's great-great-great-grandmother.

The stolen silverware included all sorts of table silver. Its total weight was 200 pounds.

MAYOR STOPS FRANCHISE FOR CONNECTING ROAD

May Insist on First Terms, He Tells Transit Commission.

THEY WERE TWICE AS HIGH

Mr. McClellan Did Not Receive a Copy of Proposed Changes—Subway to King's Bridge March 5.

Revised terms for the New York Connecting Railroad franchise were favorably reported by the Committee on Contracts at the meeting of the Rapid Transit Commission yesterday, but, owing to objections raised by Mayor McClellan, the franchise was not acted on by the board. The Mayor informed the commission that he did not like the contract as drafted, and that, if it were passed without giving him an opportunity to make a supplemental examination, he would certainly disapprove the franchise when it came before him.

When the board met, President Orr reported that the committee was ready with its draft of a franchise for the connecting road. George L. Rives of counsel for the board submitted a copy of the franchise. Mayor McClellan immediately wanted to know why a copy had not been sent to him in advance of the meeting, as copies had been sent to the other members of the board. Mr. Rives said there had not been enough to go around, and so the Mayor had not received one. Then the Mayor demanded to know if it was the intention of the board to pass upon the franchise at once, to which President Orr replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Rives then read the terms of the proposed franchise, as revised by the committee. The compensation to the city for the right to run trains is placed at $100,000, to be paid within sixty days of the signing of the contract, with annual payments of $25,000 for the first ten years of the grant and annual payments of $50,000 for the remaining fifteen years, together with $100 a year for the privilege of constructing the Randall's Island bridge.

This aggregates $1,102,500 in payments to the city, as against $2,250,000 provided in the original terms drawn by Chief Engineer Nichols of the Bureau of Franchises.

According to other provisions of the proposed franchise the Connecting Railroad must begin its legal steps, prior to construction, within six months after getting its franchise, and must have its property consents within one year, otherwise the franchise is to become void. The road must be completed within five years. Steam may be used as a motive power in the beginning, but a change to electricity must be made if the city requires it.

When new streets are laid out by the city in the Bronx and Queens the road must conform at its own expense with the new streets. The road is to have no right to carry local passengers unless permission is obtained from the Board of Estimate and on terms which that body may fix. This point caused an additional objection from the Mayor, who said that a five-cent fare rate had been suggested in such a contingency, but that such a rate, applying only to the immediate Connecting Road, would not cover passengers when they rode on the line over New York, New Haven and Hartford tracks or the Long Island Railroad tracks.

"I want the last word before action is taken on this matter," said the Mayor when the terms had been read. "There is nothing to be gained by acting to-day, because neither myself nor the Board of Estimate can do so until the courts have passed on the constitutionality of the act changing the franchise powers from the Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate. If this should be pushed through in its present form, it is doubtful if I could approve it if the Nichols report is shown to be correct."

Because of this declaration the matter was laid over for a week, at which time the Mayor will suggest some amendments along the line laid down by Mr. Nichols.

The board received a letter from August Belmont, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, stating that his company would be able to operate Subway trains from One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street to the Harlem Ship Canal and King's Bridge on March 12. He said the stations at 168th Street and at 181st Street would not be completed for several weeks. The letter contained a request that the board give permission at once for the running of trains. Alderman Meyers wanted to know why the section was not open March 1 for the running of trains, as had been announced. Chief Engineer Rice said that operation could be begun next Monday, and the board then granted the request of President Belmont on condition that operation be begun on Monday.

The resolution of the Board of Aldermen in criticism of the heat provided on the Subway and elevated cars, was replied to by Mr. Belmont. He wrote that the cars were heated by electricity when the temperature reached 40 degrees or less. This letter was sent to the Board of Aldermen.

The board received a report on the progress of the work on what is known as Contract No. 2, being the tunnel under the East River. Engineer Rice said that the work which was to have been completed by September next would not be finished until December. Mr. Rice said that he thought the tunnel section would be ready as soon as the Joralemon Street, Fulton and Flatbush Avenue sections in Brooklyn, with which it connects Manhattan, were finished.

Controller Metz offered a resolution calling on the Interborough Company to run more Subway trains and providing for the appointment of a committee to investigate the question. Commissioner Sterin, Controller Metz, and Chief Engineer Rice were named as the committee. Dr. Soper's report on sanitary conditions in the Subway, President Orr reported, had been forwarded to President Belmont with the request that the Interborough people act on the recommendations at once.

DARLINGTON BLAMED FOR SMOKE NUISANCE

Has the Power to Stop It but Wavers, Mr. Barney Says.

VIOLATIONS FREQUENT NOW

Corporations Criticised the Academy of Medicine and County Medical Society Act.

The recent widespread increase of the smoke nuisance in this city has caused a renewal of the agitation for the stricter enforcement of the law governing the escape of smoke and noxious gases within the city limits. The Academy of Medicine has taken up the matter, and Dr. Charles L. Dana, the President of the academy, has appointed a committee of physicians to examine the question in all its phases. This committee, consisting of Drs. Joseph D. Bryant, Robert Abbé, and Walter B. James, has been actively investigating the matter for several weeks. Dr. F. M. Crandall, President of the County Medical Society, has also taken up the investigation along the lines followed by the Academy of Medicine.

Last Friday night, before the Society of Chemical Industry, Health Commissioner Darlington read a paper on "Municipal Regulation of the Smoke Nuisance," in which he depicted the difficulties of his department in obtaining convictions of turners of soft coal. To account for his lack of success in failing to suppress the evil, Dr. Darlington said that it was necessary under the present provisions of the Sanitary Code to show, not only that the smoke was discharged from a building, but also that it was discharged to the detriment and annoyance of some person or persons not therein employed. He also said that in many cases this was difficult to prove because many persons who complained of the smoke nuisance refused to go to court to testify. Consequently the department was unable to make much progress. Dr. Darlington also said that while the Department of Health undoubtedly possessed great powers, he was averse to their exercise without further legislation.

Charles T. Barney, who has made a very extended and careful study of this question, and who a year ago wrote to the Mayor comparing the smoke ordinances of the different American cities with that of New York, said yesterday that it was not necessary at all for the Health Department to proceed, as it now does, under Section 96 of the Sanitary Code, but it had an ample and complete remedy and means of punishing those creating such a nuisance under Section 1,261 of the charter. This provides that in all judicial proceedings, orders of the Health Department shall at all times be regarded and treated as prima facie just and legal; and Section 1,262 of the charter provides that whoever shall violate any order of the Department of Health shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be subject in addition to a penalty of $250, to be recovered in a civil action. The department up to Sept. 27, 1905, acted under these sections, and, Mr. Barney says, got prompt compliance with the orders of the department, and helped to keep the city comparatively free from smoke.

Mr. Barney, discussing the matter, added:

"It appears to me that it is distinctly 'up to' Dr. Darlington himself, for he admits he has the power to suppress the nuisance, and yet he halts and says that he wishes further legislation enacted before exercising that power.

"Now, the wavering, halting policy of the department in reference to the punishment of violators has made the orders of the department in this instance anything but respected. Any one who has the interests of the city at heart can readily foresee the result of such a policy. Already the large corporations who have become aware of the department's policy are continuous and everyday violators of the law.

"There is absolutely no foundation whatever for the contention advanced by some of the large corporations, like the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the Edison Company, which are constant and frequent violators of the law in reference to smoke, that it is impossible for them to generate the immense power necessary to operate their plants without producing great quantities of smoke. The only basis for such a contention is the question of expense."

SKATER BROKAW LEADS FOR NATIONAL TITLE

Outpoints Bassett in Opening Figures of Championship Meet.

CHAMPION KEANE STAYS OUT

Small Number of Contestants for Honors at St. Nicholas Rink Causes Comment.

With four contestants the annual amateur figure skating championship began yesterday at the St. Nicholas Rink. Irving Brokaw of the St. Nicholas Skating Club and Edward W. Bassett, Wanderers' Skating Club, who competed last year, were among the starters, and the former led on the first thirteen figures skated by a score of 50 points to 41 for Bassett. The latter finished second to Dr. Arthur G. Keane of the New York Athletic Club last year, winning the second place over Brokaw by one point. The other two competitors were John J. Doughty, Plainfield (N. J.) Skating Club, who was third, with 21 points, and Arthur G. Williams, Newark, N. J., who finished with 18 points to his credit.

This is the smallest entry that the National championship has had in many years. G. G. Mead of Corona, L. I., also entered, but at the last moment he decided not to compete. Various reasons were advanced for the small number of entrants, and while the work of the men was high class it was a matter of sore disappointment to the followers of the sport. Brokaw appeared to relatively surpass Bassett, the latter twice tying with him, but showing poorly in the last two figures on the programme.

There was much comment upon the size of the entry list. A number laid this to the dissatisfaction last year with the judging when Bassett got second place over Brokaw. G. G. Mead sat in the balcony and watched the circles, scrolls, and "edges" of the competitors, declaring that he was satisfied that he had remained among the spectators.

F. M. Clarke, Secretary of the National Amateur Skating Association, ridiculed the disposition to criticise the judgments, saying the small entry was due to the realization that the skill acquired by the men whose persistent practice had advanced them to the championship class gave others little chance. He personally favored simplifying the schedule of figures, but this had been declared to be impractical.

The former champion, Dr. Keane, said that he thought that the open Winter, which had prevented many of the out-of-town figure skaters from practicing for the championship, was the real explanation of the small entry. He offered no explanation of his own failure to compete this year.

Bassett and Brokaw tied upon the first two figures skated, the outside edge roll forward and backward. Bassett was first into the ring for the next figure, the single and double flat foot skins, cross foot and two foot whirls. Brokaw followed, and his skating showed a trifle more grace and finish in the estimation of the judges, so that for the next four numbers he was placed a point higher than Bassett. The last of these was an intricate eight on one foot combined with single and double circles in which the St. Nicholas Skating Club man excelled.

Bassett was close up with Brokaw, however, and on the next figure, the curved angles—threes, single, double chain—beginning on outside or inside edge, Bassett performed more cleverly, winning the approval of the spectators and judges so manifestly that he took the point above Brokaw in the scoring.

The two New Jersey skaters, Williams and Doughty, were outpointed in all of these figures, although their work was good. In execution and finish they were excelled by Bassett and Brokaw. Williams outclassed Doughty until the more difficult figures were reached, and then the latter surpassed Williams.

Brokaw continued to lead from the eighth to the eleventh figures, and on the latter he was tied for the second time with Bassett. This figure was a series of brilliantly executed loops and ringlets, both men winning applause. Bassett and Brokaw fell off in executing the next figure, Doughty winning the high point by his fine work at the change of the edge roll forward. Bassett again failed on the same figure backward, Brokaw winning the high point. At this figure the competition stopped to continue to-day.

The scoring of the competitors for the thirteen figures skated was:

Irving Brokaw, St. Nicholas Skating Club, New York—4 4 4 4 4 4 3 4 4 4 4 3 4. Total—50 points.

Edward W. Bassett, Wanderers' Skating Club, New York—4 4 3 3 3 3 4 3 3 3 4 2 2. Total—41 points.

John J. Doughty, Plainfield Skating Club, New Jersey—1 1 1 1 1 2 2 1 2 2 1 4 2. Total—21 points.

Arthur G. Williams, Newark, N. J.—2 2 2 2 2 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1. Total—18 points.

HOPPE LOSES AT BILLIARDS.

Peterson Scores First Victory Against Champion and Wins $25.

Willie Hoppe was beaten last night at his billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street, for the first time since his return to New York after winning the world's championship in Paris. Charles Peterson, the St. Louis professional, beat Hoppe by 300 points to 211. Hoppe, however, played 18.1 balk line, while Peterson played 18.2. Some time ago the champion made an offer to play any "short stop" professional on these terms, offering to forfeit $25 every time he was defeated. Peterson came to the city last Monday and has been playing Hoppe twice a day ever since, but yesterday afternoon was the first time he succeeded in scoring a victory. Peterson's average was 18 12-16 and his high run 73. Hoppe made an average of 14 1-15 and his best run was 84.

In the evening Hoppe was in better form and he ran out a string of 400 to 276 for Peterson. Hoppe's average was 14 8-28 and his high run 48. Peterson averaged 10 6-27 and his high run was 57.

This afternoon will be ladies' day at Hoppe's rooms. He will meet Wilson P. Foss, the ex-amateur champion, at 400 points, Foss playing 18.2 and Hoppe 18.1 balk line.

MULLEN'S BILLIARD RUN.

Ex-Amateur Champion Shows Great Execution in a Match.

Many of the leading amateur and professional billiard players have been preparing for the big championship tournaments in this city. While not a competitor for the National amateur honors, which are to be decided in Chicago next month, Martin Mullen of Cleveland has been trying out a number of the amateurs. Mullen, the ex-champion, showed his former great skill on Wednesday in a match at 18-inch balkline, two counts in balk, in which he made a high run of 126 and backed it with 97, 85, and 74, making an average of 36 for 500 points. His opponent in the contest, which was played in Maurice Daly's academy, was F. S. Thompson.

Both J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, winner of the recent tournament at the Liederkranz Club for the possession of the gold cup, and Edward W. Gardner have been practicing against George F. Slosson. Poggenburg and Gardner will be the New York entries for the National amateur championship. The former engaged Slosson in a 300-point match on Wednesday, in which the amateur finished with an average of a fraction above 16 at 14-inch balkline, two counts in balk. Slosson played 18-inch balkline, one count in balk, completing his string of 500 with an average of 20. Gardner's best run against Slosson was 106 carroms.

From the present indications the National amateur tournament, which will begin in Chicago on March 12, will include, besides the New Yorkers, H. A. Wright of San Francisco, Calvin Demorest and C. F. Conklin of Chicago, and Brown. Conklin won the championship last year.

Gallagher Beats Taylor with Cue.

Thomas J. Gallagher, the Chicagoan, last night won his billiard match in the "short-stop" tournament at the Knickerbocker Academy, Fulton Street, Brooklyn. Gallagher on his twenty-fourth turn at the table made a run of 138 carroms at the eighteen-inch balkline, two counts in balk, that brought him within two points of the completion of his string. He finished it on his next turn, defeating Albert Taylor, champion of Illinois, by the score of 400 points to 293. Gallagher's average was 16 and his high runs 59 and 35. Taylor's average was 11 18-25 and his best run a cluster of 52.

Phil Daly Defeats Jackson at Pool.

Phil Daly defeated C. Jackson in the amateur handicap pool tournament game at the Broadway Billiard Academy last evening by a score of 85 to 81. Daly had to play 85 to Jackson's 90, and the former played the steadier game throughout. His high run was 16 to Jackson's 12, and he had but one scratch to Jackson's two. To-night R. Hirsch and D. Ricker will play.

GIANTS' FIRST PRACTICE.

Led by McGraw They Have a Lively Tussle with the Pushball.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 1.—Preliminary practice was started to-day by the New York National League team, although delayed trains and failure of many Giants to report at all caused changes in the plans of Manager McGraw. "Christy" and Henry Mathewson, Wiltse, Gilbert, Taylor, "Bob" Hall, Kennedy, and Fitzgerald donned uniforms for the first time. "Broadway Alec" Smith, who insists that he will return to the game this year if he can secure satisfactory terms from a major league club, mingled in the practice, and while batting sent a hot line drive that doubled up a colored pickaninny, landing the boy completely out and inflicting injuries that may result fatally, according to an announcement by physicians to-night.

Morning and afternoon practice was indulged in, and "Jeff," the colored rubber, and Harry Tuthill, the trainer, had their hands full attending to their charges after both sessions. The immense pushball was brought into play for the first time, and proved popular with youngsters as well as veterans. The leather ball is inflated in real balloon fashion, but was of sufficient weight to prevent an ascension.

McGinnity, Capt. McGann, Strang, Dahlen, and others are expected to-morrow.

"COVERING UP" PLAYERS.

Chairman Herrmann of National Commission Apprises President Johnson.

What is known as the "covering up" of baseball players, a practice instituted by many club managers of the major leagues of drafting a lot of minor league talent for the purpose, it is alleged, of keeping the players from signing elsewhere and selling them to the best advantage, has been brought to the attention of August Herrmann, as Chairman of the National Commission. The letter which Mr. Herrmann received upon the subject must have referred particularly to American League clubs, for he is said to have apprised President Ban Johnson of the situation, and the latter replied that he was only too willing for an investigation, and if any American League Club manager was found guilty, he should be punished. President Comiskey of the Chicago Club is one of the men implicated, and in reply to the accusation says:

"So far as 'covering up' players is concerned they are all in the same boat. They all do it, and a lovely time would be had if they started to go down the line to weed out the guilty. There would be about sixteen club owners convicted right off the reel. I don't know whether I was meant or not, but if I was the evidence can't be gathered together too quickly to suit me. I think there would be several panes cracked in the glass houses before the rocks ceased to fly."

Fultz Gives Up Playing for a While.

"Dave" Fultz, the centre fielder of the Greater New York team of the American League, has notified Manager Griffith that he will not be one of the party to go on the training trip South, and, according to present indications, will not play with the team at all this year.

MILE A MINUTE FOR BOAT.

Sportsmen's Show Exhibitors Afraid to Let Craft on Garden Lake.

A new motor boat for which the phenomenal speed of a mile a minute or better is claimed was placed on exhibition yesterday at the Motor Boat and Sportsmen's Show in Madison Square Garden. It is known as the Rider speed boat, and the inventor of the novel system by which this excessive speed is said to be obtained says that a small boat has been tested successfully on the Hudson near Albany. The boat occupies a place on the main floor adjoining the lake. It was the wish of the inventor to put it in the lake and give practical tests. Some of the motor boat people who have seen the boat objected on the ground that the simplest working of the boat's mechanism had a tendency to churn up the water at a frightful rate, and they were afraid that their boats might be swamped and the water overflow into the aisles.

The boat is equipped with a kerosene motor of small horse power. A 4½-inch tube runs from the bow to the stern of the craft, and by forcing water through this tube, which is then ejected with tremendous force at the rear, the speed properties of the boat are obtained.

J. Rogers Maxwell and W. Butler Duncan of the New York Yacht Club each ordered 40-foot motor boats yesterday to be equipped with twenty-five horse power Standard engines. The hulls will be built by Herreshoff. Commodore R. W. Bainbridge of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club ordered a 70-foot cabin launch from the Lamb Boat and Engine Company for use on Long Island Sound this coming season.

One of the handsomest pair of moose antlers ever seen in the Garden arrived at the Maine camp exhibit yesterday. The antlers have a spread of 64½ inches, with forty points. It is a perfect head in every respect. The head is valued at $500.

There was a big crowd in the Garden last night and the water sports claimed a large share of attention. Some of the results were:

Tilting Contest, Semi-Final of Round Robin Series.—D. J. Finn and R. Rouse defeated F. Trede and L. Stark; H. Kopff and A. Lilly defeated A. Smith and F. Pendrill.

CRESCENT REGATTA JUNE 30.

Gravesend Yachtsmen Postpone Action on the Final Race Schedule.

The Yacht Racing Association of Gravesend Bay held its schedule meeting at the Assembly, in Brooklyn, last evening, but owing to some misunderstanding relative to the award of certain dates the schedule was held over until March 29, when it will be formally adopted and announced at a meeting to be held at the Crescent Athletic Club. The only date awarded was for the open regatta of the Crescent Athletic Club, the first to be held by the club to mark its entry into yachting. This will be on Saturday, June 30.

The association considered the rearrangement of its racing courses, and accepted the alterations in them suggested by the sub-committee. Arrangements are being perfected to have the Lighthouse Board lay permanent marks on the new lines. The new racing rules adopted by the recent conference of the Atlantic Coast yacht clubs were also considered, but awaiting a formal draft of the rules no action was taken upon them.

WILL PLAY EASTERN WOMEN.

Western Golfers Accept Challenge—New System of Team Play.

CHICAGO, March 1.—Representatives of twenty-five golf clubs attended the annual meeting of the Western Women's Golf Association held here to-day. The election of officers took place, and for the first time a challenge which the Eastern Women's Golf Association has sent every year was accepted. The West will send a team of twenty women to the National championship tournament, which is to be held at West Newton, Mass.

Mrs. A. T. Brower of the Evanston Golf Club introduced a resolution declaring that instead of the group system of team play, which was used at tournaments last season, there should be three large teams of about twenty members each, one to represent the west side of the city and the other two the south and north sides respectively. The resolution was unanimously adopted. Officers were elected as follows:

President—Mrs. A. T. Brower; Vice President—Mrs. W. L. De Wolf; Secretary—Mrs. W. T. Beatty; Treasurer—Mrs. H. A. Beidler; members of the Executive Committee—Mrs. J. A. Edwards, Mrs. William Herrick, Mrs. Harry New, Mrs. G. B. Driglar, Mrs. G. D. Forrest, Miss Evelyn Vose, Mrs. E. H. Sprague, and Mrs. G. W. Roupt.

CURLING FOR CONLEY CUP.

Poor Attendance Limited Games to Two Rinks—Result Undecided.

Owing to the poor attendance of members of the St. Andrew's Curling Club at the Hoboken Skating Rink last night, only four teams competed for the Conley Cup. The teams were limited to three men, and only two rinks were used. The ice was in excellent condition, and although only two rinks played in the match the sport was good. The two winning rinks will play off the final round at a date to be determined upon. The score:

HORSEMEN PREPARING FOR BENNING MEETING

Thoroughbreds Training on Long Island in Good Condition.

200 NOW AT WASHINGTON

Oxnard Horses Prominent Among Those on the Ground—"Billy" Garth's Promising Charges.

With the Benning meeting of the Washington Jockey Club approaching, the work of preparing horses for the beginning of the Eastern season has about reached its serious stage, and from this time on there will be a general tightening up of the racers that have been in idleness through the long Winter months. At Gravesend, which has been the principal training ground on Long Island by reason of the reconstruction of the main course at Sheepshead Bay, there have already been some smart trials for this time of the year, and each day that weather permits the Benning lot are sent along a trifle faster.

A continuation of good weather will mean a particularly large shipment from New York to the course of the Washington Jockey Club, and it is promised that the horses will be much further advanced than is usual in the early Spring. Usually the horses that have campaigned at New Orleans and the other Winter tracks reach Washington with a decided advantage over those that have taken matters easily through the Winter, and it is proverbial that those hardened by actual racing have taken down most of the prizes for the first week at Benning, at least. This year their advantage will not be anything like what it has been, judging from what is being done by the New York trainers, and the indications are that from the first flag fall those trained on Long Island will be amply able to hold their own with the campaigners.

From Washington comes word that there are already between 200 and 300 horses at the track. Prominent among them is the Oxnard stable, headed by that sterling filly Santa Catalina, conqueror of Kiamesha in the running of the Vestal Stakes last Fall. There is also a 2-year-old half-sister to Santa Catalina, by the English sire, Melton. The young filly, like the winner of the Vestal, has been doing exceedingly well. Others of the string are Bohemia and Marjoram, two excellent mares that promise well, and the 5-year-old Inflexible, whose return to the races will be watched with interest. He was bought after his breakdown as a two-year-old for stud purposes, but it has been decided to give him another racing trial. He appears to have recovered entirely.

As usual Billy Garth has a big handful, no fewer than forty horses, in his care, and most of them are being pointed for a try during the meeting soon to open. Among the owners who have horses in the care of the Virginia trainer are O. L. Richards, C. C. Smithson, C. S. Ross, A. D. Payne, W. L. Maupin, and C. H. Hurkamp, while there are not a few that will race in the Garth colors. Some of the horses in the lot are Bobbie Kean, T. S. Martin, Pater, Hyperion, Expansionist, Weirdsome, Judge White, Granville, Phaon, Walnut Grove, and many others.

"Jim" McLaughlin will ship Race King and others of the O. L. Richards string to Washington from Gravesend within a week or ten days, and W. C. Daly will probably leave at an earlier date. "Jim" Sinnott, who wintered his horses at Guttenberg, will leave with his lot to-morrow. He has, among others, Bizzy Izzy and Sunfire.

McCormick's Horse Poisoned.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, March 1.—Grenade, J. H. McCormick's horse, which won at City Park to-day, was the victim of poisoning after the race, and it was not until after two veterinaries had worked over him for some time that he was pronounced out of danger. Grenade is a New York horse, and is one of the best racers at City Park, and it is presumed that the effort to do away with him may have come from the fact that McCormick was largely responsible for the ruling off of some men whose actions were objectionable to the judges at City Park.

Turf and Field Club Elects Officers.

The annual meeting of the Turf and Field Club was held at the office of the club in the Windsor Arcade yesterday. Perry Belmont presided. The following were elected officers: President—Perry Belmont; Vice President—Brayton Ives; Treasurer—John E. Cowdin; Secretary—E. C. La Montagne; Assistant Secretary—H. A. Buck; Executive Committee—R. T. Wilson, Jr., R. B. Van Cortlandt, and Royal Phelps Carroll.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Starter Mars Cassidy has sent two men from New Orleans to school horses at the barrier for the coming Jockey Club season. One of the instructors will go to Benning, and the other will come on to Belmont Park. The selection of Belmont Park for the Long Island schooling is one that does not exactly please the trainers, for Gravesend is the real training ground at present, while Belmont Park is practically deserted.

The Queens County Jockey Club at Aqueduct promises to have cross-country races at its Spring meeting. This has been promised for some time by that association, but now it is an assured fact, and it will be a valuable addition to the steeplechase circuit.

COLUMBIA "BABIES" WON.

Defeat Sophomores in Hard Game of Basket Ball by 20 to 15.

Columbia's freshman basket ball five defeated the sophomores in the annual inter-class game in the gymnasium yesterday after much hard and rough play, by 20 to 15. The annual game is one of the big events of the year for the under classmen, and the "freshies" fought hard to beat their inveterate enemies, the "sophs." Both teams have been practicing for weeks, and to make victory the more sure both put two 'Varsity men in the line-up. Ryan, the big centre, and Meltzer played as if they were up against Pennsylvania and netted the winning goals for the freshmen. The 1908 team played the White brothers at centre and forward. The college "babies," as the freshmen are called, played a fast game, however, and after evening up matters with the sophomores ran exultantly from the field to their nursery, proud of their only victory over 1908. The line-up:

Sophomores, 15.	Position.	Freshmen, 20.
R. White	Forward	Lyons
Hall	Forward	Ryan
M. White	Centre	Cerussi
Earl	Guard	Kimbel
Graham	Guard	Meltzer

Goals from field—Hall, 2; White, 2; Ryan, 3; Meltzer, 2; Kimbel, 1; Cerussi, 1; Lyons, 1. Goals from foul—Sophomores, 7; freshmen, 4. Referee—C. Cuthell, Columbia, 1905. Time of game—Fifteen-minute halves.

WORKOUTS AT GRAVESEND.

Trainers Take Advantage of Good Track to Show a Bit of Speed.

Horsemen at Gravesend had an agreeable surprise in the track condition yesterday morning. Wednesday it was so hard and frozen that none of them would venture on it, while yesterday there was a nice cushion to the going and dust was flying while the horses galloped. Several horses were shown and altogether it was a busy day.

Tom Welsh was one of the first to have horses under saddle. He brought out Ormondale, Merry Lark, Duenna, and four two-year-olds. They were only asked for slow work and a long gallop constituted their task for the forenoon. "Jim" McLaughlin sent several of his along smartly. The Poet, which promises to be a useful horse, was indulged in a six-furlong breeze in 1:25. Kuro, in company with Blue Coat, was sent the same distance in 1:28. Miss Dixon and Sunburst, a pair of two-year-olds, and a three-year-old filly by Charade showed some speed when permitted to step along for a half in 0:55.

Paloro, Jack McKeon, and High Brush, in company, went a smart six furlongs in 1:24½. Sally M. and Sun Up, two-year-olds, worked a quarter in 0:26 very handily and they are rapidly approaching racing condition. The Galloper, Moccasin, and Mode were breezed a half in 0:55. Race King was in company with Oxford when he was shown, and the pair were excused with a slow gallop. Race King seems to have entirely recovered from his breakdown at Benning, when one of his feet spread, and he promises to come back to the races as good as ever.

"Father Bill" Daly sent his lot along at good speed. Tom Cod and Veronese went a half in 0:56, and the four two-year-olds he is preparing for Benning worked three furlongs in 0:41. Proceeds, which has improved considerably, showed a smart five furlongs in 1:07. Fred Burlew divided his big string into two sets of fifteen each and sent them along to good work. Belmere, Waterbearer, and Green Room were sent along with one lot of two-year-olds. Tim Gaynor had Whimsical, Argentina, and the Plaudit filly under saddle and, though no speed was asked, they were indulged in excellent exercise.

Roseben and Keator were shown by Frank Weir in a nice, strong gallop. The Ben Strome sprinter is looking well and has a way of going that indicates he has lost none of his marvelous foot of last season. About noon Jack Joyner sent over a set of fourteen from Sheepshead and some in the lot were sent along seriously, though most of the exercise consisted in galloping. Charles Littlefield also came over from the Bay with his set and took every advantage of the fine condition of the sister track. James Rowe, Frank McCabe, and Louis Stewart contented themselves with shed work at Sheepshead, and others that were out galloped their horses along the Boulevard, where the going was in first-class condition.

RULED OFF AT ASCOT.

McCafferty and Durnell Suspended for One Year—Brooks Exonerated.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 1.—J. J. McCafferty and C. E. Durnell were to-day suspended from the Ascot Park race course for one year. The ruling was handed down by Judge Hamilton and was concurred in by his associates, E. Cole and P. P. Pomery. The ruling in the case of McCafferty was on the charge of having used a stimulating drug, or, in the parlance of the turf, having doped The Huguenot for his race of Feb. 19.

Durnell was handed his suspension on the charge that he had improperly placed his horse, Alderman Batt, in connection with his races Dec. 20, 25, and 26, and "for other questionable transactions." It is the general opinion that McCafferty has been leniently dealt with, as a conviction of doping has always resulted in the offender being ruled off the turf.

J. W. Brooks, manager at Ascot Park, who was also charged with offenses, was exonerated.

WORKING FOR BETTER ROADS

Pennsylvania Clubs to Form Association—Valuable Touring Information Secured by Asa Goddard.

Asa Goddard, one of the New England Directors of the American Automobile Association, arrived here yesterday from the West, where he has been visiting a number of the leading clubs and studying automobile conditions generally. Mr. Goddard was one of the American Automobile Association representatives in Cleveland last week to meet the Ohio motorists and assist in the formation of the Ohio Automobile Association.

"The Westerners are big buyers of automobiles," said Mr. Goddard. "Never before since the advent of the motor car have they shown such enthusiasm over the automobile. The cause is found in two reasons, the general prosperity of the country and the fact that light and reasonably priced machines have now reached a standard of excellence that may be successfully used on the indifferent roads of the West. Outside of the larger cities the roads are poor, muddy in wet weather, and sandy in dry weather, but the Good Roads Association, recently organized in Ohio, is taking active steps in conjunction with the automobilists to secure better highways.

"Owing to this condition of the roads, the popular type of car is the fairly high powered runabout. The big touring cars, carrying from four to six people, are seldom seen outside the immediate environs of the larger cities and towns. For general use in the country runabouts from ten to twenty horse power are met with most frequently. The Maxwell four-cylinder runabout, the Reo runabout, and the higher powered Ford runabout are all popular. It was reported at the Chicago show that over 1,000 Maxwell cars were sold during the week for country use. It is no longer a rarity to see a well-to-do farmer driving his little auto car, and many agents told me that their orders were constantly increasing in the agricultural districts.

"It is also significant of the growing popularity of the automobile in the small Western places to note that many carriage builders and repairers are recognizing this tendency. Some of them are establishing garages and repair shops as additions to their carriage business, while others are securing agencies for serviceable runabout."

Mr. Goddard was made Chairman of the Special Touring Committee of the American Automobile Association last Fall, and he has just completed his report of his trip through New England, securing information regarding hotels and garages in the smaller towns and villages between New York and Boston.

"My report has been turned in and the information will be published for distribution to the American Automobile Association members early this season," said Mr. Goddard. "It will give helpful information of over forty towns hitherto unnoticed. In many cases new garages are being opened by livery-stable keepers, who are realizing the fact that in many places the automobile business is usurping the old-time livery trade."

Mr. Goddard will probably renew his touring trips in the interest of automobilists this season. Some change of plan, however, may be proposed at the coming meeting of the Directors of the American Automobile Association next week. John Farson, the new President, and Sidney S. Gorham, the new Secretary, will arrive in the city to-day from Chicago and will take formal charge of the American Automobile Association offices.

GUIDE SEES NEW YORK.

Canadian Willing to Face Blizzards Without Complaint.

"It's good to come to New York and see how you people live and the wonderful things you have and do, but the bunch grass for mine. I have ridden the range in blizzards and that's no jest, I'll tell you. I've grumbled at my lot, but I'll promise you when I get through with being guided about New York, I'll be perfectly content to go back to the Rockies, blizzards or no blizzards, and I'll never kick again."

This was the sentiment expressed at the Sportsmen's Show yesterday by Frank Wallman, one of the most interesting of the Canadian guides at the Garden. He hails from the Province of Alberta, which lies in northwestern Canada, beside British Columbia. Though quite a young man, he has a fund of experiences to relate that would entertain any man. They have been gathered in his Summers as guide in the Canadian Rockies and his Winters spent on the cattle ranges.

Wallman yesterday was talking to a little knot of listeners about the Canadian Mounted Police, and he bore eloquent testimony to their bravery and efficiency. "Nine hundred of these men patrol the whole district embraced by the three provinces—Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Athabasca. They are constantly on the ride, moving alone except in the central posts. One man is assigned to a town of the size of Banff, where I come from, but he is amply able to take care of all the work that is required of him. You can make up your mind if you are a wrongdoer in the Canadian Rockies, that if he does not get you to-day he will to-morrow.

"To show how effective their patrol is I need only tell you of the experience of a desperado named Casuner, who was sentenced to a life term at Calgary, where a mounted police station is located. He broke jail with the connivance of some members of a gang of bad men who were at large, and was gone two hours before his feat was discovered. Now Calgary is situated in a wild district in which you would think it were impossible to find a man. That fellow was at large for fifteen days, and in that time he could not get fifteen miles away from Calgary.

"Every one was wrought up over him and a reward of $1,000 dead or alive was offered for him. He was tracked and run down in a deserted shack in the heart of a thickly wooded district, and took refuge in the cellar. Three of those police went down in that cellar and got him alive. I tell you it took pluck to go down into the dark against a man whom they knew would kill as quick as look at them, but they did the trick. Nothing in Calgary was too good for those three chaps.

"There are five tribes of Indians in that country, but the police have comparatively little trouble with them. Occasionally one, like Deerfoot, a renegade, who killed a Sergeant, and later three of the men sent after him, breaks out, but the majority of them give little trouble, although they won't be civilized, still living in blankets and talking their own tongue in spite of opportunities to live like whites."

NEW YORK SWIMMERS' PLANS.

Will Go to Compete in Chicago and St. Louis.

The New York Athletic Club swimming team has accepted the invitation of the Chicago Athletic Association and Missouri Athletic Club to meet the teams of these two organization in a series of aquatic events at Chicago and St. Louis, respectively. The invitation is the outcome of the recent Amateur Athletic Union swimming championships, which were held in the pool of the New York Athletic Club, and appreciation of the hospitality extended to the members of the two clubs while in this city.

The arrangements have been completed for a more elaborate and extended tour than was first contemplated. The team will leave New York on Sunday, March 18. A stop will be made at Buffalo, where a series of exhibitions will open the tour on March 19. The team is due at Chicago on the following day. The members of the team will be the guests of the Chicago Athletic Association on March 21 and 22. On the first day they will meet the swimmers of the Chicago Athletic Association in a series of dual events, to consist of sprints and long-distance swimming, relay race, and a water polo game. On March 22 the New York swimmers will compete in the tank of the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association, for which valuable prizes will be offered. March 23 and 24 will be spent in St. Louis, where the team will be the guest of the Missouri Athletic Club.

Stuyvesant Boys Lead.

Stuyvesant High School easily defeated Bryant High School in a dual athletic meet at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory yesterday afternoon by a score of 104 points to 61. Notwithstanding the easy victory the events, especially the relay races, were well contested, and brought forth much applause from the spectators.

Clubs Contribute to Olympic Fund.

The special committee appointed by President James E. Sullivan of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, consisting of F. W. Rubien, Chairman; H. Obertubbesing, Treasurer, and Thomas F. O'Brien, announce that they have contributions from the Mohawk Athletic Club, St. George Athletic Club, Grace Athletic Club, National Turn Verein, and the Pastime Athletic Club.

Protest Lodged in Hockey Game.

By fast and accurate stick work the Columbia sophomores defeated the freshmen in a hockey match for the class championship at the St. Nicholas Rink yesterday morning by 3 goals to 2. The sophomores, however, used a 'Varsity man, and the freshmen have entered a protest. The freshmen rushed the game from start to finish, and team play went to the winds. Though putting up a good game, the tide turned early against the youngsters, and things went comparatively smooth for the sophomores until near the end. Sticks were smashed in half by the gross, and somersaults were frequent, but no serious harm was done to any of the players until the last few minutes of the game, when Wood in a scrimmage with the freshman forwards was laid up with a strained ankle. The sophomores, dreading defeat, put in a 'Varsity player for Wood, but no score resulted. The line-up:

Sophomores, 3.	Position.	Freshmen, 2.
E. V. Watson	Goal	B. Willis
W. L. Wood	Point	F. R. Taylor
J. R. Cooper	Cover point	A. H. Borschardt
L. R. Reed	Forward	L. Bartow
H. P. Banks	Forward	J. C. Mackenzie
G. M. Mackenzie	Forward	M. Gutman
E. E. Porter	Forward	P. C. Roborg

Goals—G. M. Mackenzie, 2; Banks, 1; Gutman, 1; J. C. Mackenzie, 1. Referee—Mr. von Bernuth, 1906, L. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

CITY BREVITIES.

Dr. Feodor Von Raitz, from whom the Supreme Court, Appellate Term, decided yesterday that Russell Sage is entitled to collect three months' rent, says that he leased Mr. Sage's apartment for another tenant, who afterward moved.

Hortense Uzac, the governess employed by Mrs. Isaac L. Rice of Eighty-ninth Street and Riverside Drive, was discharged in the West Side Court yesterday when arraigned on the charge of attempting suicide by jumping into the North River. She had thought Mrs. Rice suspected her of a jewel theft.

There is some doubt whether Lizzie Cavara, the young woman found dead in a room in the rear of 303 East 107th Street, was murdered or died of alcoholism. John Cottrell, who lived with her, has been held pending an autopsy.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—Yielding again to heavy selling pressure, including stop-loss orders, the wheat market descended to new low levels for the season yesterday and closed ⅜ to ⅝c under the previous night, these prices being close to the lowest of the day. The decline was a result of continued bearish news and the absence of anything like aggressive bull support. Liverpool cables closed ⅛d higher to ¼d lower, and Paris was up 10 points. Berlin closed ¼ mark down, Budapest was off 8 points, and a late cable reported a sharp decline in the Antwerp market. The cash market in New York closed rather weak, as follows: No. 2 red, 85½c, elevator, and 88¼c, free on board, afloat, nominal; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 90¼c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—There was very little feature to the corn market at any time during the day. It opened steady, but soon declined ¼c under the previous night, where it remained pretty much all day, with trade of a professional character. Receipts were not heavy, and seaboard clearances increased to 457,000 bushels, while the carlot estimates for Friday were light. At the same time the decline of ¼d at Liverpool, liquidation of accounts at Chicago, and the heaviness in wheat checked any disposition to advance. Export sales were eight loads. The cash market was quoted at 90c, elevator, and 47⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 48½c and No. 2 yellow, 47⅝c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON—The cotton market was less active yesterday and ruled easier under scattered realizing and a renewal of selling for a turn by local bears, who were encouraged in that position by estimates of increased acreage, the continued absence of investment buying, and rather heavier estimates for to-day's receipts at leading points. The market closed barely steady at a decline of 8@13 points. Sales for the day were estimated at 200,000 bales.

WHOLESOME FUN FOR OLD AND YOUNG

THE ROOSEVELT BEARS

TEDDY—B and TEDDY—G have lots of fun in Chicago. They go to a department store to buy a button, and get sent around from one floor to another until they finally get lost. A good many things happen in a very few minutes. The chapter to be published in the NEW YORK TIMES next Sunday is one of the best yet. It starts jolly and ends funny and has lots of good pictures. The Roosevelt Bears say good-bye to Chicago and start for Niagara Falls. Place your order to-day with newsdealer or carrier.

SENATOR FORAKER'S SPEECH.

Senator FORAKER's perfectly destructive criticism of the Hepburn bill ought to make President HADLEY wish that he had withheld from publication his article written for The Boston Transcript, in which, while admitting that the bill was bad, while pointing out its grave defects, he nevertheless declared that the Senate ought to accept and pass it because the President wanted it passed. Senator FORAKER's position is the direct opposite of that taken by President HADLEY. To differ with the President, he says, is neither easy nor agreeable. It is pleasanter to go with the tide of popular opinion and to yield to the Executive wish. But, convinced as he is that the bill is bad and dangerous, that in some particulars it is grotesquely absurd, that it is probably unconstitutional, and that the policy to which it commits the country is full of peril, he cannot permit himself to be controlled against his judgment by considerations of ease and personal comfort. He would fail in his duty if he did not oppose the bill, and he could not expect to maintain his self-respect or to retain the respect and confidence of others if he were dishonest with himself.

When the Ohio Senator had concluded his speech Senator BAILEY, who supports the bill, is said to have remarked: "If that speech goes unanswered the Hepburn bill deserves to be defeated." The bill ought to be defeated anyway. We hope it will be defeated. But no Senator has any moral right to vote for its passage until Senator FORAKER's argument has been demolished and the objections to the measure advanced by Senator LODGE have been met. Both these speeches were exceedingly effective, and Senators who ignore them will have to take serious liberties with their consciences. In the House, too, Representative MCCALL of Massachusetts and Representative LITTLEFIELD of Maine have made telling arguments against the Hepburn bill, to which the flood of discourse poured out in that body by its supporters constitutes no reply at all. For the most part the House speeches in support of the bill were insufferable buncombe or irrelevant statistics. This was notably true of the speeches of the Southern Democrats. Mr. LITTLEFIELD and Mr. MCCALL made in the House reasoned arguments based upon considerations of business, of law, and of public policy, as Mr. LODGE and Mr. FORAKER have done in the Senate. Senator FORAKER declares that the attempt to confer upon a body asserted to be administrative in its character all three of the powers of the Government—legislative, judicial, and executive—"would be alarming if its utter unconstitutionality were not as apparent as its unreasonableness." We quote his general characterization of the measure:

> It involves the general supervision by a political board, appointed by the President, of a business so tremendous as to be practically incomprehensible, and so complicated and difficult in its character as to be almost beyond the power of human intellect to master it, with authority to change rates with the stroke of a pen, affecting revenues to the extent of millions of dollars, and to make new regulations of every character affecting the operation of more than 200,000 miles of railways, and affecting, also, because of their relations to the railroads and their dependence upon them, almost every other kind of important business conducted throughout the length and breadth of the country; and in this behalf this board, to the judgment of which these vast interests are to be subjected, is authorized to be legislator, prosecutor, Judge, jury, and Marshal, all combined.

We infer that President HADLEY's real opinion of the Hepburn bill considered on its merits is not essentially different from that of Senator FORAKER. He sees reason to fear that the plan of Federal rate-fixing will not work, that the promised relief will be illusory so far as the shippers are concerned, and he does not believe that the Inter-State Commerce Commission "is the proper body for the judicial determination of rates." Moreover, the intrusting to the Commission of these diverse powers intended to be exercised by separate departments of the Government "is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, to common law, and to the American sense of fair play." But because public sentiment has been much aroused in favor of the bill, and because President ROOSEVELT is the recognized leader of this sentiment—because the President wants the bill passed—he would have Congress pass it lest the sentiment he represents should "become hysterical or pernicious."

This is nothing short of Government by public clamor. It is the next thing to mob government. The fact that the bill is uncalled for has been demonstrated to the satisfaction even of President HADLEY. He believes that it is a bad bill, that it is repugnant to our laws and Constitution, and that it will not work well. Never mind, he says, the President wants it, the public wants it, let us drift with the tide. If ever public clamor in support of proposed legislation was ignorant it is in this case. It is a clamor aroused by the mistaken zeal of the President and his persistent agitation for the passage of a law which the statistics of the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the experience of shippers show to be not needed. When the Presidents of universities advise Senators to follow the crowd in this weak and mindless way it is evident that the wave of popular excitement has risen very high indeed.

SANTO DOMINGO.

Even while condemning, as we have had to do, the President's attempt to usurp to himself alone the treaty-making power by the Constitution divided between him and the Senate, we have by no means underrated the importance of the question he undertook so irregularly to solve. It is not fit or safe that we should represent ourselves to foreign nations and foreign creditors of the republics to the south of us as a dog in the manger which will neither do nor let do. We must undertake some rather Augean housecleaning ourselves, or else let it be done by those whom it may concern. And yet, when we let it be done by them, our National or continental or hemispherical susceptibilities are sure to be aroused. We did not like the triple coercion by European Powers even of the impossible CASTRO. We did not even like the congratulatory dispatch of the German Emperor, "Well done, Panther," which greeted the exploit of a German gunboat on sinking a Haitian "national vessel."

It was evidently incumbent on the Senate, having rejected the President's scheme of settlement, to formulate one of its own. This, through the Foreign Relations Committee, it seems to have done with commendable circumspection. The amended treaty, as reported by that committee to the Senate, seems to us, so far as we can judge by the summary press reports, a very fair solution of the urgent question with which it deals. It seems that the Democrats in the Senate, by arraying themselves solidly against it, have put themselves before the country in an attitude of factiousness rather than of patriotism.

There are innumerable questions of detail which arise out of the reported draft. But it pretty clearly appears that the position which the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations wish us to take in the affairs of Santo Domingo, and similarly in the affairs of any other American Republic in like circumstances, is that of a friendly receivership for the benefit of creditors. That is, in effect, the relation which Great Britain has been bearing to Egypt for the last twenty years, and it is nowhere denied that it has been sustained by Great Britain to the great advantage of Egypt. If the treaty as reported is executed, we shall be playing the same part of guardian in Santo Domingo that England has so advantageously played in Egypt. We shall not, as some European speculators seem to think, be indorsing any blank checks which any temporary incumbent of the rule of any Southern republic may choose to issue. On the contrary we shall be carefully scrutinizing both the obligations of Santo Domingo and the value alleged to have been received for them. But we shall be putting it out of the power of any foreign creditor to assert that he has undertaken to right himself by force because no other redress is possible for him.

It may be unlikely that we shall develop a genius like Lord CROMER, to whom the success of the British receivership of Egypt is doubtless mainly due. In the first place, men like Lord CROMER do not grow, in any country, on every bush. In the second place, our time is too short. The arrangement proposed by the treaty is in its nature a "modus vivendi," temporary and provisional. The ultimate reconciliation of the Monroe Doctrine with the claims of foreign creditors of American republics is still to be looked for in the declaration, by the Congress of the United States, that the collection of private claims against American republics by public force is not permissible, and that we will not permit the employment of such force for such a purpose on this side of the Atlantic Ocean.

GIVERS AND RECEIVERS.

County Treasurer HYNICKA, testifying before the Ohio Senate's Investigating Committee, said he had received $20,000 in gratuities from banks as an "expression of their appreciation." Mr. HYNICKA is the lieutenant of the Republican boss of Hamilton County, and the committee is investigating graft. Whether or not this payment is graft is matter of opinion, based upon testimony proving the passing through a window of envelopes containing bank bills from givers too modest to reveal their identify. Mr. HYNICKA's explanation is that the law requires payment of taxes in cash, and he receives payment in checks at his own risk. To insist upon payment according to law would obviously discommode both taxpayers and banks. Another explanation is that the pleasing envelopes expressed appreciation for the deposits of public funds, an accommodation obviously unfit to be repaid by personal gratuities.

This incident serves to illustrate that there are two parties to all such transactions. If Boss Cox's lieutenant is to be censured for receiving, ought not the banks to be censured for paying? Why should Cincinnati's alleged grafters be blamed and the banks be excused? Our own insurance companies are censured for their political contributions, and Senator LA FOLLETTE has just introduced a bill to prevent corporations from making such gifts. But ought not those who receive them to fall under the same condemnation as those who give them? Railways have been severely blamed for giving rebates, but it is evident that they were given to somebody, and that no harm would be done if they were not accepted as well as offered. It is strange that public condemnation should be so one-sided. In the Atchison rebate case Judge PHILIPS laid down the rule applicable to these cases, and to all like them, that there are two parties to all such transactions, and that they were equally culpable. It is not a whit more respectable to bribe than to be bribed, and graft, however honest, dishonors both parties or neither. The respectable bankers of Cincinnati are not the only ones to whom this remark is applicable.

TO DEVELOP CHINA.

The remarks of the Japanese Consul General at the dinner of the Wisconsin Society were of course not at all official. Possibly they were not wholly serious, in the sense that they were meant to be taken literally. But certainly they are worth consideration.

"We are building railroads now in new countries," said Mr. UCHIDA of his countrymen. "Let England and the United States join in and help us." Mr. UCHIDA is too well informed not to know that the two countries he names are precisely the two countries which are by the nature of their political Constitutions most strictly debarred from prosecuting, through their Governmental agencies, industrial enterprises in foreign countries. But their "nationals" are by no means debarred from doing so. The German Government, for example, could take, as it repeatedly has taken, and as it is just now most notoriously taking, steps to promote its commercial interests which no British and perhaps still less any American Government could take. But it appears that German co-operation would be less welcome, to China or to Japan, than British or American co-operation. And this possibly for the very reason that individual action and Governmental action are more emphatically separated in the United Kingdom and the United States than in the German Empire.

It remains true that China is quite incapable of developing her own resources, of "exploiting" herself. In that respect Japan cannot give her very much assistance. And this for the reason that the utilization of credit and the "capitalization of hope" which are the very substance of Occidental finance are still in an inchoate and undeveloped condition, comparatively, in the Far East. China has simply no financial machinery for building a hundred miles of railroad, much less a thousand. It is a pity that the most considerable railway concession China has made to American projectors should have been forfeited by the default of these latter. But it remains true that the Western machinery of finance is the only apparatus capable of developing the resources of the Far East. Mr. UCHIDA's speech would be "aliunde" in Washington. But it would be altogether pertinent in Wall Street.

"TO LIMIT FORTUNES."

Mr. JAMES TIGHLMAN LLOYD, Representative in Congress for the First District of Missouri, is a very obliging Representative. It does not seem to have occurred to him that, in obliging a crack-brained constituent, he is not only disobliging but disgusting all persons of sense, and also that he is defrauding the Public Treasury. His constituent labors under the impression that the one thing needful to our National prosperity is the limitation of our individual prosperities. The possession by any person of more than ten million dollars seems to the constituent "an offense against public policy, simple justice, vital religion, and common sense." Accordingly he has drawn up a preamble and proposed amendment to the Constitution. The preamble is possibly more absurd than the text of the proposed amendment. But this latter sufficiently shows how the amendment, if enacted, would "stick out" in the Constitution, and would make constitutional lawyers stare and gasp. Here it is:

> No citizen nor resident nor investor in any or all States, Territories, or District comprising the United States shall be permitted to possess, in any or all kinds of property, an aggregate value of more than ten millions of dollars, which sum shall be the limit of private property in or for any individual, joint individual, guardian, trustee, agent, or other form or device of private estate ownership, or reserved for each inheritor or legatee. And whenever or wherever such aforesaid private ownership, or holding, or trustship, or reserving shall be found to exceed, in amount of property concerned, the limit above named, the excess shall all be condemned, whether or not as a public nuisance, a public folly, or a public peril, and be accordingly forfeited into the United States Treasury. And the States, and so forth, shall, each and all, enforce this amendment by necessary or penal legislation, failing which, in any instance, Congress shall so enforce it.

It is explained that Mr. LLOYD introduced this stuff "by request," as if that relieved him of responsibility. It distinctly does not. It is out of courtesy not to his constituent, but to him, that this trash is "referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed," that it takes up the time of Congress and the money of the people. It seems that any fool can do this if his Congressman is soft enough of heart and head to connive with him in thus cheating Congress and the Treasury. A rule of the House providing that every Representative should be pecuniarily responsible for the cost of printing any project of law which he introduced "by request," and thereby disavowed political responsibility for, would probably prevent the public archives from being burdened with such a flood of asininity as, in "H. J., Res. 104," Mr. LLOYD "by request" has imposed upon them.

THE NEW FLYING MACHINE.

Whether on pleasure bent or engaged in dickering for "a pig in a poke," France has ever a frugal mind, and the fact that she has actually paid over $25,000, a first installment of $100,000, for the French rights in an American flying machine goes far to signify that there is something in the invention, and we may hereafter learn more about it than we know at present. The device was originated by the WRIGHT brothers of Ohio and differs from most other aerial machines in that it has no balloon attachment, but keeps itself up by screw propellers, rising against the wind as the kite rises, and being dirigible and manageable in those high spaces. France has so much confidence in the invention that it would like to control the European rights for it, but these its owners do not like to part with, though they may go so far as to give it a monopoly of them, so far as rival military nations are concerned. We are not to despise the day of small beginnings, and even if many disappointments forbid too sudden an embrace of the faith that the device is all right and is going to revolutionize warfare as well as to provide a cheap and wholesome recreation for everybody, going far beyond the automobile and the bicycle, we may still admit that possibilities of success hover in its aerial wake and that it may really be the solution of the problem which it pretends to be, opening the porches and gateways of the air, hitherto the birds' privilege and franchise, to the generation of the sons of men.

If that should turn out to be the case the brothers Wright may take their place among the world's greatest inventors and discoverers—the Franklins, Wattses, Fultons, Morses, and the rest. The precept not to "holler" till you are out of the woods holds good in Ohio as elsewhere, but the actual payment by a penurious nation like France, and also a sophisticated one, well up in all devices of the kind named, seems pretty good evidence that the ingenious leash of brothers is at least in sight of the clearing. If their machine comes up to the terms of its manifest we may yet and in no long time see a considerable portion of the world's population flying about in the air like swallows, and when the army moves the airy craft will follow it like its attending vultures. We shall no doubt know all about it one of these days and have no reason to doubt that our own National rights in the device have been patriotically guarded, so that an enemy could not turn our own ingenuities against us without running up against corresponding equipments with the American eagle bossing their empyrean manoeuvres, as if, in the dominion of the sun, it were mewing its own mighty young and kindling their undazzled eyes at his midday beam.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Resignations from Army and Navy. Two young men who were dismissed from the Naval Academy for hazing last year, and then reinstated by Congress, have now resigned, giving as reasons for their action an unexplained dissatisfaction with the service and a suddenly discovered preference for civil life. Also, Major C. E. GILLETTE, a distinguished army engineer, after vainly trying to get a long leave of absence in order to accept a $17,000 position under the Municipal Government of Philadelphia, has thrown up his commission and abandoned the honors and certainties of the military career for a big salary and the uncertainties of politics. In both cases there arises a delicate question as to what justifies an army or navy officer in resigning. The two boys cannot give up for use by some body else the very expensive education which they have received under an almost explicit agreement to use it for the benefit of the country that paid the bills, and they have therefore put themselves in the attitude of getting under false, or semi-false, pretenses something of great value. Their talk about dissatisfaction with the service is nonsensical, and the lateness with which they have learned their preference for civil over naval life is hard to pardon. The case of Major GILLETTE is different, in that the country is now indebted to him, rather than he to the country, and yet he knows the country's need of just such trained and experienced officers as himself, and one cannot but wish that he had bowed to the refusal of the leave for which he applied. It's a lot of money, $17,000 a year, and to purify Philadelphia's drinking water is far from an ignoble task, but others than army engineers could have done the work and earned the money, while to fill the place which Major GILLETTE has abandoned will not be so easy. However, all the circumstances, either in regard to him or to the two midshipmen, are probably not known, and it is recognized all over the world that it is wise to permit any officer who wants to resign to do so, if for no other reason than that reluctant service is apt to be something less good than the best. In time of war, or with war in anything like immediate prospect, of course, no officer worthy of trust would think of resigning, so that phase of the question needs no consideration. Perhaps it would be well, at least in services like ours, where there always has been, and seems always likely to be, a scarcity of properly trained and competent officers, to do away altogether with the giving of long leaves in order that civil positions can be taken. In particular cases its effect is often good, but in theory it appears always to be somehow wrong, and both the granting and the taking of the privilege are obviously open to serious abuse.

Libraries and Gold Bricks. To his own satisfaction, at least, one of our correspondents proved yesterday that, however it may have been with other towns, Patchogue did not acquire a "gold brick" when it accepted a Carnegie library. It seems that Patchogue had an ill-housed library on which it was spending $600 a year when Mr. CARNEGIE offered—by request, no doubt—to provide a $10,000 building if the town would provide a site and agree to appropriate $1,000 a year for books and maintenance. The offer was accepted, and now, according to our correspondent, the town has, at an additional expense of only $400 a year, a fine library that has much advanced the value of real estate in its neighborhood. "Anything of a gold brick character about that?" he asked exultingly. Perhaps not, but one cannot help noticing how lightly he passed over the cost of the site, and the fact remains that the town is burdened with a fixed charge of $1,000 a year for something of which it apparently felt able or inclined to buy only $600 worth. If Patchogue had built its own $10,000 library, its present financial difference would have been due only to the existence of bonded indebtedness to that very small amount. There would, however, have been a few other differences which some towns regard as more than compensatory. It would, for instance, have stood before the world as a community both able and willing to buy for itself such books as it needed and to care for them properly, and it would not have been in the not very proud position of having accepted a money gift from a man with no special interest in Patchogue, and no obligations toward it that could be easily defined. There be those harsh enough to feel, and even to say, that Patchogue has acted the part of the sturdy beggar, not ashamed to accept from others what it was perfectly competent to supply for itself without help from anybody. To our mind it is not the giving by Mr. CARNEGIE that needs to be defended, for he can always consider that he has performed a duty that otherwise would have been neglected; it is the acceptance of his gifts that must be justified. The justification is often possible, but it should be sounder than is a somewhat dubious demonstration that this, that, or the other solvent town has paid in part with self-respect for some good thing it wanted and had the money to buy.

Stricter Sunday Observance. Advocates of a stricter observance of Sunday than there is any reason to suppose more than a small minority of New Yorkers really want would do well to heed the warning given them by the enterprising Mr. HAMMERSTEIN. He may not be much of a theologian, but he knows a good deal about the metropolis and something about its laws, particularly in their application to the amusement business on all days of the week, and when he says that the present campaign, if strenuous enough, is likely to have results, but not those expected by the campaigners, there are several chances that he may be right. A stringent enforcement of a code in its letter for the most part antiquated and out of harmony with present conditions would lead straight to its legal abolition and the substitution for it of a new one that might easily be more offensive to the troubled defenders of the holy day than is the present laxity of application and interpretation. It is quite hopeless to attempt the prolonged enforcement of laws not backed by public sentiment, and it is beyond question that New York thinks there are worse things than Sunday concerts, or even than Sunday plays, and Coney Island is yearly attracting a greater, not a smaller, number of Sunday excursionists. What New York does admit is that Sunday amusements should be kept within bounds, and places where they will not necessarily give immediate offense to those of sober and sedate minds who would devote the day to other purposes than the search for amusement. With the laws as they are this can usually be attained without much difficulty; with the line of legal tolerance advanced to where resentment of too much interference might place it, the difficulty would probably be much increased.

Good Work in Park Department.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the occasion of the snowstorm of Feb. 9, the first heavy fall of snow this year, many of the newspapers criticised quite severely the head of almost every municipal department which can be connected in any way with the inconveniences which are the inevitable consequences of a fall of snow in an urban community. While some of this criticism may have been deserved, much of it was undoubtedly directed at heads of departments who were doing the best they could with inadequate appropriations, insufficient personnel, and other adverse conditions.

One city department was spared from this general criticism, but no mention was made in the newspapers, so far as the writer has been able to ascertain, of the admirable manner in which this department acted in the matter of snow removal. Within eight hours after the end of the snowstorm every walk, crosswalk, and gutter within the jurisdiction of the Park Department of the Borough of Manhattan was swept so clean that a woman could walk along any portion of this territory without wetting her skirt.

If those newspapers which criticise the municipal departments so continuously could find time to record also instances of public work well done, such commendation would not only serve as a slight recognition to the heads of departments directly concerned, but might also lead to a spirit of emulation among other heads of departments. Beneficial to Clergy and Public.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In getting his bath of public opinion at the Cooper Union meeting on Sunday night I noticed that Dr. Slicer got one or two douches that must have made him gasp. One was the frank question whether he didn't find it necessary at times to tell falsehoods.

As, strictly speaking, there is probably no man who can't be justly accused of occasional lying, the doctor was in a tight place. We should all have been glad to hear a ringing "No!" but the victim, to his credit, was too honest.

I wish there were more of these democratic assemblies, where ministers of the Gospel, coming down into the arena, and asking no favor for their cloth, give and take in unconventional fashion. It will do the public a lot of good, but it will do the ministers and the cause of religion more. LAYMAN.

A RURAL EXPRESS POST.

Plan to Properly Load the Rural Free Delivery Wagons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To the statement in THE TIMES's editorial of Feb. 26, "As to a Parcels Post," "We cannot understand why, with an annual deficit of fourteen and a half millions, the Government Post Office should be asked to go into the express business," we answer: A Government express post for the handling of merchandise has been in effect in this country since 1863, the year of the inauguration of the modern United States Post Office with its system of uniform rates regardless of distance.

Our express post of 1874, with a uniform rate of 8 cents a pound, preceded the International Express Post of Europe, and the Domestic Express Post of France by six years—that of Great Britain by nine years. The question of the hour, therefore, is not as to the establishment of an express post, but as to its extension.

A house-to-house express post limited to our free rural routes with all mail matter—written or unwritten—sealed or unsealed, in one class, might be established at the following or similar rates:

Weight.	Cents.
Up to 8 ozs.	1
Over 8 ozs., to 1 lb.	2
Over 1 lb., to 11 lbs.	5
Over 11 lbs., to 30 lbs., (half bushel)	10
Over 30 lbs., to 60 lbs., (bushel)	15
Over 60 lbs., to 100 lbs., (half barrel)	20
Over 100 lbs., to 200 lbs., (barrel)	—

Passengers, say, 10c. a trip.

This would, we believe, at once place our Rural Service on a paying basis, eliminate the postal deficiency, and add an annual increment to the aggregate wealth of the 4,000,000 families of our rural routes of at least $100,000,000 a year; $25 a year would certainly be a very low estimate of the value to the average rural family of a regular postal service doing all their general transport business.

To-day with a rural service confined to letters, newspapers, magazines, four-pound parcels of merchandise taxed at 16 cents a pound, we have over 32,000 postmen with their horses and wagons visiting on the average of 125 families on their twenty-five-mile trips, and picking up in their daily service less than 2 pounds of business. The total load of the average wagon—mail collected and delivered—is less than 20 pounds; its average daily earnings less than 40 cents. The average cost per day per wagon is about $2; the average loss, therefore, is about $1.60 per day per wagon; on the entire outfit $50,000 per day—$15,000,000 per year.

Is it not folly to confine our rural post wagons to the city foot post traffic, two-pound loads, 40 cents earnings?

The proposed rural express post, while enriching the rural public and eliminating the postal deficiency, would at the same time remove the excuse for the proposed increase in the tax on the circulation of the press. It would make a one-cent letter rate immediately practicable. It would give new life, new hope to the country merchant by keeping him in constant contact with his old customers at almost no cost to himself.

Fresh Air for Pneumonia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent issue of THE TIMES a correspondent in writing on the subject of pneumonia intimates that the "discovery of the beneficial effect of the outdoor treatment of that disease was made recently by a doctor practicing in a hospital near New York."

Permit me to say that the so-called discovery is by no means of recent date. Pneumonia being an inflammation of the lung, at one stage of which the pulmonary vesicles or small air cells, and also the smaller bronchial tubes, become clogged with a sticky, tenacious mucus which prevents the entrance of air, it follows that the remaining sound part of the lung has extra work to do in order to supply the patient with sufficient oxygen to sustain life. It would seem as if the most rational method for supplying the necessary oxygen would be to admit all the fresh air that the patient can use.

The principal obstacle to such treatment has, in my experience, been the prejudice in the mind of the public based upon the groundless fear of the patient taking cold, so that when the doctor who realizes the necessity for freely supplying the pneumonia patient with fresh air (even though it can be obtained only from open windows, as in a city,) insists on having them opened, they will on his leaving the house almost invariably be closed by the anxious friends of the patient.

Timbuctoo and Testimony.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"W. C. P." gets nearer to the truth in ascribing the lines on the cassowary to Capt. Marryat than any of your correspondents, but I am afraid his memory is at fault. If you have Marryat's works it will be easy to verify the words, although it is possible that the Captain borrowed them from an earlier writer, but as I remember them they read, forty years ago:

> "I wish I was a cassowary,
> On the plains of Timbuctoo,
> I'd swallow up a missionary,
> Hat and coat and hymnbook, too."

This is all the more impressed on my mind because at that time Mrs. Jellyby was making flannel waistcoats and pocket handkerchiefs for the poor, benighted Africans, and our pocket money went every week to supply the missionary, while our sympathies were on the side of the cassowary. We were taught that a cassowary was built on the plan of an ostrich, whose steady diet is supposed to be rocks, cannon balls, and tenpenny nails, so we derived a great deal of satisfaction from the belief that a cassowary ought to be able to get away with a missionary, even without the hymnbook, which was a necessary part of a boy's equipment forty years ago.

EDWARD BARRY.

Mr. Hughes and the Governorship.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Isn't it about time that sentimentalism ceased to become so powerful a factor in determining the choice of candidates for important official stations? The latest prospective movement in this direction seems to be the expressed inclination of certain of the New York Republican Congressional delegation to place the now conspicuous attorney, Mr. Charles E. Hughes, in the field as a Gubernatorial candidate.

While it is unquestionable that this gentleman has displayed exceptional ability in the conduct of the special matter to which he was called, and discharged, with great credit, the duties incumbent upon him, it does not follow that he is obliged to obey the behest, or be made the salvation medium of any political power.

It is hoped that he will not fail to express his utter disapproval of being utilized for partisan purposes, or to be classed as an expedient.

Horace White Tells Why Stock Issues Should Be Excluded.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In compliance with your request, I give my views in reference to that part of the report of the Armstrong Committee which recommends the exclusion of stocks from the investments of life insurance companies. I approve of the recommendation for the reason that it aims to remove a speculative element from the assets of these companies.

It is no answer to this position to say that good stocks are better than poor bonds. In the ordinary course of business bonds are a prior lien on the property which constitutes the basis of investment. In case of disaster to the property the interest of the stockholder is exhausted before any loss falls upon the bondholder. This is a sufficient reason why bonds should be preferred to stocks as investments for societies whose prime business is not profit, but security. To this category both life insurance companies and savings banks belong—the former even more than the latter. The State properly concerns itself with the investments of savings banks by prohibiting everything of a speculative character from their lists, and it should do the same with life insurance companies.

No doubt such stocks as those of the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Chicago and Northwestern Railroads are safe. Their quotations in the market are the best evidence of that fact. These quotations prove also that no life insurance company holding them need suffer any loss in disposing of them and buying some other security which has a firmer hold upon the income-producing property.

The aim of the Armstrong Committee is not merely to eliminate speculative securities, but to keep speculating individuals from the control of these companies. I recall a statement made in a triumphant way by Mr. George W. Perkins showing how he had made a large profit for the New York Life Insurance Company by a participation in the United States Steel syndicate. This profit eventually found its way, in whole or in part, to the coffers of Andrew Hamilton, but that is a side issue. This syndicate operation was a stock-jobbing affair, which ought to be rendered forever impossible in life insurance circles. Suppose that a loss had been incurred instead of profit? Suppose that the Steel syndicate had been formed in a year of depression instead of a year of boom? Can we always expect to have successful speculators in control of the New York Life? Can we always depend upon it that Mr. Perkins will know how to steer clear of bad stocks and buy only good ones for us?

The Wall Street view of all business is the profit-making view, and this is quite natural. But profit is not the raison d'être of life insurance, and for this reason Wall Street magnates are not well fitted to have charge of such companies, and should not be chosen Directors of them unless strongly fettered. In the presence of a large surplus, they are liable to attacks of vertigo. They have an irresistible impulse to syndicate, to participate, to speculate. So many chances of profit present themselves to those who control millions of ready money that they lose control of themselves. Hence the series of scandals of which the Armstrong report is replete, and hence the recommendation of the committee that the chief tools of speculation be put out of their reach. As a holder of policies in two of the three companies most prominent in the pillory, I heartily indorse the recommendations.

Low-Priced Tickets at the Opera.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Observing the letter of Mr. S. S. Bliss in to-day's paper, may I be permitted also to give vent to my indignation at the treatment handed out to music lovers in moderate circumstances at the ticket window of the Metropolitan Opera House.

I have attempted to secure seats in the family circle, often more than a week in advance, without success; on the last occasion I was informed there was nothing for sale under $5.

I believe the conclusion drawn by Mr. Bliss is correct, viz., that the upper gallery of the house is virtually sold out to speculators. Whether the management is cognizant of the fact I cannot tell. I hardly think, however, that Mr. Conried would knowingly permit such a state of affairs. In any case, the matter should be investigated and drastic measures adopted to put an end to the conditions that at present exist.

RADAMES.

New York, Feb. 28, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I fully agree with S. S. Bliss that the scant courtesy shown at the ticket window of the Metropolitan Opera House to those who ask for cheap tickets is anything but pleasant. No matter how early one gets to the box office and asks for family circle tickets, he or she is invariably told that they are "all sold out." Where those cheap tickets go to no one seems to know, and Herr Conried does not seem to care.

It is shameful to think that a house seating nearly 3,000 persons has only one ticket window, and you at times have to stand on the line fully two hours.

Not a "Murphyite."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your article, "Sweeping Murphyites Out," has been called to my attention. I am not now, never was, nor to my own knowledge have I any intentions of becoming a "Murphyite" or any other kind of an "ite." I left voluntarily—"not let out" because of any misconduct or incompetency on my part as you seem to intimate.

Consider Cuba's Feelings.

From The Los Angeles Times.

What on earth does a little nation like Cuba want with an army of 6,000 soldiers? Cuba is now a republic, and it seems to us that she ought to be able to get along without soldiers, except possibly a few companies of militia for show purposes on feast days. She isn't big enough to fight any other nation if every man on the island were in the army, and if she were attacked by a foreign foe she would have to yell to Uncle Sam for protection. Let her save her money and build roads with it.

Life and Art in Palmetto Flat.

From The Florida Times-Union.

"Devotay of the Drama" writes us that the good people of Palmetto Flat should begin counting their coin, preparatory to taking in Sarah Bernhardt's great tent show in Jacksonville next week. So far as "we" are concerned, it would be counting ties, not money. "We" don't claim to understand French, but we flatter ourselves that we do understand the financial situation in Palmetto Flat.

SYMPATHY.

He lives more lives than one, who shares
The weight of human woe;
Whose willing shoulder bravely bears
The yoke of friend and foe.
He lives more lives than one, who seeks
Ambition's lofty goal;
Whose every effort but bespeaks
A grand, responsive soul.

He lives more lives than one, whose love
Breathes incense, warm and rare;
Who, loyal as the stars above,
Yields homage ever fair.
He lives more lives than one and dies
A thousand deaths, who gives
A sympathy, wide as the skies,
To every thing that lives.

THE NOBLE RED MAN WITH WHITE MAN'S EMOTIONS

He Is So Shown in a New Play at the Liberty Theatre.

Some Are Real and Some Are Make-Believe, but the Result Is a Conventional Melodrama Along Old Lines.

Cagawicka	Lionel Adams
Gangwar	Leonard Barry
Wangosh	Escamillo Fernandez
The Medicine-Man	J. O. Le Brasse
Matawagnon	Claude Brooke
Niatawa	Edwin Arden

Lashota	Bijou Fernandez
Tana-Mongosh	Alice Leigh
Fawn	Marion Chapman
Ockotchee maidens	Laura Lemmers Margaret Kenmare
An old woman	Avonia Eldridge

The American Indian has been subjected to a great many indignities in his time, but it remained for Donald MacLaren to inflict the final blow. Mr. MacLaren has not only plucked out the heart of the noble redman's mystery, but, in the progress of a four-act play seen at the Liberty Theatre last night, he has managed to show that in his joys and his sorrows, his triumphs and his trials, the Indian is not in the slightest degree different from his old enemy and present successor in this land of the free and home of the brave.

For many years there has been a glamour about the Indian. Pictured in legend and poem as the most stoical of men, he has stalked in imagination grim, gloomy, and silent, amid the crowd of alien figures. Mr. MacLaren at one fell swoop robs him of all his individuality. Lonowanda, the Chief of the Okotchees is a most talkative person, and when he is not talking he weeps and wails, sighs and moans. The various members of his tribe, who enter into the story of the great chief's fate, are likewise moved by the same impulses to the same deeds, the same emotions, and the same methods of expression, which have characterized the countless number of heroes and villians in plays about white men since time immemorable.

Mr. MacLaren calls his play "The Redskin," but, except for such atmosphere as is provided by the substitution of moccasins and blankets for patent leathers and broadcloth, there is little to justify the title. There are, to be sure, real Indians on the stage, as well as the make-believe kind, and these Indians circle in the old familiar way about the hero tied to the stake.

There is the fight to the death with knives, there is a plentiful lot of very beautiful scenery, and there are one or two situations which vigorous acting serve to make fairly interesting. But when all is said and done this play of Indians is a ridiculously unsatisfactory affair. Instead of taking some of the old legends and weaving them into a plot for his play the author has fallen into the rut of French drama and English drama and almost every other sort of drama, developing for the most part a wholly conventional theme in a wholly conventional way and with no end of nugatory talk probably intended to be picturesque but proving entirely tiresome or silly.

Imagine Lenowanda, the noble chief of the redmen, repeatedly addressed by his counselor, Sheanagua, with the words, "Dear chief, you are not well"; imagine the brave Niatawa, invoking "the blessings of the saints" upon his beautiful love; imagine an Okotchee maiden in hysterics in the lily pond because her blanket has been removed from the bank and she hears a youthful brave approaching! These, in brief, are some of Mr MacLaren's ideas upon the subject of Indian speech and manners.

The play relates how Lonowanda, great chief of the Okotchees, feeling blindness coming upon him, decides to abdicate in favor of the warrior whom his fair-skinned daughter, Adulola, shall choose for a husband. After announcing this decision to his council Lonowanda is taunted by Matawagnon, a crippled warrior, who casts reflections upon the parentage of Adulola on account of her fair complexion. Enraged, the old chief kills his tormentor.

The warriors appear before Adulola, but she refuses all of them. Secretly she loves Niatawa, son of the murdered Matawagnon, a huntsman, whose unwarlike disposition has made him obnoxious to the braves of the Okotchees. Through the fidelity of Lashota, the faithless squaw of Sheanagua, chief counsel of Lonowando, who loves Niatawa and would be rid of her husband for his sake, the guilt of the murder is laid at Sheanagua's door. Niatawa is discovered with Lashota, and Sheanagua's rage is aroused against him. But Adulola saves the life of the huntsman, and the old chief confesses his own guilt.

Sheanagua, infuriated at the disclosures regarding his squaw, insists on taking the place of the chief in the single combat decreed by the laws of the Okotchees, and Niatawa, foreseeing perpetual unrest with the woman he loves, allows himself to be killed, but prevents Adulola from following him by suicide.

Then follow three or four scene pictures showing the death of Adulola and her meeting with Niatawa in the happy hunting grounds. The Indian maiden lies dying and a canoe slowly drifts down stream. She stretches out her arms and calls upon her lover, whereupon a mystic light appears apparently beckoning her to the land of the Great Spirit. This final picture is especially beautiful.

Under the circumstances it would have been surprising if the actors had succeeded in getting much character into their parts. As a matter of fact, there is more genuine color in the brief Indian rôle played by Theodore Roberts in "The Squaw Man" than in all the rôles of "The Redman" combined. Tyrone Power, as always when he is on the stage more than five or ten minutes at a time, was most uneven in his playing.

In a scene in the second act, where the Chief believes that he has discovered his daughter's guilt, Mr. Power was unnecessarily boisterous, but, nevertheless, impressive. Elsewhere his best results were marred by an apparent joy in the sound of his own rich and melodious voice.

Edwin Arden and Alfred Bruning played with some dignity, while Katherine Grey's Indian maiden, except as to dress and make-up, differed in no way from innumerable tender maidens she has previously portrayed. Nor did Bijou Fernandez provide any marked character suggestion, though acting otherwise with all the naturalness one could reasonably expect. The others could hardly have been worse.

HAMMERSTEIN GETS BONCI.

Rival of Caruso Will Sing at the New Grand Opera House.

Oscar Hammerstein announced last night the engagement of the tenor for his opera company for whom he has been negotiating for several weeks. Alessandro Bonci cabled from Madrid his acceptance of the terms offered by Mr. Hammerstein, and will sing at the Thirty-fourth Street Opera House next season.

Bonci is now singing at the Royal Opera House in Madrid. Before coming to America he will fill engagements at Florence, Vienna, Budapest, and Covent Garden, London, where he will appear for the third time. Bonci was named in Lilli Lehmann's book as the best example of the lyric tenor, and has been regarded as a rival of Caruso at various places. He began his career in Rome eight years ago, and has traveled all over Europe. He is 33 years old.

Mr. Hammerstein is in negotiation with Mme. Lillian Nordica for his season. Mme. Nordica has been greatly dissatisfied this season because she was limited to twenty performances at the Metropolitan, when she thought she should have forty. When the time came for the signing of her contract for next year she demanded the forty performances, and when the Director of the Metropolitan refused to make the concession negotiations were taken up with Mr. Hammerstein. They have had one conference, but no arrangements have been completed yet.

Mme. Nordica makes no secret of her dissatisfaction with the conditions imposed at the Metropolitan. No statement could be obtained from the management of the opera yesterday, as Mr. Conried, the director, had gone to Washington, and Ernest Goritz, his representative, said he did not care to make any statement about Mme. Nordica's grievances.

KUBELIK IN HIS CAR.

Fearing a Hotel Fire, He Is Living in Bronx Railroad Yard.

Living in a private car, switched in among scores of other cars in the yards of the New Haven Railway near 160th Street, rather than partake of all the comforts of home in a New York hotel, would not be the choice of many persons. But it is the choice of Jan Kubelik, the Bohemian violinist, and the railroad yards will shelter him until he leaves for the West on Monday.

Mr. Kubelik arrived in New York yesterday from Springfield, Mass., on the private car Edgemère, in which he had been making a six weeks' tour. Arrangements had been made for a comfortable apartment for him in one of the large hotels near Times Square. Kubelik said he preferred to stay in the car.

The real reason for Kubelik's choice of a private car is his dread of being in a hotel fire. He was in Minneapolis when the West Hotel burned, with the loss of eight lives, and the scenes he witnessed that night and the accounts he read in the newspapers of the experiences of the guests made him uncomfortable.

Kubelik will, of course, have to ride up to his car after any performance.

MME. ILLING AS MAGDA.

She Essays the Role in English for the First Time.

Mme. Meta Illing, the German actress, gave her first performance of "Magda" in English at the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre last evening. Before she came to this country less than a year ago Mme. Illing was known to theatregoers in Berlin, where at the Lessing Theatre she played the standard German rôles, both comedy and serious. Emile Zola is said to have personally commended her work in the German version of "Thérèse Racquin." She is said to have rehearsed "Magda" under Sudermann's own direction, and has played the part in Austria, Russia, and Hungary, but never until now in English.

Much of the interest of last night's performance of the familiar piece was therefore in seeing how far in her nine months' residence in this country Mme. Illing had mastered the language for stage purposes. In a tour de force of the kind there is no call to judge severely. The actress seemed to be commendably successful in making herself understood.

Her Magda is for the most part a vivacious Carmen-like creature, even to the two red roses in her dark hair. She wore the usual glittering gowns of the rôle, though some of her audience must have wondered a little at the unusual cut of her morning gown. That and Mme. Illing's accent were the only genuine notes of national color in the painfully un-German setting of Colonel Swartze's sitting room.

A friendly audience, with a liberal sprinkling of compatriots, bore charitably with the shortcomings of the supporting company and applauded Mme. Illing in her trying scenes with Von Keller and the father, as well as in her lighter moments.

Mme. Illing will appear again in "Magda" this evening, and to-morrow, both afternoon and evening.

PLANS FOR OPERA TOUR.

One Trunk Each for Chorus Singers—Don't Get Lost, Anybody.

Announcement was made yesterday of the itinerary of the Metropolitan Opera company on its coming tour to the Pacific Coast. Leaving New York on March 18, it will spend the next three days in Baltimore and three days following at Washington. It will go to Pittsburg for the following week. A jump will then be made to Chicago for a week. Three days will be spent in St. Louis and one day in Kansas City, and then the long jump to San Francisco will be made, where, beginning April 16, the company will fill a two week's engagement. The tour will end at Los Angeles.

Elaborate precautions have been taken to prevent any one in the company from goin astray. The Director has issued a card of directions, from which the following are culled:

Artists are requested to reduce the amount of their baggage to a minimum. Members of the orchestra, chorus, ballet, and staff must not take more than one trunk each.

All trunks must be numbered with labels furnished by the baggagemaster, each member having a certain number for his baggage.

Time of departure of special train in each city will be announced on call board of each theatre. Artists will be notified in the usual manner. All members must be at the station at least thirty minutes before the time of departure.

Any member of the company desirous of traveling on a road other than that designated by the management can only do so with its consent, and must bear any difference of fare caused thereby.

Members of the company may find it to their advantage to use —'s self-identifying travelers' money orders as a safe and convenient mode of carrying their personal funds.

The Herr Direktor asks every member of the company to lend "his good will and assistance to facilitate matters" and says, "Reciprocally in advance, I assure every one of my hearty appreciation." He will stay in New York.

WOULD PUT LID ON CONEY.

Vaudeville Managers Plan to Strike Thus at Sunday Closers.

Seven vaudeville managers met at the Victoria Theatre yesterday to discuss measures to be taken if Police Commissioner Bingham decides they must stop Sunday performances. They had been informed that if the courts should decline to close up the houses on that day the Police Commissioner would take steps to have their licenses revoked.

The managers decided that in case any action was taken against them they would enter upon a determined campaign to show the people how the Sunday law would operate in case it was strictly enforced. They will establish a bureau at Coney Island to watch the various performances and will insist that the police shall stop every one on any stage on Sunday night.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The one hundredth performance of "Julie Bon Bon," at the Fields Theatre, will be celebrated to-night. Chatelaine powder puffs will be distributed.

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram" will be revived at the Manhattan Theatre next Thursday evening. The cast will include William Morris, Charlotte Walker, Ferdinand Gottschalk, and May Isabel Fisk. "The Triangle" will be withdrawn after to-morrow evening's performance.

PLEA FROM HELEN KELLER.

Letter Asks for a Bay State Commission for the Blind.

BOSTON, March 1.—A letter from Miss Helen Keller, the deaf, dumb, and blind girl, supporting a bill for the appointment of a State Commission for the Blind, was the feature of a hearing on the bill at the State House to-day. Miss Keller had expected to be present, but her recent prostration from overwork prevented it. In her letter she said:

"If you knew how patiently the blind have awaited the report of the commission, (appointed in 1903 to investigate the needs of the blind,) I am sure you would give heed to the bill that is now before you. The sightless, not only in Massachusetts, but in the whole United States, are looking to you with new hope for release from a bondage of idleness and despair.

"Investigation has shown that blind babies can often be so trained that they shall commence school life as healthy, well developed boys and girls. Many of the adult blind can be taught to produce useful and beautiful articles, and thus become wholly or partially self-supporting. The work of existing institutions can be supplemented and their graduates assisted to find employment. No one institution seems able to cope with the complex problems of the blind as a class. We therefore urge that a permanent board be established, which shall have supervision over all the blind, maintain a proper unity and co-ordination between the education of children, the care of infants, the employment of those who no longer go to school, and the sheltering of the aged and infirm."

Joseph H. Choate, Dr. Lyman Abbott, and Dr. F. Park Lewis of New York also sent letters favoring the bill.

Miss Keller, friends at Waltham said to-day, was showing great improvement.

DANCE AT MRS. ASTOR'S SACRIFICED TO HIGH ART

Quartet Refused to Stoop to Terpsichorean Strains.

THE HOSTESS WAS ANNOYED

But Found Other Amusement Than a Dance for the Guests at Her Little Dinner Party.

Among some persons who know of the things that happen in Society a story has been whispered of an encounter that Mrs. John Jacob Astor has had with the Artistic Temperament, with the consequent discomfiture of Mrs. Astor and the continued elevation of the Artistic Ideal.

It has become a smart thing in Society to have a dinner with a few guests and a quartet to play and make a sauce for the food that no chef could invent. After the dinner has been eaten and the cigars smoked and the chatter has aided digestion it is the idea to have a dance that will put the guests into lively humor for the rest of the evening.

Mrs. Astor planned such a little entertainment recently. She had only a few of her best friends present, but she wished to give them as good a time as possible, so she gave orders that the best quartet available in New York should be engaged for the occasion.

It had not been the practice of others who had given such entertainments to have musicians of the highest grade. In fact, quartets from the orchestras of several hotels and restaurants had been able to earn good money from meeting such demands. When the order of Mrs. Astor was given, however, it was taken literally, and the result was the engagement of the Marum Quartet.

This is an organization recently formed with the design of taking as high a rank as the famous Kneisel Quartet of Boston. In it are some of the best instrumentalists in New York. Ludwig Marum is first violin, Michael Bernstein is second violin, Jacob Altschuler viola, and Modest Altschuler 'cellist. Their names are known to music lovers throughout the city. They have been upholders of art in music, too, for Modest Altschuler is the founder and conductor of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, recently on tour with Mr. Safonoff, and the introducer of Josef Lehvinne to this country, and the others are prominent in the orchestra.

It was understood by them that a programme of classical music was desired by Mrs. Astor for her dinner, and that was played. It was an enjoyable programme, and the guests showed they were pleased with it.

After the dinner, however, came the encounter between Mrs. Astor and the Artistic Temperament. The tables were cleared away and word was sent to the quartet that the hostess would like to have some dance music. The guests were told that there would be dancing and were all ready for the fun.

Word came back to Mrs. Astor that the quartet really was not prepared to play any dance music. Mrs. Astor made personal inquiries. Mr. Marum informed her that for his quartet to play for a dance would not be artistic, and the Marum Quartet wished to keep to its artistic standing. Mrs. Astor asked if it could not play some of the best waltzes in dance time, but the quartet agreed that it would not be within its sphere to do so and that it could not lower its standing even to oblige Mrs. Astor.

So the Artistic Temperament held its own, and Mrs. Astor was compelled to tell her guests that the dancing she had promised would not be part of her entertainment that evening. She provided other amusement and the Marum Quartet went away with the certainty that the Artistic Ideal had been upheld.

Mounted Patrolman with a Thirty-Mile Post Forgiven for Being Late.

Mounted Patrolman George Gordon of Staten Island was on trial yesterday before Deputy Commissioner Mack for not reporting to his station in time for the 4 P. M. roll-call. He said he failed to report in time because his watch was slow. He was forty-five minutes late. The Deputy Commissioner was about to fine Gordon, when he asked:

"How long is your post?"

"Thirty miles," said Gordon.

"Complaint dismissed," said Mr. Mack.

$35,155 AT PICTURE SALE.

Six Different Owners Sent Canvasses to Mendelssohn Hall.

A quick and uneventful sale, bringing $35,155, marked the disposal of the pictures of six different owners at Mendelssohn Hall under the auspices of the American Art Association last evening. The paintings, sixty-eight of them, were the first half of a lot belonging to Peter A. Schemm, Moses Tanenbaum, William Saloman, Solomon Mehrbach, Louis A. Biddle, and the estate of the late Henry Steers. The sale is said to be the result of the owners' desire to reduce overstocked galleries and possibly to weed out somewhat as a result of a change of taste.

Nothing of great importance was put up at this first sale, though there were among other things a couple of excellent Schreyers and a fine Cazin, "Old Ruins," which brought the highest price of the evening, $3,000.

An excellent Bellecour brought the first high price of the sale, going to William Haig for $1,275. This was "Halt by the Wayside." The first Schreyer, "The Scout," brought $2,450; and the second, "Wallachian Peasant and Horses," $2,100. The first was bid in by A. Wolf and the second by A. Tosti & Sons. A picture by Albert Bierstadt brought one of the best prices, "Western Kansas in 1860" going for $1,390. A couple of pictures which some people thought the best bargains of the sale were a portrait of Lord Devon by Romney, which went for $575, and the portrait of Capt. Thomas Drake by Sir Thomas Lawrence, which brought $500. These were the only two pictures in the entire lot, coming from the collection of Louis A. Biddle, Philadelphia.

Skyscraper construction would be impossible without the pneumatic hammer which enables the workmen to rivet together the great steel beams and erect the skeleton of a twenty-four-story building in an astonishingly short time. It took hundreds of years to build the pyramids and the medieval cathedrals and palaces. It takes but three or four months to build a modern skyscraper.

Advertising mediums like THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL are the pneumatic hammers of business-building. The careful, slow methods employed before the days of advertising were good, and they have built up enormous businesses, but to-day, by means of advertising, businesses equally as great and equally good are built up in a short time by the use of such mediums as THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

MRS. MACKAY ENTERTAINS 2,000 LITTLE GUESTS

"Proficient Pupils" of Twelfth District Behave Finely.

THE REJECTED JEER OUTSIDE

Hostess Makes a Speech, Kisses a Bouquet-Bearer, and Presents to Each School a Silk Flag.

Some 2,000 of the 8,000 pupils in the ten public schools of the Twelfth District having shown themselves through their several excellencies to be, in the eyes of their teachers, "proficient pupils," they marched to the Grand Central Palace yesterday afternoon after school and were there entertained by Mrs. Clarence Mackay. Mrs. Mackay lives in the Twelfth District, and, since her election to the School Board of Roslyn, L. I., has shown a deep interest in educational matters. Mrs. Mackay said she had given yesterday's entertainment because she had recently paid an enjoyable visit to all the ten schools.

The 2,000 boys and girls marched into the hall and took seats in the sections assigned to the several schools. The number of "proficient pupils" just about filled the Grand Central Palace, galleries and all.

The ease and orderliness with which the children were marched in and out of the hall is explainable by their fire drills, although the teachers told the reporters that it was all without previous rehearsing. They did do things which hadn't been rehearsed, and they did them well, as when a pupil went up from each section to get the silk banners their host gave them.

The meeting was started by the 2,000 singing "America," which they all knew well. Supt. Maxwell, who occupied the stage with Mrs. Mackay and other speakers and persons interested in the schools, complimented the children on their behavior. "Might Makes Right" was sung, and then Mrs. Mackay presented to a representative from each of the ten schools a 24 by 36 inch silk banner with the school number in gold letters. Each banner was done in the colors of the school.

She said that the children of to-day are the citizens of the future. She hoped that the banners would be not only school emblems, but also symbols in their future life, or something of that sort. She wanted them to be missionaries, in a way, going beyond the customary confines of good citizenship as leaders to better things. She said she had many things to say, but she guessed she had said enough.

Young Kenneth McCann walked up to the stage to present to the children's host a bouquet from her guests. She took the flowers, and then suddenly leaned over and kissed Kenneth. This was unpremeditated and unforeseen, but the fire drill training came out. Young Kenneth held his ground manfully, nor lost a single step.

Mrs. Mackay thanked the children for the flowers, and the 2,000 went through some physical exercises as one child. Then Prof. John Graham Brooks of Cambridge, Mass., made a long talk along the lines of the flypage editorial, pleading that the children play fair in the game of life.

There were a lot of moving pictures, showing views of the recent inaugural at Washington, of the Vanderbilt cup race, and of events preceding the Reign of Terror in Paris, including a scene where the head of Marie Antoinette's royal husband is held up to her sight at the prison window. The vitagraph man started to show the actual guillotining of the Queen. She had been taken out of the death wagon, and she was about to be shoved under the great knife when Supt. Maxwell called up out of the dark to the vitagraph man:

"Don't show that picture, Mr. Robertson; don't show that."

Mr. Robertson forbore, much to the joy of the girls and to the intense disgust of the boys in the rear.

As the concluding part of the programme the 2,000 sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," following Thomas Breen. While they sang Elizabeth Wernet, one of their number, all dressed up in flags, went on the stage and waved a big flag, while all the other children waved little ones.

Before they marched out the 2,000 rose and called out, "Good aft[illegible] Mackay," and she said, "[illegible]" and the children answered.

A LADY IN WAITING

By CHARLES WOODCOCK SAVAGE.

This is the story of a young girl aristocrat in France told in the form of a diary kept by herself. She reveals all the sweetness and pride and loveliness of her beautiful girlhood, and tells of her first love. She becomes a lady-in-waiting to the Queen, but then come the dark days of the Revolution, and her whole family is swept away. The heroine escapes to America, and visits George Washington. Her lover, from whom she was separated by his jealous sister, rejoins her unexpectedly and they are married and return to France.

Stocks Steady; Call Money Rates, 3@7 Per Cent.

Market Resists Higher Money—Excellent Railroad Earnings.

After a brief renewal, at the opening of yesterday's market, of the liquidation which swept prices before it on Wednesday, stocks steadied, and, in spite of the intermittent pressure brought to bear through the operations of speculators for the fall, or as a result of belated sales of long stocks, and notwithstanding the fact that call money rates advanced a full 1 per cent. above the figure which lay at the bottom of Wednesday's discomfiture, while rates for time money rose to almost unprecedented figures for this season of the year, there was no recurrence of Wednesday's weakness, and prices closed either unchanged or at nominal advances. Matters not without influence in making speculative sentiment were the support accorded to Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares, these stocks rising 5⅞ and 3½ points, respectively; the unusually favorable railroad earnings reported during the day, and the sharp decline in foreign exchange rates. But there were also less favorable developments, including the final winding up of the International Mercantile Marine underwriting syndicate, the underwriters being called upon to take over all the securities involved; the failure of the receiver to provide funds for the payment of interest upon $15,000,000 of Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton 4½ per cent. notes, and a further decline in Consolidated Gas, upon the prospect that the State Senate would add its official approval to the Assembly's bill for a reduction of the price of gas. In general, however, the market movement of the day seemed a response to technical conditions rather than to news developments. The volume of selling appeared, for the moment, to have exhausted itself, or at least buyers were forthcoming at the new level of prices established for such offerings as were pressed for sale.

Continued losses by the banks to the Sub-Treasury, these having now reached a total of $5,600,000, an amount in excess of the surplus reserve reported by the banks at the end of last week, go far to convince even hardened speculators that the liquidation of Wednesday and the relative dullness of yesterday's market are blessings in disguise, since they will work to the betterment of the money situation through the curtailment of loans and prospective increases in cash holdings. Working to the same end yesterday were the offerings in this market by foreign lenders who have naturally been attracted by the unusually high bids which Wall Street is just now making for money. A shifting of loans by means of these outside borrowings may prove more important in its effects upon the bank statement than the liquidation in the stock market. The decline in demand sterling, which followed the offerings of these bills, brought the rate to 4.8570 and encouraged the belief that in the contingency of any serious money disturbance such further declines would occur as to lead to importations of gold. Among the January railroad earnings statements submitted were those of the Canadian Pacific, disclosing a gain of $844,000 in net; of the Erie, whose net gain was $538,000; the Chesapeake and Ohio, whose net increase was $382,000, and the Southern Railway, whose net gain was $335,000. The Reading report for January, showing a decrease of $156,000 in net receipts for all companies, was somewhat disappointing, but Reading has of late been falling behind other roads operating in the same territory, its earnings failing, for instance, to keep up to the high level maintained by those of the Lehigh Valley. An announcement of interest was that of the restoration of the full 4 per cent. dividend upon the first preferred stock of the Colorado and Southern Railway Company.

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

Decrease of $4,003,041 Shown for the Month of February.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The monthly statement of the public debt, issued today, shows that at the close of business on Feb. 28 the total debt, less cash in the Treasury, amounted to $987,521,555, a decrease for the month of $4,003,041, principally accounted for by a large increase in the amount of cash on hand. The debt is recapitulated as follows:

Interest bearing debt	$895,159,170
Debt on which interest has ceased since maturity	1,156,705
Debt bearing no interest	393,923,766
Total	$1,290,239,641

This amount, however, does not include $1,017,493,869 in certificates and Treasury notes outstanding, which are offset by an equal amount of cash on hand held for their redemption.

The cash in the Treasury is classified as follows:

Gold reserve	$150,000,000
Trust funds	1,017,493,869
General fund	181,066,575
In National bank depositaries	65,333,464
In Treasury Philippine Islands	5,064,703
Total	*$1,418,958,612

*Against which there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $1,116,240,526, which leaves a cash balance on hand of $302,718,086.

The Commercial and Financial Chronicle's annual, the Financial Review for 1906, is out of the press. It contains, as usual, an exhaustive statistical review of the past year in finance and commerce and details of Stock Exchange transactions, bank statements, money rates, crop statistics, and other valuable reference information, covering a number of years.

O. S. Thomas, President of the Consolidated National Bank, was elected a Vice President of the United National Bank yesterday. The Thomas interests recently purchased a controlling interest in the bank, which, it is planned, to convert into a trust company.

The Directors of the Nassau National Bank of Brooklyn have elected Edgar McDonald, cashier, to the Second Vice Presidency, and have made Daniel V. B. Hegeman, assistant cashier, cashier.

The General Chemical Company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent., payable April 2 to stockholders of record March 22.

Beginning on Monday next, THE TIMES will mail to each of its readers who desire it, for filing purposes, a copy of the weekly summary of Financial Quotations, prepared in the old small-page form. To secure a copy it is only necessary to send your name and address to THE TIMES Office.—Adv.

ANOTHER TRUST CO. GIVES IN.

Van Norden Company Applies for Clearing House Privileges.

The Van Norden Trust Company has made application to clear through the New York Clearing House as a non-member represented by the Fourth National Bank. To meet the requirements of the Clearing House in the matter of reserves, the company, which has been maintaining a 7½ per cent. cash reserve for some time, will hereafter keep 10 per cent. in cash in its vaults. The decision of the trust company to apply for clearing privileges has nothing to do, however, with the general question of legal reserves for trust companies.

Only two trust companies, the Manhattan and the Knickerbocker, now clear through the Clearing House. All the others left that institution two years ago, when a rule was adopted by the Clearing House Association requiring all trust companies desiring clearing privileges to keep a cash reserve, which was to be increased gradually to 10 per cent.

COLO. SOUTHERN DIVIDEND.

Payment on First Preferred Resumed After Two Years' Suspension.

The Directors of the Colorado and Southern Railway Company declared yesterday a dividend of 2 per cent. on the company's first preferred stock. Dividends on the stock were suspended two years ago. The stock is a 4 per cent. non-cumulative issue and the dividend declared yesterday is the full amount to which the stock is entitled in any half year. The company paid the full 4 per cent. only in 1903. In 1900 2 per cent. was paid, in 1901 and 1902 3½ per cent., in 1903 and in 1904 2 per cent.

The earnings of the road have recently sufficiently improved to make possible the resumption of dividends on the first preferred. The road is engaged in important extension projects, the principal of which is a line to the Gulf, which is now under construction. B. F. Yoakum of the Rock Island and 'Frisco systems is a Director in the Colorado and Southern, and of late has taken an important part in the management of the road.

CANADIAN BANK DEAL.

Purchase of Sovereign Stock by the Dresdner of Germany Confirmed.

TORONTO, March 1.—At a special meeting of shareholders of the Sovereign Bank to-day announcement was made that the Dresdner Bank of Germany had purchased 15,625 shares of Sovereign Bank stock, representing a cash investment of $2,031,250. The Dresdner Bank is J. P. Morgan & Co.'s German representative.

This confirms the story printed in THE TIMES yesterday morning, eliminating the direct connection of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. with the purchase of the stock. As told in THE TIMES, J. P. Morgan & Co. have been stockholders in the Sovereign Bank since its foundation.

Steel Spring Surplus Increased.

The annual report of the Railway Steel Spring Company shows a surplus for the year, after payment of dividends, of $465,028. Net earnings were $1,949,994, as compared with $1,089,943 for 1904. This is an increase of $860,051. The surplus for 1905, added to the amounts already in the treasury, gives the company a total surplus of $2,045,899. The retiring Directors were re-elected.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 1.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day, but there was less pressure, and supplies were more abundant. About $26,250,000 in interest and dividends was distributed. Discounts were easier in anticipation of better monetary conditions and the strength of the Bank return, in which the increase of the bullion was largely due to the inflow of Russian gold.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was quiet and featureless. Consols were a shade easier.

Americans opened weak on New York selling, rallied to above parity, remained unsettled, often drooped, and closed easy. Grand Trunk was lower on the January statement not equaling expectations.

Foreigners generally were better on Paris support.

Kaffirs were weak and unsettled owing to heavy liquidations.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 103¼.

Bar silver quiet at 30 7-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 16.65; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £181,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £6,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

LARGE GAINS SHOWN IN RAILROAD EARNINGS

Reading the Only Laggard in a Long List of Lines.

OPEN WINTER A GREAT HELP

Some Roads, However, Are Only Back of the Earning Level of 1903—Economies Effected.

Net earnings for the month of January were reported yesterday by several important railroad systems, and in nearly every case large increases were shown over the corresponding month in 1905. The Reading Company, which showed a decrease of $156,488 in net earnings for the month, was the only exception. The Erie, the Canadian Pacific, and the Southern Railway all reported heavy increases in net, and smaller gains were reported in the cases of Louisville and Nashville, Chesapeake and Ohio, Central of Georgia, and New York, Ontario and Western.

All the railroads have profited this season by the open Winter, and the excellent showing made by the railroads which reported yesterday for the month of January reflects in large measure the favorable weather conditions under which traffic was handled during that month. The gross earnings of the roads which had previously reported had shown heavy increases. The full statements for the month of January indicate that economies were effected in operation as compared with the previous year which resulted in many of the roads being able to retain as net earnings a large proportion of their increase in gross.

In some instances, however, it is to be noted that the earnings of the roads, while comparing very favorably with last year, are merely getting back to the level of earnings reported in 1903. Last year and the year before many roads had to contend against very unfavorable weather conditions, and this pulled down their earnings to such an extent that a comparison of last year's figures with those for the current year indicate an abnormally large gain. This is particularly true in the case of the Erie Railroad, which reported yesterday an increase of $538,243 in net for the month of January. The road's earnings for that month amounted to $1,052,747, compared with $514,404. In January, 1902, however, the road's net earnings were $1,009,966, showing that last year's record was below the normal. The same statements hold good in less degree in the case of the Canadian Pacific, which reported yesterday an increase of $844,566. This increase is just double the total net earnings for January, 1905, but going back to 1903, it is seen that in January that year the road earned net $916,771, compared with its net earnings for January of $1,267,234.

The New York, Ontario and Western reported an increase of $62,490 in net for the month of January, the Louisville and Nashville an increase of $109,879, the Southern Railway an increase of $335,881, the Chesapeake and Ohio, of $382,472, and the Central of Georgia an increase of $82,617.

The Reading Company, which reported a decrease of $156,488 in its net earnings for January, reported an increase of $494,576 in gross earnings for the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, but at the same time an increase of $681,328 in expenses and renewal charges, so that net earnings showed a decrease.

COMMERCIAL FAILURES LAST MONTH.

The commercial failures during February, says Dun's Review, were 983 in number, the fewest during this month in over a decade, with the exception of the two seasons of hard times, in 1899 and 1900. While the number of failures was less, the total amount involved this year—$10,859,619—was greater than last, when 1,013 failures involved $9,780,370. It was some $5,000,000 less than in 1904, and also compared favorably with the two preceding years. The failures in manufacturing and trade were most favorable in comparison with last year, but the increased liabilities were made up from brokerage, real estate, and insurance failures, which amounted to $2,638,906, compared with $539,533 in 1905.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Copper metal advanced in London yesterday for both immediate and future delivery, but prices in the local market remained unchanged. Spot copper closed in London at £79 5s., an advance of 5s. over the opening and of 10s. over the closing price of Wednesday. Futures closed at £77 10s., an advance of 5s. over Wednesday's last.

Board of Trade Rates Raised.

The traders who formerly drew salaries ranging from $100 to $500 a month must depend on commissions for sales. Some made $50 in a few hours to-day. The previous rate for sales of 5,000 bushels of grain was $6.25, and the present rate is $12.50.

GEORGE GOULD UNTROUBLED.

He and Associates Not Disturbed by Western Maryland Suit.

Representatives of the Western Maryland interests said yesterday that they were not at all disturbed over the suits which were filed early this week in Maryland by the minority stockholders in the Western Maryland against the Western Maryland syndicate, which included besides George J. Gould, James Hazen Hyde, John W. Gates, and a number of other financiers. The suits have been brought in the name of Philip Joseph and S. Raymond Senseney, who seek to have the $10,000,000 bond issue of the Western Maryland Railroad Company set aside and to compel the members of the syndicate to make payment in full for the $15,000,000 of common stock issued by the Western Maryland.

The Western Maryland syndicate itself was dissolved in October last, and the securities acquired by the syndicate were distributed pro rata to the participants.

Mr. Senseney, it is said, is the holder of record of eight shares, while Mr. Joseph, the other plaintiff, is believed to represent stock formerly held by a deceased member of his family, he himself not being a stockholder of record.

The Western Maryland is the eastern end of the Gould extension to the Atlantic Seaboard.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 1.—Local prices steadied themselves to-day. Selling for the New York account was less persistent, while commission house buying was little better. In such stocks as Cambria Steel, Philadelphia Rapid Transit, and United Gas Improvement there were uncovered supporting orders at the low level of prices, and board-room traders promptly took warning and desisted from pressing these shares for sale.

The pools in them, on the other hand, made no effort to rally them, so that fluctuations were narrow. There was some good buying of United States Steel and Reading common, but the orders were of the "scaled" kind. A feature and about the only one, was the buying of Philadelphia Company receipts. They were heavily dealt in, and sold from 1¾ to 3 points above the unassented stock.

Holders of the latter are now regretting that they did not deposit their holdings under the plan offered by the United Railways Investment Company of San Francisco.

Total sales, 28,221 shares.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 1.—United Railways income bonds were a feature today, selling up to 73½, an advance of ½ since yesterday. The Baltimore Trust certificates, which closed yesterday at 71½, opened at the same price and sold up to 71¾.

City and Suburban 5s of Washington were ¼ lower. Anacostia and Potomac 5s opened 1½ points up, to 107, and advanced to 107⅛, but eased off later. In the stock list, Northern Central declined ½.

Houston Oil stocks were off, the common selling down to 12 and the preferred to 50, a decline in the former of ½ and in the latter of 1½. There seemed to be a lack of demand for the issues, and this was probably responsible for their weakened condition.

Seaboard new common dropped a point. The market closed firm, but dull.

Shares, 1,870; bonds, $176,000.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Five or six weeks ago, when prices were 10 to 25 points higher, it seemed that there were not enough stocks to go around. Traders clamored for them, the public bought them on tips, brokers said that although prices were high the market had every apearance of going higher, and few stopped to inquire whence this enthusiastic speculative demand was being supplied. Nobody asked about the selling. It was the buying that interested people. Anybody can realize now that the selling at that time was much more important than the buying. It made no difference who sold, bulls said. The market had got big and broad enough to take all the stocks that were for sale and more. That was what the tape said, and the tape was wrong. The reverse is now true. Commission houses have scaled down their margined lines, bullish enthusiasm has gone out of the market, professional sentiment is bearish, and selling is much more in evidence than buying. When prices begin to decline sharply people want to know immediately who is selling. There is then as little curiosity as to the sources of the buying as there is in a strong market about the sources of the selling. There has been an enormous amount of selling in the last few days, partly liquidation and partly short selling, and it has been commented upon so much more minutely than the buying that one could almost forget that when stocks are sold they are also bought. There has been a big market for stocks on declining prices. There has been somebody to take them off the hands of those who were tired of them, or had to sell, or borrowed them to sell short. The recent buying, perhaps, corresponds to the selling which nobody noticed toward the culmination of the January boom. It has not been commission house buying.

⁂

The more active commission houses have been scaling down their lines this week, and their loans have been decreasing proportionately. A lot of call loans were paid off yesterday morning. One house paid off $1,000,000, another $2,000,000, and others varying amounts. This reduction in loans, however, will not all be reflected in the bank statement on Saturday, owing to its having begun at mid-week.

⁂

As nearly as could be estimated yesterday the Gates crowd and its following sold nearly 500,000 shares of stock in Wednesday's market. The sheet of Gates & Co., it was reported, was late at the Clearing House and showed perhaps the largest day's business that has been done by one firm in the last two or three years. The selling continued yesterday forenoon, but on a much smaller scale. In messages sent westward yesterday Mr. Gates gave a few of his reasons for being bearish on the market. The possibility of legislation embarrassing to the trust companies and the necessity of pool liquidation in Wall Street were the two upon which he laid especial emphasis. He apparently felt no uneasiness on these points on Monday when he urged his followers to load up with Union Pacific around 154. It is difficult to escape the suspicion that the bullish demonstration made by the Gates crowd on Monday was insincere, the object of it being to get a price level on which stocks could be sold advantageously. Mr. Gates's solicitude for pools and his distrust of "cliqued" stocks contrast curiously with his own position in Tennessee Coal and Iron, a stock which to all intents and purposes is cornered at a very high price.

⁂

The impression in other Western quarters is that the Gates contingent and its following are practically all out of their speculative stocks, and that the Gates crowd, itself is heavily short of the market. Unless the extent of the short interest now existing is greatly overestimated, the bear party will have to influence fresh liquidation in order to get its profits. It is one thing to break prices with short selling and another to get the stocks back at a profit. The Gates crowd has never shown any capacity for conducting a bear campaign. It employs raiding tactics on the bear side which are often very effective, but a bear campaign is different. It organized a succesful raid at the end of January, but covered up swiftly and turned again to the bull side. The Gates people, in fact, are notoriously uneasy in a bearish position.

⁂

The volume of yesterday's trading was only about two-thirds as large as Wednesday's, and the difficulty of dislodging stocks was increased in about the same proportion. The market opened at about the level of Wednesday's closing, declined for an hour under selling pressure, mostly of Western origin, then rallied moderately, and grew dull. Union Pacific, United States Steel common, and Pennsylvania each touched its low price of the preceding day, Union Pacific at 149⅛, Steel common at 40⅜, and Pennsylvania at 137⅝, and then recovered. Steel preferred failed by a fraction to sell as low yesterday as on Wednesday. Amalgamated Copper went ¾ of a point lower and closed at a decline of ½ per cent. After mid-day the trading became rather narrow. Shortly before 2 o'clock an attempt was made to start a fresh selling movement. Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper were sold aggressively, and there was also some speculative selling of Northern Pacific, probably of the same origin, but the demonstration was abortive. It failed to bring out stocks. Union Pacific, which had been sold down abruptly from around 150 to 149⅛, recovered in the last half hour to 150¾, the highest quotation for the day.

⁂

A very prominent Stock Exchange house, distinguished for having turned on the market at the top of the January boom, says: "As a matter of fact, the market is neglected by the strong interests, and it is quite probable that those who are well able to buy are really assisting the market downward and delaying their purchases because they wish to buy at better advantage than at present." It is evident that the large interests, so-called, were willing to see the market lower. They had a market in January on which they were able to sell a big line of stocks at prices which could not be maintained, and in the last few days they have probably been buying back what they sold at that time.

⁂

The violent decline in Consolidated Gas securities has called attention to the convertible 6 per cent. bonds. Selling around 150, this bond yields 4 per cent. on the investment and gives the holder a call for three years on Consolidated Gas stock. On any interest period after July, 1907, the bond may be exchanged for stock par and par. It is redeemable in 1909.

⁂

A bear movement in wheat has made all the recent Wall Street talk about damage from an open Winter seem far-fetched. A few weeks ago misgivings about Winter wheat were supposed to be influencing liquidation in the stock market. Now that stocks cannot logically be sold on a dubious crop prospect with wheat options declining, other reasons are easily substituted. When people want to do either thing in the market there need be no embarrassment for want of reasons. The trouble mostly is that there are too many reasons in favor of doing what the mob is doing. Reasons are all good in their time, if the premises are sound; the difficulty is to see them in their proper relations. Premature reasoning is often as disastrous to a speculator as tardy reasoning.

⁂

Mr. Lawson added his voice yesterday to the bear medley, launching a circular printed in red ink as the last (?) warning of a coming crash in coppers. Mr. Lawson evidently has never distinguished between last and latest in his use of the English language. This red-ink circular is probably (without counting them) the fiftieth last warning. He is now pounding the Heinze outfit, making a target, rather, of United Copper than Amalgamated. Mr. Lawson's appropriation for publicity has evidently been reduced. He is not as prodigal in the use of postage as formerly, and has ceased to use the telegraph at all. Yesterday's circular, for example, had a very limited reading, because it was not scattered broadcast.

⁂

It seems strange that the friends of the Interborough-Metropolitan deal should call attention publicly to the unsatisfactory condition of Metropolitan affairs. In order to induce the holders of the Metropolitan securities to come in, two committees, "by request," have reported dubiously on the value and prospects of Metropolitan Street Railway and Metropolitan Securities, dwelling at length upon the fact that the railway system is not earning its dividend, and also upon the prospect of a continued heavy drain upon the Metropolitan Securities Company, which makes good the Metropolitan's deficit. The holders of these stocks, therefore, are urged to exchange them for the merger securities. The merger company, it appears, is very anxious to get something which the owners ought to be glad to part with. No wonder the holders of Metropolitan issues have been somewhat confused in their ideas about the merger.

OUR IMPORTS INCREASING.

$3,000,000 in Excess of Last February's at New York—Gems and Autos.

In a report issued yesterday by George W. Whitehead, Appraiser of the Port of New York, it is shown that the imports of diamonds and other precious stones here in February exceeded those of the corresponding month last year by more than $659,947. The total valuation of the gems aggregated $3,067,036 last month, compared with $2,407,089 in February, 1905.

The imports of automobiles since Jan. 1 have been 191 cars, valued at $625,000, compared with 123 machines in the same period last year. In the first two months of 1904 the entries were only 68 cars. The total appraised value of all importations at this port in February was $60,248,978, an increase of $3,000,000 over the same month of 1905.

LEATHER EXPORT RECORD.

Total Value for 1905 Is $38,946,422—Imports $12,952,519.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Exports of leather and leather manufactures from the United States during the calendar year 1905 were the largest on record, aggregating $38,946,422, against $35,824,492 in 1904, $27,169,614 in 1900, and $12,275,470 in 1890. Sole leather exports go principally to the United Kingdom and Japan.

Imports of leather and leather manufactures during 1905 aggregated $12,952,519, mainly gloves, (valued at $5,424,437,) skins for morocco, and skins and upper leather.

ARKANSAS BANK CLOSES.

Private Institution Sold to Attorney, Who Will Pay Depositors.

FORT SMITH, Ark., March 1.—The Southern Bank and Trust Company, a recent corporation with authorized capital of $600,000, failed to open its doors today. A notice was posted to the effect that the bank interests had been sold to Thomas Neal, an attorney of Fort Smith, who, it was stated, would pay all depositors in full. The deposits amount to $80,000.

The company was organized less than a year ago by its President, C. C. Waller of Dallas, Texas. Some time ago there were rumors to the effect that none of the authorized capital stock of $600,00 had been paid in. As a result of the rumors small depositors began withdrawing.

$5,000,000

Birmingham, Ala.

General Mortgage Refunding 4½ Per Cent Gold Bonds

DATED APRIL 1, 1904 — DUE APRIL 1, 1954

Interest payable April 1 and October 1 in New York or New Orleans
Redeemable at 105 and interest on and after April 1, 1909

The bonds above offered, will, in opinion of counsel, on or before July 1, 1906, through the retirement of underlying bonds which have already been called for payment, be secured by a FIRST MORTGAGE on the entire Gas, Electric Light and Power business of the company, and on 71.85 miles of street railway trackage including that located on many of the principal streets of the city of Birmingham, together with the large central station used for generating power for the entire street railway system.

The Birmingham Railway, Light & Power Company is a consolidation of twelve original street railway, gas and electric light and power companies, owning and operating the entire street railway, gas and electric lighting and power business of the City of Birmingham, and many surrounding cities and towns, serving a population at present estimated at over 133,000, and which is increasing with great rapidity. The franchises under which the Company operates are very valuable, a large majority of them being, in opinion of counsel, either unlimited in time or its tracks are located on private right-of-way.

*These Birmingham Railway & Electric Company bonds (due July 2, 1924), are secured by a First Mortgage on less than 37% of the street railway mileage, and are not a lien on the gas or electric light and power property of the Company. Upon the retirement of these bonds at or before maturity, the general refunding mortgage bonds will, in opinion of counsel, be secured by a first mortgage on the entire property rights and franchises of the company.

EARNINGS AND EXPENSES
Officially reported for the year 1905

Gross Earnings	$1,630,514
Operating Expenses and Taxes	908,891
Net Earnings	$721,623
Bond Interest	353,391
	$368,232

During every year since the Company was organized, both gross and net earnings have shown an uninterrupted and satisfactory increase. The gross and net earnings for the past four years (together with an estimate for 1906) have been officially reported as follows:

	1902	1903	1904	1905	Estimated 1906
Net Earnings	466,717	573,825	602,453	721,623	832,500

Dividends at the rate of six per cent. have been paid on the $2,500,000 Preferred Stock of the Company since its organization, and at the rate of three per cent. in 1903, and four per cent. in 1904 and 1905, on $3,500,000 Common Stock. The Preferred Stock is now quoted at approximately $105 and the Common Stock at approximately $93 per share.

The physical condition of the property of the Birmingham Railway, Light & Power Company is excellent. The street railway lines are all well built and of solid construction, and all but 21.3 miles are laid with from 60 to 100-lb. rails. The gas and electric light plants are modern in construction and equipment, and of capacity sufficient to provide for a large increase in business.

Practically the entire Birmingham district, frequently spoken of as "The Pittsburg of the South," is underlaid with enormous deposits of coal, iron and limestone, rendering it possible to manufacture pig iron cheaper than anywhere else in the world. No city in the south has better railroad transportation facilities and in magnitude of tonnage produced, the Birmingham district is stated to exceed that of the entire State of Georgia. Since 1900 the population of the city of Birmingham has increased over 43%, while bank deposits have increased over 114% and postal receipts over 112%.

We recommend these bonds for investment

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Dull and Irregular Market on the Curb.

Interborough Rapid Transit Recovers Losses—Coppers Heavy, with United Copper Down 2 Points.

Trading on the curb suffered a relapse of dullness yesterday and prices inclined to irregularity. Interborough Rapid Transit began early to recover the five points lost yesterday and sold rapidly up from the opening, 220, to 227½. The merger stocks were little affected by the news of Attorney General Mayer's refusal to entertain the Hearst suit, although the preferred closed 2 points up at 90 after sales of 1,000.

The mining list was weak and irregular. United Copper, after an opening ⅛ below Wednesday's close, dropped 2½ points to 67, but recovered just before the close to 68½. Sales were 13,600 shares. Among the Industrials Bethlehem Steel preferred closed one point down at 89, and the International Mercantile Marine stocks made fractional losses.

THE TRACTION MERGER AT LAST MADE REAL

Vreeland and Bryan Promise Better Service for All Sections.

MAJORITY STOCK DEPOSITED

Details Completed at a Meeting of the Organization Committee—Voting Trust Controls.

The merger of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and the Metropolitan Securities Company was finally accomplished yesterday.

It was announced during the afternoon that more than the necessary two-thirds of the stock of the two former companies and one-half of the latter company had been deposited under the merger plan. A meeting of the Organization Committee was then called, and the merger agreement declared in operation. An extension of the time of deposit was granted, making March 16 the final date at which stockholders of the subsidiary companies may participate in the merger by depositing their stock.

The permanent organization of the new Interborough-Metropolitan Company will be effected when August Belmont, who is now at Palm Beach, returns to the city.

Operating plans for the merged companies were informally discussed yesterday afternoon by officials of the two traction systems. President Vreeland of the Metropolitan system issued the following statement:

"While there have been no definite plans made for changes or improvements in the transit facilities, pending the merger, from twelve years' experience with city transit, having to consider the general movement of traffic irrespective of whether it was carried on the surface, elevated, or Subway, I am convinced that many changes can be made in the operation of the systems that will be of great advantage to the public."

Vice President Bryan of the Interborough declined to discuss plans for the extension of the Subway system, but he said that every effort would be made, in conjunction with the Rapid Transit Commission, to provide better transit facilities to all sections of the city.

The Listing Committee of the Stock Exchange has authorized the listing of the certificates of deposit of the Interborough and Metropolitan Securities stock on the unlisted department of the Stock Exchange. The $100,000,000 of common stock of the new company will be deposited under a voting trust agreement. The voting trustees will be August Belmont, Walter G. Oakman, Thomas F. Ryan, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and P. A. B. Widener.

MERGER A LAWFUL MONOPOLY.

Attorney GeGneral Mayer Denies Hearst Petition for Suit Against It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 1.—Attorney General Mayer to-day declared the merger of the Interborough and Metropolitan Companies a monopoly, but said that there was nothing in the laws of the State which prohibited it. If it were undesirable that such a combination should be made, it was for the Legislature to enact laws that would remedy the situation.

The opinion was rendered on an application of William R. Hearst, asking that the Attorney General begin action on the theory that the merger constituted a monopoly in violation of the law. The Attorney General says:

"The proposed merger, if carried out, will constitute a monopoly of the transportation systems in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, including existing elevated, surface, and subway systems.

"Undoubtedly the purpose of the Legislature in prohibiting monopolies was to prevent combinations which would affect prices. But in the case of railroad companies the prices are fixed, either by local ordinance or by legislative restriction.

"It is, of course, not a function of the Attorney General to determine the wisdom of legislative policies. If there should be any just cause of complaint, the proper body to determine upon the public policy involved in such matters is the Legislature.

"The statement has been made in the petition herein that the stock is to be issued without full value, and this statement may, or may not, be correct. 'Suffice it to say, that the Attorney General, if he has power upon this branch of the matter, (which is not at all clear,) has nothing before him in the nature of evidence upon that subject.

"For all of which reasons, the application is denied."

SHAW FOR CUSTOMS REFORM.

Wants Brokers Licensed and Disdains Civil Service Lawyers.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Secretary Shaw appeared before the House Committee on Ways and Means to-day in support of the Payne bill providing for the licensing of Custom House brokers. He urged that the licensing of such brokers would tend to keep "shysters" out of the business and result in a raising of standards, just as the licensing of professional men had elevated the professions. He also advocated the appointment of a solicitor of customs to represent the department in cases taken before the Board of Appraisers.

He deplored the fact that the assistant counsel for the Treasury Department in charge of customs was obtained through the civil service. When asked if this was not a good way to select lawyers the Secretary asked to be excused from answering as he said his reply would not be suitable for the ears of gentlemen.

Mr. Shaw also urged that the pay of special agents employed in the customs service be increased to $10 a day that better men might be obtained to ferret out undervaluations. He said the Government lost from $10,000,000 to $40,000,000 a year on undervaluation frauds, and much of this loss could be avoided if more well equipped agents were employed.

Marion Devries and other members of the Board of General Appraisers also advocated the necessity for licensing brokers.

Wickham Smith, who said he appeared to represent New York brokers, opposed the bill.

MONEY MARKET FIRMER.

Funds on Call Lend at 7 Per Cent.—Talk of Gold Imports.

The money market became firmer yesterday, call loans being made as high as 7 per cent. and short time loans advancing to 6 per cent. The latter rate was quoted in the case of some loans for ninety days, compared with the previous day's rate of 5½ per cent. Six months' loans were still quoted yesterday at 5½ per cent. The banks this week have lost heavily to the Sub-Treasury, the cash payments since last Friday to the Sub-Treasury having been $5,663,000 in excess of the amount paid to the banks. Yesterday the Sub-Treasury transferred $200,000 to Cincinnati, and in addition to this transfer of funds it was said that large shipments to the interior were made by some of the banks direct.

The banks at present, owing to their small surplus reserve, are not in a position to spare any large amount of cash, and the advance in interest rates yesterday was regarded as logical in view of the fact that the loss this week to the Sub-Treasury alone was already sufficient to wipe out the surplus reserve reported last Saturday.

Foreign exchange rates declined sharply yesterday, leading to the belief in some quarters that gold imports might be brought about in the near future. Demand sterling sold as low as 4.8570.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Bone Stilettos Not Admitted at Lower Rates—Other Decisions.

In a decision by C. P. McClelland, the Board of United States General Appraisers decided yesterday adversely to the importers, T. Buettner & Co., of Chicago, a contention dealing with the classification to be awarded stilettos made of bone. The customs authorities returned them for duty at the rate of 30 per cent. under the provision in the Dingley tariff law for manufactures of bone, whereas the importers claimed assessment at the rate of 25 per cent. under another paragraph.

Other importers' claims decided adversely to the importers were filed by Calhoun, Robbins & Co., A. Herzog, J. S. Plummer & Co., J. H. Fithian & Co., A. L. Simon & Co., John Munroe & Co., American Express Company, Julius Mamluck & Co., A. Cohn & Co., the United States Express Company, J. W. Hampton, Jr., & Co., I. Emrich & Co., and Mills & Gibb, New York; G. W. Sheldon & Co., the Theodore Ascher Company, T. Buettner & Co., Chicago; the Rosenthal-Sloan Millinery Company, St. Louis, and J. W. Greenhalgh & Co., Boston.

The board sustained protests by Marshall Field & Co. and G. W. Sheldon & Co., Chicago, and Winslow Brothers & Smith Company, Boston.

A claim by Albert Herzog of New York was partially sustained.

C., H. & D. LINES SWAMPED BY ENORMOUS OUTLAYS

TOLD IN RECEIVER'S REPORT

Noteholders Agree to Postpone Action to Secure Payment of Defaulted Interest.

The annual reports of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton and the Pere Marquette Railroad systems for the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1905, were given out by Receiver Judson Harmon in Cincinnati yesterday.

The report shows that the gross earnings of the C., H. and D. in the fiscal year 1905 were $8,008,917, a decrease of $13,314. The operating expenses increased $219,375. Net earnings decreased, a total of $232,716. The increase in fixed charges, from interest and rentals, was $760,764, not including obligations of a like nature assumed for the Pere Marquette. The surplus decreased a total of $1,034,754. The percentage of expenses to earnings increased from 72.12 in 1904 to 74.98 in 1905, an increase of 2.86 per cent. Taxes increased 3.36 per cent. During the year, up to June 30, a total of $504,683 was spent for improvements. Immense orders were given for equipment, which, as shown by subsequent events, became a burden on the treasury of the company.

The bonded debt of the company on June 30 was $68,656,000, on which the annual interest was $2,240,349. The net earnings per mile in 1904 were $2,203, but this decreased in 1905 to $1,941.

The Père Marquette, for the fiscal year ended on June 30, showed a material gain in gross earnings, but this increase was overbalanced by a tremendous expense in operating expenses. Gross earnings were $12,669,420, an increase of $1,236,728. Operating expenses, however, increased $2,198,973, which left an actual decrease in net earnings of $971,349. Interest and rentals increased $697,633. There was a decrease in the surplus of $1,312,979. The percentage of expenses to earnings was 78.28, an increase of actually more than 10.77 per cent.

The interest which fell due yesterday on the $15,000,000 collateral trust 3½ year notes of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railway Company was not paid. At the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., where the interest on the notes was payable, it was said that no funds had been provided there for the payment of the interest, but that the firm had nothing further to say in regard to the matter.

The Protective Committee, representing the note holders, held a meeting yesterday, but took no formal action in reference to the default. After the meeting it was learned that the committee was of the opinion that the situation did not call for any radical steps just at this time, and that nothing would be gained by precipitate action. The committee, it is learned, is disposed to give the Morgan interests an opportunity to protect the note holders.

It is believed by some of the members of the committee that before the sixty days allowed to the company for the payment of the interest the necessary funds will be provided and the possibility of a foreclosure on the notes avoided.

The committee representing the holders of the collateral trust notes, J. N. Wallace, Chairman, gives notice that the holders of notes which have not yet been deposited under the agreement constituting the committee, are requested to deposit the same at the earliest possible date with the Central Trust Company. All notes must be deposited in negotiable form, and must bear the coupon which matured March 1, 1906, and all subsequent coupons.

GETS PITTSBURG UTILITIES.

United Railways Taking Bulk of Philadelphia Company Stock

PITTSBURG, March 1.—Pittsburg's street railways and gas supply, both natural and artificial, have practically passed from the control of the Philadelphia Company to the United Railways Investment Company of San Francisco, and a deal that involves nearly $40,000,000 is about completed.

Some time ago the syndicate, seeking control of the Philadelphia Company, offered to take 320,000 shares of the common stock. Under the offer 411,000 shares of the stock were deposited yesterday in New York, Baltimore, and Philadelphia.

It was announced through the Colonial Trust Company of this city to-day that the United Railways Investment Company, with the consent of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. of New York, would purchase all the stock of the Philadelphia Company deposited under the plan to acquire control of the Pittsburg utilities.

BUILDING THE ST. REGIS DROVE M'FADDENS OUT

Cotton Operator Says His Home Was a Target for Debris.

WIFE AND CHILDREN FLED

He Is Now Suing the Thompson-Starrett Company for $12,000 Damages —Jury Has the Case.

A suit brought by John H. McFadden, the cotton operator, against the Thompson-Starrett Company, builders of the Hotel St. Regis, will go to the jury to-day in the Supreme Court. Mr. McFadden is suing the contractors for $12,000 damages for injuries to property and annoyances to which he was subjected while the St. Regis was being constructed. He had leased a house in East Fifty-fifth Street, adjoining the hotel property, but claimed he found life so miserable there that he had to desert his home and go to the Waldorf-Astoria, taking his wife, three children, and servants with him. Mr. McFadden is known as one of the heaviest cotton operators in the financial district.

According to McFadden's story, told in court yesterday, while he has offices in Liverpool, Philadelphia, and New York, he found it convenient to reside in this city, so he leased the East Fifty-fifth Street house. Then came the building of the St. Regis. Sand was dumped in front of his home, stones piled up, and dust came into his windows in clouds, he asserts. His complaints to the contractors availed him nothing. An iron girder tumbled on his house one day, doing much damage. On another occasion a big stone from the St. Regis came crashing through a window of his drawing room, smashing the furniture and landing on the floor, frightening the members of his family and driving the servants into hysterics. Then the plumbing failed, the hot-water main springing a leak and causing more damage.

Finally, when his family could no longer stand the nuisance, the McFaddens moved to the Waldorf-Astoria. They remained there for sixty-four days, paying $79 a day for rooms and board. In the meantime, Mr. McFadden was compelled to pay rent for the house he had deserted, which brought his daily expense up to $100. In the sixty-four days which he spent at the Waldorf-Astoria with his family he had to pay out $6,400. He said he would not have been compelled to spend this money if the St. Regis contractors had permitted him to have peace and quiet in his own home. He adds to the $6,400 a further sum of $5,600 for damage to the house and furniture, making $12,000 the total amount sued for.

The Thompson-Starrett Company contends in defense that the McFaddens were not subjected to the annoyances described, that they were not subjected to any annoyances or damage through any negligence or act on their part, and that the company cannot be held liable for the McFadden family board bill at the Waldorf-Astoria just because Mr. McFadden chose to live at a hotel in preference to living at his own home.

After counsel in the case sum up to-day Justice Amend will charge the jury.

DAILY NEWS OFF THE LIST.

Loses City Advertising Contract Just as Its Editor Predicted.

Mayor McClellan has cut The Daily News off the list of papers receiving city advertising. This action was taken at yesterday's meeting of the City Record Board, both the Mayor and Corporation Counsel Delany voting to substitute The Globe. Controller Metz, the third member, voted to retain The News.

The action follows an attack made by The News on Mayor McClellan in January. At that time T. C. Quinn, the editor, published a statement that Mayor McClellan had tried to control the editorial and news columns of The News by using the city advertising as a club, and denounced the Mayor for his alleged action. The News then announced that it expected to lose the city advertising at the next meeting of the Board of City Record, and said it had made arrangements to meet the changed financial conditions.

The meeting of the board yesterday was the first since The News made its attack, so Mr. Quinn's prediction came true.

SUBWAY CONSUMPTION NOW.

It Is Caused by Flying Particles of Steel, Dr. O'Hanlon Reports.

We have with us a new disease—a variety of consumption which in the future will be known as "Subway Consumption," if those who say they have discovered it have their way. The discovery was promulgated yesterday by Coroners' Physician O'Hanlon in a statement made by him Coroner Harburger after an autopsy performed on the bodies of two Subway track walkers who have died within the last month.

This disease, which it is said will quickly affect employes in the Subway and in time attack passengers, too, is due to the inhalation of small particles of steel dust, set free by the friction of shoes on the third rail and wheels on the other rails as well as by the action of the brakes on the wheels themselves.

Dr. Soper, who recently made a report to the Rapid Transit Commission on the sanitary conditions of the Subway, then declared that in samples of Subway dust examined by him there occurred more than 60 per cent. of these minute steel particles. Dr. Soper and Prof. John H. Larkin of the College of Physicians and Surgeons assisted Dr. Hanlon at the autopsies.

"It has been established by Dr. Soper," reports Dr. O'Hanlon, "that the amount of steel dust generated by friction in the Subway amounts to a ton a mile each month. These results will manifest themselves in the most pronounced way in men who are employed a number of hours a day in the tunnel, such as track walkers. In a less degree it will manifest itself among other employes and remotely in time among passengers.

"The ease with which the truth of this is demonstrated is shown in the following experiment. After riding in the Subway take a piece of white paper which is free from dust, hold your hat over it, and tap with the thumb on the brim of your hat gently all around for several minutes. Little black spots will then be found on the surface of the paper. Place a magnet beneath the paper and see the little particles of steel dance."

WANTS A WATER INQUIRY.

Mr. Ellison Would Include Register's Bureaus in All Boroughs.

Commissioner Ellison of the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity said yesterday that he would at once furnish the Aldermen with all the data they sought concerning the bureau of the Manhattan Water Register. He suggested, however, that the board should make its investigation cover the Water Registers' Bureaus in all of the boroughs and not confine themselves to Manhattan.

"No one is more anxious than I am to have all of the facts brought out regarding the charges that have been made," said the Commissioner. "Such a course will be best calculated to stop water waste and graft. Since I first took office I have been conducting an investigation of the Manhattan office, and as a result have made changes which I think will lead to better results. I refer especially to a greatly extended inspection of unmetered property. It was in furtherance of my own investigation that I wrote the letter to former Register Kelly asking him to place before me the information he says he has collected."

JUSTICE DEUEL DUE TO-DAY.

He Will Be Served with Notice of Motion for Disbarment.

Justice Joseph M. Deuel of Special Sessions will return to-day from Florida, according to information received at the District Attorney's office. Ex-Assistant District Attorney Gans will visit Special Sessions to serve on him copies of the petition and supporting documents by which the Appellate Division is to be asked to institute disbarment proceedings against him on the ground of his connection with Town Topics and "Fads and Fancies."

It is expected that Justice Deuel will be on hand to be served. His friends have assured the District Attorney that the Justice is anxious to have the matter thoroughly investigated as speedily as possible. Mr. Deuel, it is said, does not think that he has done anything that conflicts with his duties as a member of the judiciary, although at times, as he is said to admit, he may have let his friendship for Col. Mann lead him into "slight indiscretions."

According to the schedule prepared by the Justices of Special Sessions at the beginning of the year, Justice Deuel should preside in that court at the March term, which opens on Monday. It was said yesterday that the Justice would prefer not to appear on the bench while the investigation is on, and that an arrangement will be made with his fellow-Justices enabling him to devote himself entirely to his defense.

SAY GAIDSIS CONFESSED.

Counsel for Russian Government Exhibit a Document Admitting Theft.

The Russian Government, through Coudert Brothers, its legal representatives here, threw a bomb yesterday into the ranks of the Russian Revolutionary League and other east side sympathizers of Felix Gaidsis, who is being held here on a charge of larceny made against him in St. Petersburg by Secretary of State Veshniakov.

The effort to deport Gaidsis is being resisted by the revolutionists, and plenty of money has been raised to defend him on the ground that it is the desire of the Russian Government to get him to St. Petersburg in order to extort from him secrets of the military revolutionary movement which was headed by Gen. Lamansky, in whose employ Gaidsis alleges that he was.

Coudert Brothers presented to United States Commissioner Shields yesterday a copy of a confession of larceny alleged to have been made by Gaidsis and a cablegram from St. Petersburg saying that more evidence was on the way. Elias Rosenthal, a Russian lawyer, engaged to defend the prisoner, declared that the confession was a forgery.

Gaidsis was sent back to the Tombs pending the arrival of the additional testimony the Russian Government is said to have forwarded.

ICE UP TO 40 CENTS AND A FAMINE IN SIGHT

New York's Visible Supply Less Than a Third of Last Year's.

EVEN MAINE'S CROP FAILED

Despite the Advance in Prices the Ice Company Men Say They'll Lose Money This Summer.

With Summer yet a long time off, the price of ice has already been raised by the American Ice Company from 30 cents to 40 cents a hundred pounds. With an advance thus early in the year, there is reason to suppose that the price will go still higher toward June. Never before has there been such a bad year for ice. Four million tons were harvested from the Hudson River last year; only 600,000 tons this year. By stretching the artificial plants in New York to their utmost capacity, the ice companies may be able to get 700,000 tons of the artificial product, as against 500,000 tons last year.

Of last year's supply 300,000 tons were left over for consumption this year. Therefore, omitting the ice that may still be harvested from rivers and lakes, the total maximum supply for this year is estimated at 1,600,000 tons. This against a total available supply of 4,500,000 tons last year.

There is no longer any doubt that New York is in real danger of an ice famine.

The first rise in the price of ice in New York went into effect yesterday. Last year ice sold for 30 cents a hundred to private families. For wholesale purchasers last year's price of 17½ cents has been changed to 25 cents a hundred, with a rebate of 5 cents for the man who uses more than three tons a week.

Not in sixteen years has New York faced such an iceless prospect as this year. In 1890 there was a great deal of trouble, and the whole country had to be scoured for ice. Since then, however, the needs for ice have grown vastly, and a famine is a much more serious matter now than it was then, according to the ice company men.

The very conditions which bring little ice bring a great want of it. This Winter was wonderful for its mildness. This made people want ice, and at the same time it made less ice. The result has been that, though the supply failed, the sales of ice in New York this Winter were 50 per cent. greater than they were last Winter.

Wesley M. Oler, President of the American Ice Company, admitted yesterday that the conditions were cause for great anxiety. He still hopes for a cold March, but if that fails nothing can be done. He says that more plants cannot be built and put in operation in time for Summer.

"This was the worst Winter I ever knew," said Mr. Oler yesterday. He has been in the ice business thirty-three years, and has studied the temperature of Winters pretty steadily. "The conditions of the ice supply look pretty bad."

"Do you think there is danger of a famine this Summer?" Mr. Oler was asked.

"I'm afraid there is—I'll have to admit there is danger of it. We just can't get the ice anywhere. The ice business is a huge gamble in one way. The weather is at the bottom of it all. Now, the weather has been all against us. The supply of natural ice is much larger than that of artificial ice; it was eight times as large last year, and New York has to depend on the cold weather to freeze the Hudson River. This year the cold weather didn't come.

"Heretofore we have always been able to count on the Maine icefields as a sort of reserve in case of shortage on the Hudson or elsewhere in the State. Now we hear that Maine itself has been swept by the warm wave, and that its ice fields are not ice fields, but just water. Of course there's some ice there, but mighty little compared to former years.

"Right now we haven't got more than a week's supply of ice on hand. We won't take on a single new customer, because we have all we can do to supply those that we now have. There are many of our small competitors who are out of ice altogether. Of course, we haven't any to sell them. But a big concern like the American Ice Company has to keep its business going; it can't afford to stop. It is responsible to its customers, to the whole city, and it has to get the ice somewhere.

"For instance, we closed to-day a contract for the ice from Kaaterskill Lake. From there we have to ship the ice by rail to Kingston. There we load it on barges and bring it down the Hudson River. Then we have bought a lake near Starlight, Penn., whence the ice has to be carried over the Ontario and Western to Cornwall before it can be loaded on barges.

"Even in Massachusetts we have bought Richmond Lake, near West Pittsfield. From there the ice has to be brought down by rail to Port Morris, on the Harlem River, and there it is put on barges. Anywhere we find the ice we will get it. Short as the supply is in Maine, we get some from there. It is brought all the way to New York by sea, of course."

Ice at 50 Cents in Flushing.

The American Ice Company, which controls the ice business in Flushing, has notified its patrons in that place that the price of ice will be 50 cents a hundred pounds, which is a jump of 20 cents in the price.

FELONY, SAYS WOODRUFF.

He Thinks the Bribery Charge Against Tillinghast Is Not Outlawed.

Lawyer A. E. Woodruff, who appeared before the State Bar Association and the Assembly Ways and Means Committee to urge an investigation of alleged illegal practices in the City Court, took issue yesterday with the statement made by Assistant District Attorney Lockwood when William H. Tillinghast was sentenced in Special Sessions Wednesday for impersonating a juror. Mr. Lockwood told Justice McAvoy that Tillinghast had made a confession of other and more serious offenses, but that all were outlawed.

Mr. Woodruff asserted yesterday that the offenses in question were felonies, not misdemeanors, and that they are not outlawed. He called attention particularly to the case of Eichner vs. the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, tried in May, 1904, and asserted that Tillinghast, who was a juror in that case, had been guilty of receiving bribes from an agent of the company.

Mr. Lockwood, as well as Assistant District Attorney Smyth, who investigated the matter previously, has been unable to find any binding legal proof of the offense referred to by Mr. Woodruff.

NEW WORD PYROGRAPHY BY GENERAL BINGHAM

The Reporters Cause Him to Add to His Bright Lexicon.

BARS CLOSE-RANGE ROASTS

Nobody [Thump] Can Go Into His Office and Tell Him How to Run the Police [Thump.]

Commissioner Bingham's lexicon of Mulberry Street idioms was embellished yesterday with another expletive. It was evoked by questions of the reporters. Gen. Bingham was asked about changes of doormen to be made in certain precincts. The Commissioner blazed up in a moment.

"Hell's delight!" he exclaimed, glowering fiercely at his interrogators. "I can't be bothered with all these little matters. That's not what I'm here for. Why do you come to me with such foolish questions?"

And the General banged his desk with his fist.

Gen. Bingham frowned while the reporters jotted down his latest bon mot. Deputy Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, standing behind his chief, beamed with satisfaction while the Commissioner went on to warn his questioners that he intended running his office as he pleased, and that newspapers were wasting energy in trying to formulate his policies. One of the reporters had asked a trying question about the traffic squad:

"Now stop right there," said the Commissioner, holding up his right hand palm outward and then bringing down his clenched fist with a bang upon his desk as he set his jaws and gazed coldly at the newspaper men. "I won't stand for that. And I won't be criticised right here in my office by any one. The newspaper men can't come here and tell me how to run this department. I won't have anybody coming here and telling me what to do. You can roast me on the outside all you want to. That's your business. But I won't have it here."

The Commissioner raised his voice and half started out of his seat. He continued to pound his desk.

"I'll throw such a person out of this office. I will. I mean it. I don't care who he is. I'm doing things here on the square, [bang on the desk,] and [bang] I'm [bang] the most [bang] independent [bang] man [bang] that ever [bang] was [bang] here." [Bang.]

The group of reporters began to manifest signs of dissolution under the constant banging and didn't venture many more questions immediately. When he had concluded the Commissioner stopped banging and leaned back in his chair. He thought a moment and then his wrath again arose:

"Say," he growled, lowering his eyebrows, his eyes gleaming with anger, "they can have my [here he snapped his fingers to illustrate what he meant] any time they want it, but while I'm here I'll run things to suit myself." The snap of the fingers was evidently intended to indicate his resignation.

"I want to say this, too," he added, as he started to thump his desk again. "The [thump] Governor [thump] and [thump] the Mayor [thump] are the [thump] only [thump] men I'll [thump] report to." [Thump.]

Then the Commissioner settled far down in his chair, grabbed his pipe, and lighted it. It was then that the reporter asked him about the doorman. When the Commissioner had made his vociferous reply the newspaper men made notes of his remarks. They all put down "H. D." Then they disappeared, with the Commissioner still glowering.

DOCTOR DIES OF MORPHINE.

Drake Takes an Overdose in Trying to Overcome Neuralgic Attack.

Dr. William F. Drake died early yesterday morning in his apartments in Euclid Hall, Eighty-fifth Street and Broadway, of morphine poisoning. At the time that he took the morphine he was suffering intensely from facial neuralgia, but there is nothing to show that he intended to end his life. For some months he had suffered severe attacks of pain, and had at times gone to his old friend, Dr. Sinclair K. Royle, 105 West Seventy-sixth Street, but had not been regularly under his care.

Dr. Drake was 39 years old, and a graduate of New York University of the class of '89. He was a general practitioner, and until recently had an office at 100 Central Park West. He was an examiner for the Prudential Life Insurance Company, and was connected with the Masons and other fraternal organizations.

A FIST BLOW KILLS.

Tunnel Engineer Hit a Laborer Who Invaded His Shanty.

Ferdinand Mundo, a laborer, employed on the work of constructing the Pennsylvania Railroad tunnel under the East River, entered a stationary engine shanty on the dock at East Thirty-third Street yesterday afternoon to get a drink of water. He was told by Frederick McAssey, the engineer, to get out, as it was against orders to permit the workmen to enter the shanty.

Mundo refused to leave, and in the dispute that followed McAssey struck Mundo behind the left ear with his fist. Mundo fell to the floor and never regained consciousness. He was dead when Dr. Hunt of Bellevue Hospital arrived and examined him.

Another laborer notified Policeman Ryan of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, who arrested McAssey. On the way to the station the prisoner told Ryan that he struck Mundo because he thought the man was about to pull a stiletto. Assistant District Attorney Cardozo was notified and he examined a number of witnesses at the police station. Coroner Acritelli will hold an inquest.

TO ASK FOR DEUEL'S REMOVAL ON MARCH 23

The Justice, Back from Florida, Says He'll Fight.

GANS TO PUSH THE CASE

To Represent Jerome, Osborne, and Shepard—Charges Based on Hapgood Trial Evidence.

A motion for the removal of Justice Joseph M. Deuel from his office as Justice of Special Sessions will be made in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on March 23 by ex-Assistant District Attorney Howard S. Gans, as attorney for the three petitioners, District Attorney Jerome, James W. Osborne, and Edward M. Shepard.

Justice Deuel, fresh from a vacation trip to Florida and looking much improved in health, met Mr. Gans yesterday afternoon in the Special Sessions Justices' chamber in the Criminal Courts Building and accepted service in the proceedings. Having received copies of the petition, the charges backing it, and the accompanying affidavits, Justice Deuel said that he had no objection to the publication of all the documents. He announced his intention of taking immediate steps to prepare his defense. Who his counsel will be could not be learned yesterday, but it was generally understood that Edward Lauterbach, counsel for Town Topics in many cases and a friend of Col. Mann, will be one of his advisers.

The charges made against Justice Deuel by the petitioners relate the circumstances of his employment as City Magistrate and Justice of Special Sessions, together with the fact that the accusations against him are based on his testimony in the Hapgood trial. Then they continue:

What the Charges Allege.

I.—That since July 1, 1895, and for some time prior thereto, Joseph M. Deuel has carried on various business enterprises, among others the business of owning, managing, editing, printing, canvassing for, and selling certain printed publications know as Town Topics, The Smart Set, and "Fads and Fancies," and the business of owning, managing, directing, and controlling certain corporations known as the Town Topics Publishing Company, the Ess Ess Publishing Company, The Smart Set Publishing Company, and the Printers and Publishers' Realty Company.

II.—That Joseph M. Deuel willfully carried on the said business enterprises, well knowing he was forbidden by law to carry on the same or any of them.

III.—That the Town Topics Publishing Company was engaged in the publication and sale of a certain weekly paper known as Town Topics, wherein there was repeatedly and continuously published and printed abusive, salacious, scurrilous, scandalous, and libelous matter, as Joseph M. Deuel well knew.

IV.—That it was one of the functions performed by Joseph M. Deuel in publishing and managing Town Topics and managing and controlling the Town Topics Publishing Company to read the matter so published and so to edit, phrase, and modify the matter proposed to be published as to decrease the risk and dangers of civil or criminal liability which the authors thereof and the said corporation were incurring or might incur by reason of the publication of such matter.

Town Topics Methods.

V.—That it was part of the business carried on by the said corporation and by divers persons associated therewith, to wit, William D. Mann, Charles Stokes Wayne, Moses Ellis Wooster, Robert A. Irving, and divers others, to solicit, urge, coerce, and compel the payment of large sums of money to them or to the said companies by persons of supposed means or social standing in the community, by means of overt or covert threats that unless they would pay money as loans to persons connected with such enterprises, or as subscription to the stock thereof, or in payment of the subscription price of the publication thereof, or for advertisements in the said publication, the Town Topics Publishing Company would cause to be published in Town Topics matter derogatory to the person refusing to pay; and a further part of the business of the said corporation and of the persons engaged therein was to induce persons to pay to them large sums of money upon statements or intimations that if such payments were made the Town Topics Publishing Company would cause to be published in Town Topics matter in praise of or favorable comment upon the person so paying, all of which Joseph M. Deuel at all of the times herein mentioned either knew or should have known, and by the exercise of due care and diligence could have known.

Justice Olmsted of Special Sessions was present when the papers were served on Justice Deuel, and acted, for the time being, as his counsel.

The petitioners act in this matter merely as lawyers and citizens. Mr. Gans was asked by them to become their attorney in the matter and to prepare the charges because he was instrumental in removing ex-Justice Bolte from office.

Only a notice that a motion will be made has been filed with the court so far. The full papers in the case will not be filed until March 23. That the court will take immediate action by appointing a referee may be taken for granted. Until the charges were made public yesterday, it had been expected that Mr. Jerome and his fellow-petitioners would move the disbarment of Justice Deuel, as success in such a proceeding would be logically followed by his removal from the bench. Why it was decided to appeal directly for his removal could not be learned yesterday, as Mr. Jerome had gone to Lakeville to stay over Sunday. The proceedings are taken under Section 1,416 of the amended Greater New York Charter, which relates to the qualifications of Justices of Special Sessions. The last part of this section reads:

> No such Justice shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office; nor shall any such Justice hold any other public office, or carry on any business, or practice as an attorney or counselor at law in any court in this State, or act as referee or receiver; but each such Justice shall devote his whole time and capacity, so far as the public interests demand, to the duties of his office.

It has been said repeatedly by friends of Justice Deuel that, under his interpretation of this section, he considers himself innocent of any wrongdoing. He and his advisers, it was said again yesterday, pin their faith to the modifying passage "so far as the public interests demand," holding them to apply to the entire rest of the sentence. On this interpretation of the section, it was said, Justice Deuel will base his defense, without any attempt to deny or explain away his connection with The Town Topics and kindred publications.

It was impossible to learn last night whether Justice Deuel will take his seat as Presiding Justice in Special Sessions on Monday, as the schedule prepared by the Board of Justices provides.

TO CUT STOCK SALES TAX.

Prentice Offers Bill, Saying That Revenue Is Excessive.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 2.—Because the tax on stock transfers is raising twice the amount of money its advocates expected, Assemblyman Prentice of New York introduced to-day a bill to cut the rate from $2 to $1 a 100 shares.

Wall Street interests are responsible for the bill. Last year Prentice was against the proposition to tax stock transfers, and he intends to make a fight for his present measure. He says the stock transfer tax already amounts to one-quarter for the entire State tax levy. Prentice said:

"When the bill was being considered last year it was estimated that it would produce $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 a year. For the eight months ended on Jan. 31 the tax amounted to $4,132,000. At this rate it will amount for the first year to $6,198,000.

"It was argued last year that the capital invested in connection with the business of the Stock Exchanges amounted to $300,000,000 or $400,000,000, and that this capital was substantially untaxed. Even admitting that this argument is sound, it is evident that the rate of tax, which is nearly 2 per cent. on the capital, is greater than it should be.

"I believe that the stock tax law should be repealed, but even admitting the arguments of those who favor the tax, it is apparent that the tax is larger than necessary to raise the required money, and that no sound argument can be advanced for maintaining the tax at the present rate of $2 a hundred shares."

A GALLANT SUICIDE.

"Here Goes, Lady," He Said, Bowing, and Then Leaped Off Pier.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 2.—"Well, good-bye, lady; here goes."

Grasping his hat and bowing courteously to Mrs. H. J. Sickel of Philadelphia and her son Gates, at the extreme end of Ocean Pier late this afternoon, a tall, carefully attired stranger said this, put his foot upon the railing and bounded over into the sea.

Only Mrs. Sickel and her son witnessed the suicide. They had gone for a stroll to the sea end of the pier. The stranger was slightly ahead of them, and there were no others near. The man stepped up on a seat and sat down upon the rail without apparent regard for his danger. Mrs. Sickel, becoming nervous, started to walk away. Then the man courteously saluted her, poised on the rail for just an instant, and sprang far out. Leaving her son to watch the place where he had sunk, Mrs. Sickel ran for aid. Several laborers responded, and a search with a boat followed. It was without result.

No one about the pier knew the man. Mrs. Sickel says he was above the ordinary height, had gray or white hair, and was apparently 65 years old. His clothing was dark. The distinguishing feature of his attire was a large white sombrero. He walked as though slightly lame.

JUDGE'S PUBLIC CONFESSION.

Admits He Was Intoxicated and Promises Not to Do It Again.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 2.—Associate Justice of the Supreme Court John C. Anderson, in a letter to the editor of The Christian Advocate, published at Birmingham, acknowledges that he was intoxicated on the occasion of the funeral of the late Chief Justice McClellan, at Athens, as charged by Dr. Ellis, the editor of that paper, who demanded his resignation and that of two other State officials. The paper stated that all three had disgraced the high positions they held. In his letter Judge Anderson says:

"My mortification has been as keen as man could feel over this unfortunate folly, and your article has but added to my remorse and humiliation. For twenty years, with but few exceptions, I have led a life of almost total abstinence. My young manhood was almost blighted by the whisky curse, but by the help of God I have been saved thus far from falling into the depths of ruin, though I have tottered upon the brink a few times. I have been on the bench eleven years, and have never been under the influence of liquor when discharging the slightest duty.

"I promise, by the help of God, to commit no act of folly in the future that can reflect on me as a citizen or bring in question the reputation of an honorable office bestowed upon me by the good people of my native State."

CHICAGO'S REIGN OF CRIME.

Alderman Dunn Says the City Is Ripe for Lynch Law.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 2.—The "crime" situation has reached a climax in Chicago, and present conditions cannot last much longer. Hold-ups are increasing, and crime generally flourishes.

Alderman W. P. Dunn says the city is "ripe for lynch law," and predicts that unless the Police Department is reorganized and strengthened there will be a whirlwind of wrath on the part of its citizens compared with which the present law-and-order agitation will be "like a Summer breeze to a cyclone."

"Within the last week," he said to-day, "three policemen have come to me and told me of terrible assaults that have occurred on Chicago's streets of which not a word has reached the public. The books in which the reports are made are kept under lock and key, and policemen are threatened with severe consequences if they permit knowledge of these happenings to leak out. Yet the crimes that do get into the newspapers through the hard work of the police reporters are enough to make the public stand aghast at the situation."

RUSSIA LOSING HOPE OF SWAYING KAISER

Official Organ Admits Gravity of Algeciras Situation.

GERMANY IS READY FOR WAR

France Could Be Quickly Invaded—Paris Government Establishes a Council of National Defense.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cables. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 2.—The official organ, which declared a few days ago that the Morocco conflict would assuredly be settled by mutual concessions, publishes an article to-day showing that a settlement is possible only if Germany gives way on the police question.

The reasons for this volte face are unexplained, but it is easy to understand why the Russian Government, realizing how impossible it is for France to abandon her position, which, as to-day's article points out, has obtained the approval of all the powers except Germany, should try to influence Germany toward concession.

The official organ gilds the pill by a flattering reference to the Kaiser. The redundance of its praises, however, gives the impression that little confidence is felt by the Government here regarding the acceptance of Russia's advice in Berlin.

On the Bourse to-day fours fell to 77.

ALGECIRAS, March 2.—The seventh week of the conference is closing without bringing the delegates in sight of the end of their labors. The deadlock on the State Bank question continues, with little prospect of an understanding between France and Germany.

After the sitting of the Drafting Committee to-day a despondent feeling was noticeable in official and diplomatic circles, especially among the French, Germans, and Spaniards.

The idea is gaining ground that efforts will yet be made by representatives of neutral powers to stave off a rupture on the State Bank question by bringing on for discussion the grave question of the police in the hope that at the eleventh hour a compromise will be effected by mutual concessions.

The next meeting of the conference is awaited with much anxiety.

PARIS, March 2.—The Journal publishes the results of an investigation made by its correspondents along the German frontier. The paper says the Germans do not desire war, but the German army is ready, and its superior mobilization plans permit a rapid invasion of French territory.

The Journal counsels the abandonment of French reliance on fortifications and the adoption of the German plan of a rapid invasion of the enemy's territory.

In the Chamber of Deputies to-day War Minister Etienne, replying to criticisms of the army expenses, said that, being a civilian, he was obliged to depend on the judgment of military experts, who maintained that the fortifications of France were amply sufficient to defend her Eastern frontier. He also announced that a Council of National Defense would be constituted on lines similar to the British Committee of Imperial Defense. Continuing, the Minister said:

"Our strongholds are in good condition. The rumors of defective supplies are unfounded. All the necessary measures have been taken. The decree establishing the Council of National Defense is now in the hands of the Premier, and the Supreme Commander has already been chosen. He is an officer of incontestable ability and possesses the full confidence of the Army."

ST. PETERSBURG, March 2.—According to advices received at the Chancelleries here Russia's representations at Berlin with a view to bringing about an arrangement between Germany and France have not been effective.

It is believed here that President Roosevelt is acting in the matter through Ambassador Speck von Sternburg, and the impression prevails that the President may in a final emergency be asked to arbitrate.

CONFESSES MINERS' PLOTS.

Another of the Men in Jail at Boise Makes a Statement.

BOISE, Idaho, March 2.—Steven Adams has made a full confession in the Steunenberg assassination case. The confession is far more detailed and sweeping than that of Orchard in regard to the movements of the conspirators.

The confession has not yet been made public.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—It is learned that a San Francisco mystery has been solved in the confession made by Harry Orchard at Boisé.

In 1904 Frederick W. Bradley, Superintendent of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan Mines, was living here. On the morning of Nov. 17 Bradley opened his front door to step into the street on the way to his office. As he was opening the door he ignited a match to light a cigar. Instantly there was a terrific explosion. Bradley was so severely hurt that for a time it was feared he would die. A gas grate had been leaking in his flat, and the only plausible theory advanced at the time was that the explosion was due to the accumulation of gas which became ignited by the lighted match.

Orchard in his confession says that Bradley was the victim of a bomb outrage.

Both Dead by Niece's Attack.

Josephine Terranova, the seventeen-year-old girl now in the Tombs for the killing of her uncle, Gaetano Riggio, must now face another charge, as her aunt, Concetto Riggio, died yesterday in Fordham Hospital of wounds inflicted by her. The Riggios lived at 110 East 220th Street, William's Bridge. The girl admitted killing Riggio.

A Buffalo Elevator Burned.

BUFFALO, March 2.—The Wheeler Elevator on Buffalo River near the corner of Michigan and Ganson Streets, was destroyed by fire to-night. The loss on the building and its contents is estimated at $175,000.

HOWARD GOULD LOSES.

Verdict Against Him for $67,000—Castle Gould Plans Abandoned.

MINEOLA, L. I., March 2.—The suit brought by Henry Murdock, a contractor, of Manhattan, against Howard Gould to recover commissions on a contract at Castle Gould, went to the jury a little before 4 o'clock this afternoon and two hours later the jury found for the plaintiff to the extent of $65,000, with $2,000 added for counsel fees. Mr. Murdock sued for $120,000. The court allowed sixty days for appeal.

Jeremiah H. Kennedy, a supervising engineer of Manhattan, and Charles J. Bogart, the Superintendent of Castle Gould, testified for the defense. Mr. Kennedy supervised the work on the stables and condemned some of it. He admitted that all defects were corrected by Murdock.

In the course of Charles J. Bogart's testimony it was said that the Goulds had abandoned the idea of erecting the castle, that they had no idea of going on with the work, but would build on altogether different plans.

BOY BURNED TO DEATH.

Firemen Didn't Know They Threw His Body Out with Charred Bedding.

John Dent, the twelve-year-old son of Mrs. Rose Dent, who lived on the second floor of the two-story brick cottage at 24 Cleveland Place, Brooklyn, lost his life in a fire that started at that address early last evening. The boy was not missed for some time after the fire was out. His body was found four hours later under some rubbish the firemen had thrown into the street.

Mrs. Dent lived on the second floor. She has one other child, Hattie, a little girl of 3 years. Shortly after 7 o'clock a lamp exploded, setting fire to the tablecloth and bedding. John was asleep on the bed at the time.

Mrs. Dent caught up Hattie and dropped her from the window, jumping after her. The child's back was injured, while the mother sprained her ankle. Neighbors took them in and cared for them, while some one sent in an alarm and a call for a doctor. The firemen made short work of the blaze, throwing the half-burned and inflammable material from the windows.

After a long time John was missed, and search was made for him. At 11 o'clock the police began to turn over the half-burned mattress and burned clothing. They found the boy's body beneath them.

MRS. POILLON CAUSES ARREST

Says Contractor Annoyed Her—Had Followed Her for Years.

Mrs. Katherine Poillon, who recently brought suit for breach of promise against W. Gould Brokaw, in the trial of which Attorney Carl Fischer-Hansen acted in an advisory capacity for the Brokaw family, caused the arrest last night of Arthur K. Ross, who said he was a railroad contractor of Yonkers. Ross was locked up in the Tenderloin Station on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Poillon, who lives at the Bartow Hotel, in East Twenty-seventh Street, says she was dining last evening at the Fifth Avenue Hotel with her sister, Charlotte Poillon. While they were at table Ross entered the dining room and sat down. When Mrs. Poillon and her sister left and started up Broadway Ross followed them. He walked within ten feet of the two women until he reached Twenty-eighth Street, when he passed them. Mrs. Poillon said he remarked:

"You're trying to get money from Carl Fischer-Hansen, but I'll see you don't get it."

Mrs. Poillon paid no attention to the remark, but walked with her sister to Twenty-ninth Street, where she stopped Policeman Carroll and told him about it. Carroll arrested Ross.

When Ross was arraigned before Sergt. McCarthy at the station he walked over to Capt. Hodgins and exclaimed:

"This woman is trying to get money from Carl Fischer-Hansen. She's trying to do him."

When Ross was locked up Mrs. Poillon said:

"That man has been following me for two years. I thought it about time to put a stop to his menacing actions. I had a similar experience with him a few nights ago, when I dined at the Victoria Hotel."

Ross will be arraigned in Jefferson Market Court this morning. Mrs. Poillon says she will appear against him. Late last night he was bailed in $500.

NEW DIPHTHERIA CASE.

Four Have Been Found in One Ward at Bellevue Hospital.

A fourth case of diphtheria has been discovered in Ward 31 of Bellevue Hospital. Seven-year-old Domenico Aristide of 215 Sullivan Street, who was removed to Bellevue from St. Vincent's Hospital on Feb. 17, supposedly suffering from spinal meningitis, is now in the Reception Hospital at Bellevue Hospital ill of diphtheria. His condition is said to be critical.

Two other children and Dr. I. O. Woodruff, who had been attending the three little patients, are down with the disease, and fears are entertained that other cases may yet be discovered in the ward, which has been under a strict quarantine since Sunday, when it first became known that there was diphtheria in the ward.

According to the hospital records Dr. C. J. Harbeck, one of the physicians in the Medical Division, admitted all three children to the institution. He diagnosed two of the cases as spinal meningitis and the third as pneumonia. It is now believed that the two children removed to the Reception Hospital last Sunday contracted the disease from the Aristide boy. He was admitted to the hospital four days before the other two were received.

FIREMEN IN HAIL OF BULLETS.

Fought Fire Amid Exploding Cartridges in an Arsenal.

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—Fire in the artillery building of the Frankford Arsenal to-day endangered the lives of the firemen, who fought the flames while Krag-Jorgensen cartridges, shell fuses, and other varieties of ammunition exploded around them, sending missiles in all directions and filling the air with suffocating smoke and gases.

When the firemen reached the top floor of the three-story building they were forced to retreat by the overwhelming volume of noxious gases and the fusillade of bullets. By crawling upon the floor, however, they succeeded in reaching the portion of the room which was in flames and finally extinguished the blaze.

J. R. WALSH ARRESTED FOR FALSE BANK RETURN

Federal Warrant Charges Wrong Personal Use of $3,000,000.

HE SAYS HE'LL EXPLAIN ALL

Thinks Full Investigation of Chicago National's Affairs Will End Case—Gives $50,000 Bail.

CHICAGO, March 2.—John R. Walsh, President of the Chicago National Bank, which closed its doors on Dec. 18, 1905, was arrested to-day on a Federal warrant charging him with violation of the National banking laws in making false returns to the Controller of the Currency and with conversion to his own use of bank funds amounting to $3,000,000. He was released after giving $50,000 bonds. Hearing was set before United States Commissioner Foote on March 10, at 10 o'clock.

The complaint alleges in specific terms that on Nov. 18, 1905, the Chicago National Bank, of which Walsh was President, transmitted to the Controller of the Currency a statement in which "the said John R. Walsh unlawfully made certain false entries to the effect that at the close of business on the ninth day of November the amount of loans and discounts of the said banking association on which the officers and Directors thereof were then liable either as payer or indorser was $245,000, whereas in truth the amount of such loans and discounts was $3,000,000, and another false entry to the effect that the amount of loans and discounts of the said association of which the officers and Directors were not liable as payers or indorsers was $10,658,226, whereas in truth the amount of such loans and discounts on which officers and Directors were not liable was much smaller, namely, $7,500,000."

Another section of the complaint alleges that Walsh had in his possession funds and moneys of the bank amounting to $3,000,000, "with intent to injure and defraud" the bank. The $3,000,000 mentioned in this section of the complaint is, however, identical with the amount specified as loaned to officers of the bank. It is further alleged that John R. Walsh and John M. Smyth and William Best, Directors of the bank, "and other persons too numerous to mention," unlawfully misapplied this money by converting it to the personal and private use of John R. Walsh without any proper authority whatever.

The arrest of Walsh came as the result of the last examination of the books of the bank made by Special Bank Examiner Arthur L. Curry, sent from Washington. The data furnished to the Treasury Department in Washington were sent to District Attorney Morrison in this city with instructions to take proper steps.

Mr. Walsh was found at his office. Friends asked that the arrest be not made public for a few hours, because of some financial matters that might be affected. Three times a respite was granted. A short time after 2 o'clock, however, Deputy Marshal Middleton refused to wait longer and took Walsh to the office of United States Marshal Ames. After two hours Walsh was released under bonds of $50,000, furnished by the Illinois Surety Company. Walsh made the following statement:

"The charge, in effect, is that as President of the bank I signed a report to the Controller, which report, it is now alleged, was false. The report in question ordinarily would have been signed by the cashier, but by reason of his temporary absence it was signed by me as a matter of course. The report referred to, however, undoubtedly was correct in every particular.

"These facts will be clearly established by the evidence if the case reaches a stage where evidence is produced. I believe, however, that a more thorough investigation of the facts by the Department of Justice and a comparison of the report with the books of the bank will convince the department that its action is uncalled for and cannot be sustained."

SPRINGFIELD NOW QUIET.

Gov. Pattison Suffers a Relapse Owing to Worry Over the Riots.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, March 2.—This city is quiet to-night after two nights of rioting and incendiary fires. The troops, who are still on duty, were drenched by a rainfall to-night.

Police court was in continuous session during the day, and a number of rioters were heavily fined.

Martin Davis, the wounded brakeman, is still alive.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 2.—Gov. Pattison to-day suffered a relapse, the fourth since he assumed the Gubernatorial office, and his friends are again alarmed over his condition. The setback is the result of worry over the riots at Springfield. Mrs. Pattison to-day announced that she had canceled all invitations and would remain out of society until her husband rallied and passed the danger point.

The Governor was unable to-day to sign the Appropriation bills passed by the Legislature and the salaries of all State employes will not be paid for two weeks at least. The State Departments are without funds.

During the early part of the week and, in fact, for the last ten days the Governor had shown improvement, on several days being able to sit up for some time, but Dr. Wilson issued no very encouraging statements.

HEAVY TRAIN RUNS AWAY.

Goes Three Miles and Then Crashes Into Cars.

HINTON, West Va., March 2.—Because of failure of air brakes two engines and thirty-four loaded coal cars ran away for three miles to-day on the Loop Creek branch of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.

They finally crashed into twenty empty cars at Thurmond, wrecking thirteen coal cars, demolishing both locomotives and killing Engineer M. A. Perkins. The others of the crew jumped and escaped with severe bruises.

HEIR BORN TO LORD SUFFOLK.

Mother Is the Youngest Daughter of Levi Z. Leiter.

LONDON, March 2.—The Countess of Suffolk and Berkshire, daughter of the late L. Z. Leiter of Washington and sister of Lady Curzon of Kedleston, gave birth to a son this evening at Charlton Park, Malmesbury, the family seat.

THE LONGWORTHS BACK.

Start for Washington After a Few Hours in Tampa.

TAMPA, Fla., March 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth arrived on the steamer Mascotte from Havana at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The steamer encountered rough weather Thursday, and Mrs. Longworth suffered from seasickness. A large crowd met them at the pier.

They had a drive over the city as the guests of Collector of Customs MacFarland, and dined at a Spanish café in Ybor City, leaving at 8:40 on the regular Atlantic Coast Line train in the private Pullman car Grassmere for Washington.

RATE RETALIATION IN OHIO.

Roads Apply 2-Cent Rate—Clergymen and All Others Must Pay.

CHICAGO, March 2.—At a meeting to-day of the passenger officials of the railroads operating in Ohio it was decided unanimously to put the two-cents-a-mile passenger rate in effect there to the exclusion of all other rates within Ohio. This is obedience to a recent enactment. The one-thousand-mile mileage book will be sold at $30, as at present, with a rebate to $20, provided the book is used only by the purchaser.

The book will be good in Ohio, but it will not be sold there unless the attorneys inform the railroads that it will be legal. The reduction of all fares to a two-cent basis will do away with convention rates, excursion rates, charity rates, passes, and clergymen's permits within Ohio.

EDWARD VII.-ROOSEVELT GIFT.

Virginia Church Has Bible and Lecturn from King and President.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President Roosevelt has joined with King Edward in a gift to the Old Bruton Parish Church, at Williamsburg, Va.

When Harry St. George Tucker, President of the Jamestown Exposition Company, was abroad a few months ago, King Edward gave him a handsome Bible for the church. To-day Mr. Tucker called on the President, and, while talking to him of exposition matters, told him of the gift of King Edward. The President immediately offered to provide a lecturn on which the Bible might rest.

On behalf of the congregation, Mr. Tucker accepted the President's offer.

MAN AND WIFE DIE TOGETHER.

Supposed to Have Made a Suicide Compact—No Reason Known.

John Schlemker, 50 years old, who kept a harness store in Bergenline Avenue, North Bergen, N. J., was found dead in the apartments back of the store last evening. His wife lay dying beside him. She died soon after being discovered. They are believed to have agreed to kill themselves. Beside them was found a vial which had contained some darkish liquid, the nature of which has not been ascertained.

Herman Ruddy entered the store last evening, to get some harness which he had left to be repaired. No one appeared, so he went back into the rooms in the rear. He found everything in order. In the bedroom lay the couple. Schlemker was already dead.

They leave two daughters, both married, who live in Union Hill and Guttenberg. They said last night that they knew of no reason why the old couple should have killed themselves.

ST. PAUL PAPERS INDICTED.

Must Answer Under Old Law for Printing Details of a Hanging.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, March 2.—The Grand Jury this evening returned indictments against the three St. Paul daily newspapers, The Pioneer Press, The Dispatch, and The News, for reporting the recent hanging of William Williams. The John Day Smith law forbids publication of details of a hanging. The newspapers are permitted simply to announce the fact of the execution.

The papers are indicted as corporations, will answer to-morrow, and probably will be fined. The cases will be taken to the Supreme Court for a test. The statute has been in force nearly ten years, but this is the first time the newspapers have been dealt with for violating it.

JOHNSON TO FIGHT ON.

Mayor Says Corporations Are Hurting the Republican Party.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, March 2.—Mayor Johnson says the Metzger Street Railway bill was defeated because the Republican Party is saddled by corporation interests.

"The Republicans," he said to-day, "will kill themselves in State politics, just as they have here in Cleveland, by allowing corporations to hang around their necks like the Old Man of the Sea about that of Sindbad the Sailor. To change the committee Chairman once in a while is not enough. The party must rid itself of corporation influence."

Mayor Johnson declared that another measure similar to the Metzger bill providing for 3-cent fare street railroads in Ohio would be introduced before the Legislature adjourned.

BLIZZARDS IN THE WEST.

Worst Storms of the Winter in Colorado and Nebraska.

CHICAGO, March 2.—A severe blizzard raged to-day in Western Kansas, extending to the Colorado line. A strong wind drifted the snow and played havoc with telegraph and telephone wires.

Six and a half inches of snow fell in Denver yesterday, accompanied by a high wind, making it the worst storm of the Winter. Trains in Colorado and Wyoming were delayed from one to three hours.

Dispatches from Western and Northern Nebraska say the worst storm of the Winter has been raging for twenty-four hours.

TORNADO AT MERIDIAN, 33 REPORTED KILLED

Business Section of Mississippi City Swept Into Ruin.

RESCUERS WORK IN DARKNESS

Rain-Drenched Crowds Search for Bodies Among the Debris with Torches and Lanterns.

MERIDIAN, Miss., March 2.—At 6:30 o'clock this evening a tornado from the south struck Meridian, sweeping directly through the business centre of the town, and during the twenty minutes it spent in passing, destroyed approximately $5,000,000 in property.

It took the lives of perhaps thirteen white persons and twenty negroes.

At midnight the town is in darkness, the telegraph wires are all down, and the only communication with the outside world is over the long-distance telephone to New Orleans and Mobile.

Every effort is being made by the authorities, aided by volunteer searching parties, to ascertain the loss of life, but owing to the darkness, the pouring rain, and the débris filling the streets, it has thus far been impossible to make much headway, or even to discover with any degree of certainty the destruction of property.

Several fires started in the ruins, but the rain and the fire company together succeeded in quelling the flames.

Among those known to be dead are

The list of the dead and the wounded is now partially prepared.

The dead are Mackey Slaughter, wife, and daughter; Mrs. Singleton, Claude Williams, A. T. McInnis, A. Mobile, an Ohio conductor; William R. Nelson, City Marshal, and William Johnston.

Among the wounded are Capt. Charles Elmira, W. J. Woodside, T. H. Brown, Ernest Bennett, Frank Woodruff, Will Yarborough, and A. C. Morrison.

Several of these are fatally hurt. Nearly all were taken from the debris of the Meyer Neville hardware store.

Two dead men were taken from the Johnston Transfer Company, but they have not been identified. Another is missing.

It is reported that in the negro district fully a score of lives were lost and that several houses were burned, the inmates being cremated under the debris.

Among the chief buildings destroyed were:

Meyer Neville Hardware Company's building, in Front Street; seven stories. Loss, building, $100,000; stock, $150,000.

Grand Avenue Hotel; brick, four stories, Front Street and Grand Avenue. Loss, building and furnishings, $50,000.

Thomas Lyle Wholesale Grocery Company's building; four stories. Loss, building, $35,000; stock, $40,000.

Elmira Restaurant; two stories. Loss, $10,000.

Johnston Transfer Company, two stories. Loss, $10,000.

Culpepper Hotel, Front Street and Grand Avenue, opposite Grand Avenue Hotel, three stories. Loss, $15,000.

Young Men's Christian Association Building, two stories. Loss, $15,000.

Freight depot, New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad, partially destroyed, freight damaged. Amount unknown.

Probable damage to electric lighting plant, amount not known.

Pearce Compress, damaged by fire and wind; loss unknown.

Many smaller buildings and some residences in the outskirts damaged to an amount not known.

The tornado struck the town from the south, coming north through Front Street, and going directly through the heart of the business section, then verging over the east side, where a number of the smaller residences are located. Barely twenty minutes elapsed from the first moment of knowledge of danger until the storm was dying away in the distance.

Dusk had just fallen, and the streets, particularly Front Street, where the storm spent its fiercest force, was lighted, and the business day was just coming to an end. In a short quarter of an hour the new brick buildings on both sides of Front Street, for nearly two blocks, were wrecked, while a swath a block wide and fourteen squares long was cut from end to end of the town, in which practically everything was damaged or altogether leveled.

The town was in absolute darkness, and a torrent of rain began to deluge the entire city. For a time absolute confusion reigned, and the wildest reports were sent out over the long-distance telephone from an office at the outskirts of the city. The telegraph wires were tested and found to be out of business. Committees were hastily organized from the volunteer workers, and at once began work.

The tornado had first struck the corner of Grand Avenue and Front Street, after tearing down the smaller buildings further out. The Culpepper Hotel had been partially wrecked. Then Grand Avenue Hotel, an old brick structure dating to ante-bellum times, had crumbled; the residents barely escaping from the lower floors, although it is supposed that half a dozen inmates, guests or servants, are buried within.

Adjoining this hotel was the Meyer Neville hardware store, one door further north up Front Street. It is seven stories high, a modern structure, and when the tornado struck it was just being emptied of the clerks and working force. How many persons were buried in it are not known, but it is certain that the bookkeeper is now within the office, which is completely closed in.

The other buildings listed as completely destroyed were all in this block.

By 7:15 o'clock men with torches and lanterns were climbing over the débris in this part of the town. One rescue party was working on the Meyer Neville Building. Another was busy in the Grand Central Hotel. The rain and wind began to slacken a little, but did not cease altogether.

Reports began to come in from other parts of the city, indicating a loss of life and property much greater than is now known to be the case.

By 10 o'clock a better view of the situation was obtainable. It was found that the Elmira Restaurant and the Johnston Transfer Company's stables in the narrow street between Front Street and the Northeastern Railroad tracks had been wrecked.

Mayor Rivers has called for the entire number of able-bodied men he can find, and Chief of Police Bloodsworth has put his force to work.

The local militia company has been ordered under arms and is expected to be on duty within a few hours.

Meridian, which has a population of about 15,000, is the most important manufacturing centre in Mississippi. According to the census of 1900 its railroad machine shops, cotton mills, cottonseed oil mills, lumber mills, and other industries had an output of [illegible] a year. It is the centre of a great cotton-growing region. The Queen and Crescent route and Southern Railway run through the city. It is about ninety miles east of Jackson.

Along the business streets of the city were buildings of five and six stories. Meridian was more like an Eastern city than any other in Mississippi.

MARCH 1906

MUTUAL'S TRUSTEES EXEMPT FROM QUESTIONS

Requisition Made After Fish Resigned Is Made Public.

FIGHT AGAINST HIM BEGINS

His Friends Say Harriman in Return Will Be Asked About Loans of Union Pacific Money.

The substitute requisition which William H. Truesdale and John W. Auchincloss, the remaining members of the Mutual Life's Investigating Committee, have sent to President Peabody of that company in the place of the famous dragnet requisition of Dec. 26, was made public yesterday at the Mutual's offices. In it all requests for information from the Trustees of the company are eliminated and no attempt is made to go into the relations between the Mutual's Trustees and the subsidiary companies. The committee merely reserves the right to submit such specific questions to individual Trustees as it may care to, after receiving a report from its accountants on their examination of the books.

The new requisition is sent in advance of any word from Joseph H. Choate, to whom a retainer as counsel was offered last week. He has been asked to accept the post from which Judges William G. Choate, Dill, and Herrick and Bainbridge Colby resigned when Stuyvesant Fish withdrew from the committee. President Peabody has further sent to all employes of the home office whose salaries are $2,000 or more a list of questions to be answered. This was given out with the committee's letter yesterday.

The New Requisition.

This is the letter:

Referring to your letter of the 13th instant regarding communication from our committee to Mr. Frederick Cromwell, "President Pro Tem," dated Dec. 26, 1906, in which was requested for the use of our committee information relative to a variety of matters pertaining to the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance Company:

Our committee has carefully noted your views as expressed in said letter, and the questions you raise as to the wisdom and desirability of undertaking to procure the information desired in the exact manner specified in our letter above referred to.

While it is not our purpose to in any manner or degree limit the extent or scope of our inquiries and investigation of the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, as defined in the resolutions appointing and empowering the committee, we recognize the force of your objections to the methods of procedure indicated in our letter, and will endeavor to meet your views in this respect so far as we feel that we can consistently do.

The accountants employed by our committee have been checking the books and accounts of the company for the past three months, and their work has to an extent been done for the purpose of checking and verifying certain of the figures and data called for in our letter of the above-named date. They advise us that they expect soon to make a report on certain of these matters. Therefore, should further information on these particular matters seem to be necessary or additional explanation of them seem desirable from any Trustee, officer, or employe of the company, we will at once make request therefor in such specific form as will enable you to procure it as fully and quickly as possible. With regard to certain other information called for in our letter of Dec. 26, our committee respectfully asks that each officer and employe in the general offices of the company who on the first day of October, 1905, was in its service and drawing a salary of $2,000 per annum or over, be requested to at once give information, so far as is in his power, on the matters and in the form indicated as set forth in Memorandum A, hereto attached.

Our committee further respectfully requests that a statement be furnished us showing the terms of the leases or contracts by which the company rents any portion of its office buildings in the City of New York to any officer or Trustee of the company or to any firm with which an officer or a Trustee of the company is a member, or to any corporation in which the company has an interest of any kind, or to any relative, or an officer, or a Trustee. Such statement to show the space occupied, rentals charged, whether same includes the care, heat, light, and repairs thereto, and whether such rentals, &c., are more or less than collected from other tenants for the same space, similarly located. Also whether such rentals are on a more or less favorable basis that the company in its accounts charges its rentals for the space occupied by its offices in said building. If any of these leases are on especially favorable terms to the lessees our committee would like to know who on the part of the company made them and in what respect the terms are unduly favorable.

Our committee would further like to have a statement showing separately for the calendar years 1904 and 1905 the gross receipts, rentals, and other income on account of the company's general office building, located between Nassau and William Streets, and how much of the gross rentals received were for the company's own offices. Also statement in such detail as same is readily available of the cost of the repairs, care, and operation of said building; also the net receipts therefrom.

We also desire a statement showing in fullest detail the losses if any to the company since Jan. 1, 1900, where such losses on any single transaction amounts to $10,000 or more on any purchase or sale of real estate or as result of a loan on same, and the names of the persons, firms, or corporations selling same to the company or arranging the loan thereon, amount paid therefor or loaned thereon by the company, and when sold, to whom sold, and for what amount. Also, who on behalf of the company authorized the purchase and sale of or loan on same. Also the same information in detail covering same period with regard to any securities purchased and sold by the company on which a loss of above amount or over was sustained, and in addition, if the company now holds any securities purchased since Jan. 1, 1900, the market value of which is less by $10,000 than the price paid therefor, we would like to have that stated.

Our committee would also like to inquire whether a full record is and has been kept showing the purchases and sales of all securities by and on behalf of the company, the dates of the purchases and sale thereof, the parties from whom bought or to whom sold, prices paid or received, and whether such record is in shape so that any Trustee of the company or any officer whose duties may require it can at any and all reasonable times fully inspect same and learn therefrom a full history of the company's transactions in securities. Also whether similar record is at all times kept and is available for similar inspection as to the loans of the company secured by collaterals, showing the parties to whom such loans were made, the amount and description of the collaterals held, the rates of interest paid to the company, and other details.

Yours truly, W. H. TRUESDALE, Chairman.
JOHN W. AUCHINCLOSS.

These are the questions submitted to the employes of the home office building:

1. Have you now or since January, 1900, any business relation with any other company or corporation in which the Mutual Life Insurance Company has any interest as a stockholder or otherwise? If so, what is or has been your connection, and with what company, how long have you been so connected, at what salary or other compensation, by whom was it fixed and by whom paid, and who appointed you?

2. Are you related either by blood or marriage to any Trustee, officer, or head of a department of the company? If so, state how and to whom related. Also state whether you have any relatives in the Mutual Life offices. If so, who, and in what office are they employed, and the relationship to you.

3. Are you employed in any way outside of the offices of the company in connection with any work or in the performance of any duties other than those pertaining to the affairs of the company? If so, how and when and by whose direction, and how long have you performed such outside duties?

4. During the period since Jan. 1, 1900, has any money of the company been loaned to you other than loans on policies of insurance? If so, at what times, the amounts loaned, the security given by you for the same, and have any such loans been paid in full? If not, how much remains due on same? What rates of interest have you paid on such loans?

5. Have you, since Jan. 1, 1900, received from any person or source whatever any commissions, compensation, or benefit of any kind from any or for or on account of any transactions by or on behalf of the company in the purchase or sale of any securities or property of any kind or in connection with any loans procured, either secured by real estate or by collaterals of any kind or growing out of any syndicate participations or underwritings in which the company has an interest? If so, state the times when you received any such compensation or profits of participation, amounts of same, when received by you and by whom paid; also who, on the part of the company, authorized such payment.

6. Have you at any time since Jan. 1, 1900, by reason of your position with or your relations to the company received any money or property of any description belonging to or intended for the company? If so, what you received, when it was paid or delivered to you, and by whom.

7. Have you since Jan. 1, 1900, by reason of your connection with the company received money or other valuable thing outside of and in addition to but not part of your regular salary or compensation? If so, give details of the transaction as to when you received it, what it was, and by whom paid or given to you.

8. Have you personal knowledge of any other employes receiving moneys or other valuable thing on account of his connection with the company on the several accounts indicated in the foregoing inquiries? If so, state in full what you know of any such cases, the names of any employes involved, and in what department of the company they are or have been employed.

9. State any other thing you may know of as regards the affairs of the company which you think would be of interest and value to those now investigating same, or that will aid or facilitate their efforts to fully examine into and report thereon.

Not Like First Requisition.

Some of the earlier letters which the full membership of the Truesdale Committee sent to Mr. Peabody read rather differently. In its letter of Jan. 8, when it gave its opinion that other suits than those against the McCurdys would be necessary the committee expressed its regret that the record it had been able to obtain was so incomplete.

"It was, however," said the committee, "all we have been able to obtain, notwithstanding our efforts, repeated from time to time, because of our reluctance to assume that such a record on subjects of such importance was all that could be furnished."

The committee has presented no reports to the board since this letter and had not enlarged its record up to the time when Stuyvesant Fish withdrew from its activities. The interim between the letter of Jan. 8 and Mr. Fish's resignation six weeks later was filled with negotiations between the committee and President Peabody, in which Mr. Peabody endeavored to have the committee's requests modified.

The personal campaign against Stuyvesant Fish which the Harriman-Rogers-Peabody party in the Illinois Central Railroad has been threatening began yesterday with the publication of a story that Mr. Fish, through the good offices of his friends, had offered to trade a settlement of the Illinois Central fight for the cessation of his efforts to clean up the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Mr. Fish declined to discuss the story. He was not personally charged with having attempted the dicker. It was learned, however, that instead of Mr. Fish or his friends having offered to make a settlement President Peabody of the Mutual Life personally and at one or more interviews where Mutual Life matters had been discussed, suggested that unless trouble were to be met in the Illinois Central Railroad Mr. Fish had better stop trying to take the lid off the Mutual Life Insurance Company. These suggestions were followed up by Mr. Peabody's filing with the Treasurer of the railroad within an hour after Mr. Fish resigned from the board a written memorandum covering the points on which he had demanded an investigation of Mr. Fish's relations to that corporation.

First Shot Against Fish.

It was learned from many banking sources yesterday that yesterday's publication was merely the first shot in a campaign which is planned to include personal charges affecting Mr. Fish's relations to the railroad of which he has been President for a quarter of a century. They were met with the assertion that if such an attack is intended it will be made the business of Mr. Fish's friends to undertake a full ventilation of Mr. Harriman's relations to the Union Pacific and Chicago & Alton Railroads, with particular view to establishing what relation, if any, exists between loans of Union Pacific money in enormous amounts to individuals or bankers and loans by those individuals to Mr. Harriman. Whether banks in which Union Pacific money has been deposited also figured as intermediaries in the process is another question which is deemed to be closely related to the first.

The Weber is the Piano of the Opera

BURGSTALLER AS TANNHAUSER

To the Weber Piano Co.

Permit me to add my word of praise to those of the other artists who use your delightful instruments.

The Weber is unequalled in tone and cannot be too highly commended because of its artistic excellence.

Sincerely yours,
ALOIS BURGSTALLER

AT THE Metropolitan Opera House are over twenty Weber Pianos. These are used at the Sunday evening concerts, by the stars in rehearsal, in the Opera School, and in such operas as call for the use of any piano. Burgstaller and many of the other great operatic singers also have Weber Pianos in their apartments.

That a piano should blend well with the human voice is one of the strongest indications of superior musical merit. The Weber is to-day being given preference over any other piano by the world's most famous vocal artists.

GIVE UP BANKERS' LIFE.

Minority Stockholders to Let the Townsley-Van Schaick Party Run It.

It became known yesterday that the minority stockholders in the Bankers' Life Insurance Company had decided to allow the Townsley-Van Schaick element to make up the impairment of capital which has existed since last Fall. This will turn the control of the company over to Henry P. Townsley and Eugene Van Schaick, whose doings in the Life Association of America, as brought out by the Armstrong committee, included various loans to themselves of the company's money, and on one occasion a $50,000 bonus out of the company's treasury which the State Insurance Department subsequently made them put back.

The success of Messrs. Townsley and Van Schaick in beating down the minority stock element brings to an end quite an extended campaign that they have carried on for the control of the Bankers' Life. It began in the nineties when Townsley, as general manager, tried to collect proxies to wrest the control from the men who then held it. Townsley was discharged, but he turned up again in the Knickerbocker Investment Company, which he and Van Schaick control, through another corporation, as the actual purchaser of the majority stock of the Bankers' Life Company when that company incorporated on an old-line basis.

The stock was first sold to C. H. Fancher, then by Mr. Fancher to a third party, and then to the Knickerbocker Investment Company. Most of it had to be put up by Townsley and Van Schaick to secure the money they paid for it, and in connection with this, the minority interests forced them to consent to a voting trust, the members of which have been H. K. Stokes, brother of Gov. Stokes of New Jersey; William Scherer, manager of the New York Clearing House, and ex-Gov. Voorhees of New Jersey. Matters went on under this control until the impairment was discovered by the State Insurance Department, and the minority stock interests had practically no course open to them except to let Townsley and Van Schaick make up the deficiency and take the control of the company into their hands. May 9 is the date set on which the deficiency must be made up.

A NEW YORK LIFE CHANGE.

The Company, It Is Said, Will Move Its Finance Bureau Uptown.

It was said in Wall Street yesterday that the New York Life Insurance Company has determined to remove its financial department from the Hanover Bank Building, where it has been since soon after George W. Perkins became Vice President and Chairman of the Finance Committee, to the main office building, at 346 Broadway. Treasurer Randolph declined to discuss the report.

The New York Life is the only one of the insurance companies which has maintained a separate office for its financial department. The late John A. McCall testified before the Armstrong Committee last Fall that the step was taken principally to avoid having to carry securities back and forth between the home office and the financial office in the daily transactions of the company.

VENNER LOSES AGAIN.

Can't Appeal from Decision Denying Him the New York Life's Lists.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down a decision yesterday denying a motion to re-settle an order so as to permit an appeal to the Court of Appeals in the case started by Clarence H. Venner and others against the New York Life Insurance Company. On Feb. 9, the Appellate Division reversed an order by Justice Greenbaum on Jan. 4, granting a mandamus to compel the company to permit the relators to examine the books of the life insurance company and copy the names and addresses of all the policy holders.

Yesterday the Appellate Division simply denied the motion to re-settle the order so as to permit a further appeal, this time to the Court of Appeals. The motion is denied with $10 costs and without any opinion being rendered.

NO NEW SUPERINTENDENT YET

Hendricks's Successor May Be Appointed After Legislature Adjourns.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 2.—There is an impression that Gov. Higgins may be planning to delay the appointment of a Superintendent of Insurance until after adjournment of the Legislature, when confirmation by the Senate would not be necessary until 1907.

"I cannot state just when I will appoint a Superintendent of Insurance," said Gov. Higgins to-day, when reminded that Supt. Hendricks had been a hold-over nearly three weeks. "Some would be glad to consider the proposition to take charge of the department if they knew what it was going to be. In view of the fact that the proposed legislation has not been enacted, they hesitate to enter upon the discharge of duties about which they are not certain.

"I had hoped when the insurance report was in that the field would widen and other men would give the position consideration. But I may say it is a poor day when two or a half dozen candidates are not brought to my attention."

Holy Ghoster Accused of Cruelty.

BAR MILLS, Me., March 2.—Ernest Hanscom of Buxton, a member of the Holy Ghost and Us sect, was arrested to-night on a charge of treating cruelly a ten-year-old orphan named Christine Madeline Webber. It is alleged that the child, who lived with the Hanscom family, was severely beaten, subjected to prolonged fasts, and otherwise ill-treated.

Broadway Car Rams Hansom.

In trying to cross Broadway at Fortieth Street in the after-theatre rush last night, John Hogan of 19 West Sixty-fifth Street drove his hansom cab directly in front of a Broadway car. The cab, the horse, and Hogan were rolled about the street. Hogan's left leg was broken, his cab was smashed, and it took a half hour to get the horse on its feet and the pieces picked up. Hogan was taken to the New York Hospital.

Minister Stops Runaway Horse.

The Rev. Gottlieb Andreae, pastor of St. John's German Evangelical Church, Jersey City, stopped a runaway horse yesterday that had been left standing in Monticello Avenue and had been frightened by an automobile. Pastor Andreae ran to the middle of the street and seized the horse by the bridle. The frightened animal plunged and kicked, but the pastor held on until it became quiet.

JURY ACQUITS GEORGER OF DEFRAUDING BANK

Other Counts in the Indictment Likely to be Quashed.

THE JUDGE IS INVESTIGATING

With the District Attorney He Is Examining the Alleged Attempt to Bribe Prospective Jurors.

ALBION, N. Y., March 2.—The jury in the case of Eugene A. Georger, formerly President of the German Bank of Buffalo, to-day returned a verdict of "not guilty." The jury was out one hour and forty minutes.

Georger was charged with grand larceny in the first degree, in appropriating to his own use and to the use of F. F. Williams funds of the bank with intent to defraud. There were several other counts in the indictment, but it is probable that they will be quashed.

Moses Shire, Georger's attorney, in summing up declared that Georger never got a dollar of the money. It was the defendant's duty to loan the bank's money, he declared, which he did by discounting Williams's note at a time when Williams was financially responsible. The only foolish thing Georger did, said Mr. Shire, was to agree to take part of the profits of Williams in the trolley line deal upon which the money was advanced. It was unfortunate, and he made reparation to the bank. It might have been a breach of trust, but there was nothing criminal.

District Attorney Abbott of Erie County summed up for the prosecution. From November, 1898, to March, 1903, he declared, pursuant to an agreement with Williams, Georger appropriated from the bank's funds on Williams's worthless paper, and without collateral security, the sum of $69,000. Was this the act of a conservative bank President, protecting the interests of his friends and depositors? Mr. Abbott asked. If the transaction proved profitable he was to be the gainer. If it was unprofitable, the bank was to be the loser. "Your verdict," said Mr. Abbott in conclusion, "is to say whether a bank President can take the bank's funds for private speculation, concealing the interest and not giving security."

Justice Kenefick's charge to the jury lasted one hour. At 4 P. M. the verdict of "not guilty" was announced.

The alleged attempt to bribe prospective jurors in the Georger case is developing into a serious affair. Justice Kenefick and District Attorney Abbott resumed their investigation into the matter this afternoon.

Mrs. Conger, wife of the man who is accused by Charles Turner of having told him there would be "big money in it" if he (Turner) were on the Georger jury and would "swing it right," was brought before Justice Kenefick to-day. It is not known what evidence she gave. The name of Edward Milehan, a County Supervisor, and, it is said, a close friend of Conger, was brought into the investigation to-day by one of the witnesses examined. He will probably be called upon next week to tell what, if anything, he may know about the affair.

Georger did not return to Buffalo to-night. His counsel was informed by a Deputy Sheriff that he had heard threats against Georger's life by a man who asserted that he lost his life's savings in the wreck of the German Bank. Georger said he had no fear of violence, but he was prevailed upon to remain here until to-morrow.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY JAILED.

He's a Hardware Dealer and Is Accused of Receiving Stolen Pistols.

Westminster Abbey was arrested last night in his gun store at 61 Front Street on the charge of receiving stolen goods after the police had found there pistols stolen from the New Haven steamship pier.

Harry Iverson, a shipping clerk for the New Haven Railroad, made the complaint. Mr. Abbey said he bought the pistols from Jacob A. Gallef of 110 West 115th Street. Gallef was also arrested. He said he bought them from Jacob Baum of 223 Bowery, and Mr. Baum was arrested. Mr. Baum did not give the name and address of the person from whom he got the articles.

Westminster Abbey lives at 380A Clinton Street, Brooklyn.

RAILWAYS FACE RATE WAR.

Erie Blocks Attempt to Settle Trouble Over Differential.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Executives of all Eastern railroads to-day ineffectually attempted to settle the differential rate controversy. On account of the attitude of the Erie Road it seems impossible to avert a serious rate war. Every line except the Erie voted for arbitration of the question. The conditions demanded by the Erie were:

A guarantee that fares in effect by that road now would not be changed, and that no road with terminals in New York would get differential privileges.

The Grand Trunk gave notice that if the matter was not settled or placed in arbitration by March 10, it would reserve the right to charge whatever rates it pleased to New York, Boston, and all Eastern points. On that date, of the Erie remains firm, the Grand Trunk will begin charging $2 under the present differential rate to New York.

LABORERS LET BOY DROWN.

Wouldn't Try to Save Him, Though His Brother Begged Them.

Robert Ralph, 10 years old, of 402 East Twenty-fourth Street, was drowned in the East River at the foot of Twenty-ninth Street last night. Several Italians who were at work on the dock made not the slightest effort to rescue the boy when he was struggling in the water. Henry Ralph, Robert's eight-year-old brother, begged them to throw a line or jump overboard to save Robert, but they shook their heads and said: "Too bad, no chance for him."

Robert and Henry, who moved to Twenty-fourth Street a few days ago from Staten Island, went to the pier late in the evening to get some wood for their mother. While trying to land a heavy beam that was floating near the bulkhead Robert toppled off the pier into the river. The swift tide carried him out into the stream where, after struggling a few minutes, he sank.

$1,900 Stolen from Express Company.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., March 2.—A packet containing $1,900 in bills was stolen from the safe of the Adams Express Company in the Union Station this morning. The theft was committed while the man in charge of the office had gone out to a train. The police have detained two men on suspicion, one of them being a former employe of the company.

GET LOCKER ROOM THIEF.

Arrest at Horace Mann School—Second Offense in a Week.

The second arrest this week for robberies at Columbia University and the Horace Mann School was made yesterday afternoon. Alexander Inglis, a member of the Horace Mann School Faculty, saw a strange man trying to pry open a closet in the locker room on the fourth floor. He summoned help and detained the stranger until the arrival of Policeman Eck, who took him to the West 125th Street Police Station. The prisoner said he was Charles Fleischman, 25 years old, a waiter, of 510 East Twelfth Street.

The thefts in the locker room of the university and its adjuncts have been going on for a month or more. The stolen property consisted chiefly of wearing apparel.

A man who called himself James Pierce Morgan of 120 West Thirty-eighth Street was arrested in the gymnasium last Tuesday, by some students, while trying to force a locker with a jimmy.

He was remanded until March 10 when arraigned in the Harlem Court on Wednesday. The police have been looking up Morgan's record since. According to Capt. Thompson, Morgan's picture is in the Rogues' Gallery, and he has served three terms in the penitentiary for stealing, chiefly from colleges.

Capt. Thompson also declares that Morgan is wanted at New Haven for stealing clothing and jewelry valued at $3,000 from the Yale Gymnasium two months ago.

WIFE GAVE HIM TO POLICE.

Aided in Search for Husband Accused of Embezzlement.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Traced here after a six months' search, Samuel A. Wallace, ex-President of the United Engineering and Foundry Company of Vandergrift, Penn., is under arrest at the Central Police Station accused of embezzling $25,000 from the concern of which he was the head.

Wallace's wife gave the information which led to his arrest. She assisted the Chicago police in their search. When Wallace fled, it is charged, he deserted her, and ever since she has helped in the pursuit.

EDWARD F. FISCHER, SUICIDE.

The Blueing Manufacturer Had Suffered from Overwork.

Edward F. Fischer of the firm of C. F. Fischer & Co., blueing manufacturers, 45 Harrison Street, Manhattan, committed suicide yesterday by inhaling gas in his bedroom in his home at 8,414 Seventeenth Avenue, Bath Beach.

Mr. Fischer went abroad last Fall with his family to avoid a nervous breakdown from overwork, and he had only recently returned to this country. He was to have met his wife at her mother's home yesterday afternoon, and when he did not appear at dinner time Mrs. Fischer went home alone. She found her husband lying on the bed with a tube attached to the gas fixture in his mouth. A string bound round his neck held the tube in place. Dr. Lott was summoned from the Norwegian Hospital and said that he had been dead some hours.

Mr. Fischer was 41 years old. In addition to his widow, three children survive him.

GOULDS TO BUY RAILROAD.

Offer for the Santa Fe Central Will Be Accepted, It Is Said.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 2.—C. W. Tallmadge of the firm of C. W. and E. R. Tallmadge of Chicago, who was in this city today, and is understood to represent the Goulds, made an offer to Francis J. Torrance and the receiver of the Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny to purchase the Santa Fé Central Railroad for a figure representing 100 per cent. of the money invested. The road cost Mr. Torrance, W. H. Andrews, the late T. Lee Clark, and their associates about $2,500,000. It was reported to-night that the offer had been accepted.

This railroad figured prominently in the failure of the Enterprise National Bank, it being reported that Andrews had borrowed large sums of money from the bank on some of the road's collateral. The deal on the part of the Goulds is understood to be in connection with a plan for the extension of the Wabash system to the Pacific Coast.

TO ACT AGAINST ALDERMEN.

Boston's District Attorney Says He Has Evidence for Grand Jury.

BOSTON, March 2.—Responding to a request of District Attorney John B. Moran, four members of the Boston Board of Aldermen called upon that official to-day, in connection with his inquiry into the alleged agreement by which Aldermen Charles M. Draper, Republican, and Edward L. Cauley, Democrat, were to divide the year as presiding officers of the board.

Mr. Moran considers the selection as a violation of the law, and announced to-night that there was sufficient cause for criminal proceedings.

"You may state," said he, "that the evidence which I gathered to-day was of such a nature that I consider it my duty to present it to the Grand Jury."

SUES GROCERS' SYNDICATE.

Ohio Attorney General Alleges Restraint of Trade by Wholesalers.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 2.—Attorney General Ellis this evening filed in the Circuit Court a petition to oust the Ohio Wholesale Grocers' Association Company from its charter on the ground that it has operated in restraint of trade, contrary to the provisions of the anti-trust law.

The petition is based on complaint that the company arbitrarily fixed the prices at which sugar and coffee should be sold to retail dealers. The company, at a hearing, declared that the operations complained of had ceased in May, 1905.

CHARGED WITH FORGING FARMER FRIEND'S WILL

New Jersey Horticulturist Made Defendant in Suit.

SAYS SIGNATURE WAS TRACED

W. H. Skillman of Belle Mead Was Acquitted on a Similar Charge Many Years Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., March 2.—William Lanehart, 78 years old, a farmer, died at Blawenburg in May, 1905, leaving an estate valued at $20,000. Eleven days after Lanehart's death William H. Skillman, a farmer at Belle Mead, and the President of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, filed a document with the Surrogate purporting to be Lanehart's last will.

This paper was drawn by Skillman and witnessed by his friend, W. H. Ely, and also by his son, J. H. Skillman. After several minor bequests it directed that the Lanehart farm and all the personal property be sold within two years, and half of the proceeds be paid to Miss Laura Kellogg, a niece of Lanehart, and his housekeeper, and the other half to W. H. Skillman. His share, after the smaller legacies were paid, would amount to about $9,000. The will names Skillman and Miss Kellogg as executors.

A short time after Skillman had filed the alleged will, John N. Race, cashier of the Hopewell National Bank and a confidential friend of Lanehart, produced another will made by Lanehart in 1902 in which, Lanehart, who had no children, made his sister, Mary Jane Lanehart, the principal beneficiary. An appeal was taken from the Surrogate's probate of the Skilliman will, the heirs and legatees under the prior will charging that Skilliman forged the last will. He is not mentioned in the will of 1902.

Skillman testified before Judge Schenck here that his relations with Lanehart had always been friendly. He declared that Lanehart, who was ill, told him he wanted him to draw up the will and that Lanehart also desired to leave him half of the property with the understanding that he was to look after the interests of Miss Kellogg after he was dead.

Skillman swore he drew up the will according to Lanehart's request; that Lanehart called at his house and signed it in the presence of witnesses, using first a lead pencil in making his signature and then writing over the pencil marks with pen and ink.

W. A. Apgar, cashier of the Somerville Dime Savings Bank, testified as an expert. He declared it as his opinion that the Lanehart signature to the will was a forgery.

The case went over to-day to March 12. It has greatly interested Somerville.

Many years ago Skillman was the defendant in a similar action in the settlement of the estate of William Race of Harlingen, who was murdered. He was acquitted.

ASKS $3,000,000 OF PLATT.

Chicagoan Accuses Senator of Taking Off Michigan Timber.

Special to The New-York Times.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Court proceedings of the last twenty-four hours have forced a crisis in the legal battle long waged in the Circuit and Probate Courts of Cook County between United States Senator Platt of New York and James Donovan of 3,224 Calumet Avenue, this city. Platt's deposition is to be taken next week.

Donovan accused Platt and his nephew, J. Platt Underwood, of wrongfully taking for their own use timber to the value of more than $3,000,000 from forest lands in Wisconsin, claimed as the property of Donovan and the estate of his former partner, Laflora S. Baker, formerly of Big Rapids, Mich.

The contention of Donovan is that Baker is still alive and in New York. He asked the court to-day to call on the Northern Trust Company and Attorney C. A. Burley to produce the books of the firm of James Donovan & Co., which Baker is said to have made way with before his alleged death in 1894.

COAL ROAD ENDS FIGHT.

Baltimore & Ohio Settles Suit—Will Obey Commerce Board.

CLARKSBURG, West Va., March 2.—An agreement was suddenly reached to-day at the trial in the United States District Court of the suit of the Red Rock Fuel Company against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. The action was brought to enforce a recent order of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, directing the railroad company to cease discrimination against the fuel company.

By the terms of the agreement the railroad company will provide the fuel company with railroad connections at its plant near Buckhannon, this State, at once; will grant to the Fairmont coal district a fair rate, and furnish a fair distribution of cars. The Red Rock Fuel Company retains all legal rights, with the understanding that it may furnish the Inter-State Commerce Commission and Senator Tillman all information in its possession.

Independent operators, it was reported to-day, will meet here next week to follow up this action with some method toward getting concessions and other suits may be brought.

President Not to Visit Atlanta.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—It was announced to-day that the President will not be able to go to Atlanta the last of this month to attend the Wheeler memorial services.

SMALL CASE IN HIGH COURT.

Interborough Carries Up a $250 Judgment for Extra 5-Cent Ticket.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court granted yesterday permission to appeal to the Court of Appeals in the case of Emanuel Busch against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

Busch said he bought two tickets for himself and a friend, and placed them in the box at a station. The chopper said he had only put in one, and he was compelled to buy another. His counsel asked $700 damages for breach of contract.

A $250 award by the Municipal Court was reversed by the Appellate Term, but the Appellate Division affirmed the original judgment.

The company asked the right to appeal to the Court of Appeals on the ground that the point involved relates to the jurisdiction of the Municipal court in such cases. The company alleges that such cases comprise all the features of an action for assault and battery, which action is excluded from the jurisdiction of the Municipal court.

TOOK PISTOLS TO SCHOOL.

Novel Reading Boys Drew Them in Dispute Over Marbles.

Special to The New York Times.

EBENSBURG, Penn., March 2.—"If you don't let those marbles alone, I'll blow the daylights out of you!" yelled little Tommy Burns, while a crowd of boys were playing marbles in the yard of the Barnesboro school this morning.

To show that he meant it, he pulled a pistol from his pocket. Instantly four other boys produced weapons of a similar character. At that moment Mr. Delancey, the Principal, arrived. He escorted all of the boys to the office of Squire Brown, took the weapons and told the boys he would send them all to jail if they again carried arms.

The pistol the Burns boy carried had been stolen. The youngsters had been reading cheap novels.

PLAN FOR COLLEGE UNION.

Committee Named to Devise Constitution for State Association.

ALBANY, March 2.—The conference of college and university Presidents and representatives of the State adjourned today. Preliminary steps were taken for the formation of an association of colleges of the State of New York, and a committee consisting of First Assistant Commissioner Rogers as Chairman, Chancellor Day of Syracuse University, President Rhees of Rochester University, and Dean Crane of Cornell University was appointed to prepare a constitution to be presented at a meeting at Columbia University on April 19 and 20.

The conference favored the plan for a State board to prepare question papers for academic examinations.

HOOK AND LADDER RUNAWAY.

Fireman Stops It by Climbing on Pole Between Horses.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 2.—While responding to an alarm of fire in East Gloucester to-day, William H. Robinson, driver of Hook and Ladder No. 5, was thrown from his seat and probably fatally injured.

The three horses attached to the long truck went on a gallop for more than a mile down Main Street, the principal thoroughfare of Gloucester. They were finally brought to a stop unhurt by Augustus Hobart, a fireman, who crawled along the truck and out on the wagon pole between the galloping horses until he could pick up the reins.

RAVAGED BY SAN JOSE SCALE.

Many Fine Orchards in Morris County, N. J., Ruined or Badly Damaged.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 2.—Fruit orchards on the beautiful country estates roundabout Morristown are threatened with destruction by the San José Scale. State Entomologist J. B. Smith, at the request of the Morris County Agricultural Society, sent Inspector Bhreme through the county to investigate, and found thousans of fruit, shade, and forest trees affected by the scale. The only apparent remedy is to cut the affected trees down. Hickory trees were so diseased last year that their leaves turned yellow and the nuts did not mature. This the Inspector said was unprecedented. Acres and acres of peach and apple trees have died during the last two years.

At Onunda, D. Willis James's place, two fine apple trees were potted and put in a greenhouse for experimental purposes. A few days later the scale attacked both trees, and to save others they were thrown out. On George Chisolm's country place, Airy Hall, the old Force peach orchard, which when in bloom was considered one of the handsomest sights in the county, has been killed. Charles F. Cutler lost a great many trees on his estate at Kahdena. Shade trees everywhere have been badly injured.

A public meeting is to be held in the County Hall, at which measures to stay the ravages of the scale will be adopted.

SENATE RAILROAD TALK STEERED BY LA FOLLETTE

Newest Member, by Amendment to Indian Bill, Turns Debate.

AIM TO SAVE COAL LANDS

Plan Defeated by Constitutional Objections — Measure for Settling Tribal Affairs Passed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The railroad question was dragged in at the heels of the poor Indian by the Senate to-day. When practically the entire day had been spent in a railroad debate the bill providing for settlement of the affairs of the five civilized tribes in Indian Territory was passed. March 4, 1907, is the date fixed for terminating tribal relations.

La Follette, the newest member, scarcely two months in his seat, was the master of ceremonies. He led the debate and occupied more time than any other Senator. His proposed amendment to the Indian bill kept the railroad and rate situation uppermost in the minds of the Senators even while they were ostensibly dealing with a subject so far removed as the conferring of civilized rights on Indians.

The amendment, which prohibited railroad companies and their stockholders from acquiring coal lands in Indian Territory, held its places persistently before the Senate until near the close of the day. Several Senators, while expressing sympathy with the purpose of the amendment, raised constitutional objections. Finally all the Indian Committee's amendments to the coal section were laid on the table, 38 to 7. As the La Follette proposition was an amendment to the amendment, it went over without a direct vote on the question of stockholders in railroads owning coal lands. The Senate amended the measure in many respects, and it will go to a conference committee.

The committee, actuated, as Senator Clapp averred, by the belief that inasmuch as these lands did not belong to the United States, Congress was under a moral obligation to get the utmost possible for them, recommended that they be sold in whole or in part, without any further restrictions. Railroad interests, of course, would give the highest price. Indeed, Senator La Follette asserted, that no one would bid against them, since capital was too cautious to bid for coal lands in competition with a railroad which, by various means of discrimination, could drive a competitor out of business.

But the manner of sale which would bring the highest price was exactly the manner of sale that would establish and perpetuate a monopoly. Senator La Follette thought such a plan would ignore interests of all others than the members of the tribes, and that did not accord with his notions of wise statesmanship.

Therefore it was that he proposed his amendment that this land should be sold subject to a provision in the deed that it should never come under the control of a common carrier or of any officer or stockholder of a common carrier.

He appreciated the fact that such a proposition might be called radical, but, he declared, the evil growing out of the ownership of coal mines by railroads was of such serious nature that nothing short of radical legislation could correct it.

"Legislation to be of any value to the people of this country must be practical, must meet existing conditions," he asserted. "Of what avail to enact a statute barring railroad companies from becoming competitors with those who are transporting over their lines, if you leave open the side door which admits of railroads doing the same thing through their officers and stockholders."

Senator La Follette laid special stress on the necessity of prohibiting railroad stockholders from acquiring the lands, referring to the fact that, through their officers, the railroads of Pennsylvania own 98 per cent. of the anthracite in that State. They had driven the independent operators and owners out of business, he declared, rendering all who use anthracite dependent on eight or nine corporations for their fuel. The people must be able to assert their sovereign authority over the transportation lines.

It had been said "if the railroad companies want the coal lands they will get them regardless of what Congress may do."

"I want," he said, "to put on record the protest of one individual against the doctrine that the railroad companies can secure the mastery of any of the National products of the country, so as to interfere with the fair and even-handed transporters of the products of the country. I want to put it on record that this Government of the United States is stronger than any of its creatures, stronger than the railroads in the aggregate, and all the centralized power of the corporations represented by unlawful corporations and trusts. I would write it in the statutes that the railroad companies must be common carriers and nothing else, and write it so as to make it effective."

He presented a letter from T. P. Gore of Lawton, Indian Territory, complaining of railroad discriminations and suggesting the appointment of a Railroad Commission for the Territory.

Mr. Clapp said in reply to Mr. La Follette that the Indian Committee had hesitated to accept the amendment because it dealt with the regulation of the railroads, provided for in another bill before the Senate.

Mr. Teller doubted the right of Congress to say that railroad stockholders should not become the owners of coal lands. Declaring that there was no monopoly of the coal lands in Colorado, he criticised the too great extension of the forest reserve system. He said it was in pursuance "of the insane notion that the Government must hold the lands for the unborn."

Mr. Knox asked whether, under the amendment, stock in a coal mine in Indian Territory inherited by a young man living in an outsde State would revert to the Unted States, and in reply Mr. La Follette said he thought that would be a legitimate conclusion.

Mr. Heyburn charged that the ownership of coal mines of Utah by the railroad companies was standing in the way of the development of mines of Idaho and other Western States.

Mr. Clark (Wyo.) moved to amend the House provision to read as follows:

> That all coal and asphalt lands, whether leased or unleased, shall be reserved from sale under this act until the existing leases for coal and asphalt lands shall have expired or until such time as may be otherwise provided by law.

The suggestion was adopted without debate, and the bill was passed.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 2.—Senator Tillman spent last night in Columbia en route to his home from Clemson College, where he had been attending a meeting of Trustees. He is still suffering with a severe cold.

"The Railroad Rate bill," he said, "probably will pass. The principal fight will be on the proposed amendment for court supervision of rates. The bill will pass the Senate without amendment, I think. I expect to fight for it."

PUSHCART LOAD OF SILVER.

There Were Bananas, Too, but Too Few of Them to Hide It.

Isaac Giffner, a peddler, of 90 Pitt Street, was trundling a pushcart full of banans through Allen Street yesterday, when Policeman Etcholes thought he discovered the gleam of white metal among the fruit. He stopped the peddler, and under a heap of bananas found a lot of silver spoons, knives, and forks.

When the peddler was arraigned before Magistrate Pool in the Essex Market Court he explained that the silverware had been given to him by Henry H. Ford, Superintendent for the T. W. White Company, which has charge of the garbage received at Barren Island. Mr. Ford appeared and denied the peddler's tale, pointing out that Giffner was already under $1,000 bail to answer charges of receiving stolen goods. Daniel J. Coleman, assistant steward of the New York Athletic Club, identified the silverware as the club's property, and Giffner was held in $500 bail for examination.

CROMWELL WON'T ANSWER.

Markel Made by Senate Canal Committee to File Written Replies.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The letter from William Nelson Cromwell to the late Secretary of State Hay, under date of Dec. 5, 1898, was taken up by Senator Morgan to-day in the examination of Mr. Cromwell before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals. The period covered by the letter was when the Panama Canal Company was seeking a prolongation of its concessions on the Isthmus.

The letter referred to an inclosure, and Mr. Cromwell repeatedly declined to state the nature of the inclosure or to discuss the correspondence in any manner. Extraordinary political conditions in Bogota were also referred to in the letter. Mr. Morgan questioned Mr. Cromwell concerning this reference, and when the witness declined to discuss it there was a heated argument in which many acrimonious passages between the witness and Mr. Morgan occurred.

It was finally determined that the question of compelling the witness to answer should be considered by the committee at a secret session.

J. E. Markel of Omaha, Neb., was examined concerning the canceled contract he had with the Canal Commission to establish a commissary on the Isthmus. Chairman Millard asked a number of questions designed to ascertain whether political influence had been brought to bear to get the contract.

Mr. Markel answered from a typewritten sheet, and on cross-examination Mr. Taliaferro demanded that the witness be compelled to file his statement. The witness protested against it, but he was made to file the statement. He said he had had no understanding with the Chairman. Mr. Taliaferro said he would examine the papers at his leisure to determine the truth of that statement.

IN FAVOR OF CONSULAR BILL.

Only Minor Changes Made by the House Foreign Committee.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The House Committee on Foreign Affairs has decided to make a favorable report on the bill framed by Secretary Root for the reorganization of the Consular Service practically as it passed the Senate. Changes made in the House Committee are chiefly in the classification, abolition, and creation of offices.

The following Consulates in Canada are abolished by the House Committee: Amherstburg, Brockville, Chatham, Goderich, Guelph, London, Peterboro, Stratford, Wallaceburg, St. Thomas, Stanbridge, and Grenville.

The following posts, which were reduced from Consulates General to Consulates by the Senate, are restored to Consulates General by the House Committee: Coburg, Dresden, Munich, Antwerp, Marseilles, and Manchester.

The committee recommends a Consulate General at Adis Ababa, Abyssinia, and new Consulates are recommended at Durban, South Africa; Sandakan, British North Borneo; Tabriz, Persia; Harput, Armenia, and Iquitos, Peru.

In its main features the bill is unchanged. It retains the provisions for Consular inspection by five regular Inspectors and for the abolition of fees. The bill is to go into effect on June 30. It is estimated by the committee that the cost of making the changes will be about $125,000 for the first year.

HELD FOR CIRCUS DEATH.

Youth Accused of Luring Brooklyn Boy Away Will Be Extradited.

Magistrate Higginbotham, in the Lee Avenue Court, in Williamsburg, yesterday, held Robert Wright, 19 years old, of 114 Marcy Avenue, in $1,000 bail for a hearing on a charge that he had kidnapped fourteen-year-old William Garrity of 201 Jackson Street, who was killed by a freight train near Allentown, Penn., in the early part of last May while following the Barnum-Bailey Circus. The complainant against Wright was Mrs. Mary Garrity, the mother of the boy. It was alleged that Wright lured the boy from home. Mrs. Garrity did not learn of her boy's death until four months after it occurred.

Mrs. Garrity caught Wright last Sunday, beat him with her umbrella, and turned him over to a policeman.

When Wright was arraigned yesterday the Magistrate was informed that the Grand Jury of Allentown, Penn., had indicted Wright in connection with the death of the boy. Wright was thereupon held for the arrival of extradition papers.

FIREMAN ACCUSED OF PAYING.

Charge Is Having Given $1,000 for a Rerating—Decision Reserved.

Frederick W. Oppe, a fireman attached to Hook and Ladder Company No. 7, was put on trial yesterday before Deputy Fire Commissioner Bonner, charged with having paid $1,000 to James J. Smith to obtain a rerating on the civil service lists and to procure his advancement to the rank of Assistant Foreman.

Smith, who lived at 1,364 Fulton Street in the Bronx, was convicted last January of the crime of receiving the money and is now in Sing Sing. Henry C. Dailey, a fireman attached to the fireboat William L. Strong, is also accused of having given money to Smith. He will be tried on the charge next Friday.

Assistant District Attorney Kresel testified that Oppe and Dailey had confessed to him in the District Attorney's office that they had paid $1,000 to Smith on Aug. 20, 1903.

"But when the case came to trial in the Court of Special Sessions," said Mr. Kresel, "both of the firemen went back on the story they had told me, and Smith was convicted in spite of their testimony."

Decision was reserved.

SUES FOR 2-YEAR-OLD CHILD.

Health Department Says She Has Scarlet Fever—Father Denies It.

William Smith of 296 Wyckoff Street, Brooklyn, is preparing to bring habeas corpus proceedings against the officials of the Department of Health for the custody of his two-year-old daughter Margaret, who is now in the Hospital for Contagious Diseases. The child became ill about two months ago with what the father says was a slight attack of scarlet fever. Smith asserts that his daughter had fully recovered when on Tuesday last a physician from the Health Department visited the house and took her away to the hospital.

The father contends that the proceeding was without warrant in law. At the Health Department it was said that the case had been reported as one of scarlet fever, and that the department had acted as it did in all such cases.

SUES McLAUGHLIN ESTATE.

Lawyer Wants a Fee from the Award Made in Park Condemnation.

Contending that he is entitled to 10 per cent. of the award for land owned by the late Hugh McLaughlin, which was taken by the city for park purposes, Lawyer Michael E. Finnegan, who is suing the estate of the old Democratic leader, asked Justice Burr of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday to send the matter to a referee. Justice Burr reserved his decision.

Mr. McLaughlin received an award of $149,214.60 for a strip of land taken for the improvement of the Willinck entrance to Prospect Park. Lawyer Finnegan, who represented him in the proceedings, asserts that the estate owes him $14,921.46 for his services.

THE PHILIPPINE BILL KILLED IN COMMITTEE

Action Regarded by Some Senators as a Slap at the President.

LODGE STILL HAS HOPES

Effort to be Made to Have the Measure Reconsidered or Called Before the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The Senate Committee on the Philippines voted today to smother the Philippine Tariff bill. The friends of the bill were not prepared for the result although they had some intimation that they would find a majority against them. The vote stood 8 to 5, Senators Hale, Bufrews, Dick, Nixon, Brandegee, Culberson, Dubois, and Stone opposing a favorable report, and Senators Lodge, Beveridge, Long, Carmack, and McCreary urging affirmative action.

The surprise in this vote was the attitude of Senator Nixon of Nevada, who has all along allowed it to be inferred that he favored the passage of the bill. It is claimed by Senators who support the bill that Nixon is still in favor of it, and at the right time will be found voting for a favorable report. Senator Nixon himself does not talk of the matter in this way, but declines to make a positive declaration that he will vote for the bill.

Senator McCreary moved that an adverse report be made in order to get the bill before the Senate, but this was also voted down, Senator Brandegee moving that the motion lie on the table, and seven Senators voting for Brandegee's motion and Mr. Lodge and his four associates being recorded in the negative. Senator Nixon this time did ont vote.

At this point Senator Lodge made an earnest appeal to the committee not to put it beyond the power of this Congress to grant the relief the people of the Philippines had asked and to which they were justly entitled. He said the bill had passed the House by 258 to 71, a vote which showed how preponderatingly the sentiment of the lower house representing the country favored a liberal commercial policy toward the Filipino people. If the measure deserved defeat he said the arena of fair play for it was the Senate and not the smothering limits of a committee pigeonhole.

Not a single word was uttered in reply. The majority of the committee simply sat and smiled at the Massachusetts Senator. The Senators who voted for the bill say that two constructions may be put upon the situation. One is that a general desire asserted itself to keep the Senate clear of entangling subjects for legislation so that the Rate bill might have undisturbed consideration; the other that the killing of the Philippine bill is intended as a deliberate blow at the President and was dealt to-day as a quick and sharp counter to his authoritative re-entrance yesterday into the rate fight. The same sources of opinion predict that next week the Statehood bill, another Administration measure, will receive its death blow in the Senate also as a means of disciplining the President.

Senator Lodge to-night, however, had not given up all hope of the ultimate passage of the Philippine Tariff bill. He said that there would undoubtedly be an effort to obtain reconsideration in the committee, and if that failed it was not improbable that a resolution discharging the committee from further consideration of the measure would be made in the Senate.

POLICEMAN-LAWYER RESIGNS.

Couldn't Keep Blackstone in His Head and Cover a Tenderloin Post, Too.

Policeman Frederick K. Nelson, who has been on the force for two years, most of the time as a member of the traffic squad in East Twenty-seventh Street, walked up to the desk at the Tenderloin Station last night. He wore plain clothes.

"Sarge," he said, in a soft voice, "I want to resign my job."

Sergt. McCarthy, who was writing on the blotter, looked up to see if Nelson was joking.

"What?" he said, when he saw the man was serious.

"I say," repeated Nelson, in a firmer voice, "that I want to resign. I want to quit. Understan'?"

McCarthy hesitated a moment. "You'd better study on it a while, lad," he remarked, finally.

"I've been doing that for a month," replied Nelson. "This work in the Tenderloin isn't to my liking, see? I'm going to quit right here. Give me a resignation blank."

Thirty patrolmen and plain-clothes men had overheard the conversation and gathered around open-mouthed. They watched him while he filled out and signed a resignation blank. Then as he walked out of the station, after surrendering his badge and other police property, their eyes followed him in amazement.

"I'm studying law, boys," he remarked, pleasantly, "and I can't do it while I'm in the Tenderloin. So, good night!"

The Sergeant and his men were speechless for a moment; then some one broke the silence.

"Few die and—what's the rest of it?" remarked one.

"Cut it out," replied another; "that motto's gone broke."

PRISONER HAD TWO REASONS.

They Were Why He Should Go Free—He's Held Instead.

"There are two good reasons why I should not be held on this charge," argued Fred Howard, hobo, when he was accused in the Tombs Police Court yesterday of stealing a coat from Dennis Toomey of 15 Rector Street. "First, I didn't steal the coat at all; and second, I was drunk when I stole it."

"Then," said Magistrate Steinert, "I'll have to fine you for drunkenness."

"Hold on there a moment," cried the prisoner. "In fining me twice for the same offense you violate my constitutional rights."

"How's that?" inquired the court.

"Don't you remember you fined me for being drunk yesterday," explained Howard with a grin, "and what I've got now is only a hangover from then."

"All right," said Magistrate Steinert accommodatingly, "I'll just hold you on the larceny charge."

Howard shook his head sadly as he was led off and remarked that courts were not the right place to seek justice in.

RUSSIA'S MAGNA CHARTA DECIDED ON BY CZAR

All Laws to be Approved by the Douma and the Council.

SESSIONS ARE TO BE PUBLIC

Ministers Can Be Questioned by Parliament—Social Democrats to Take Part in the Elections.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 2.—As the result of a series of special councils held at Tsarskoe-Selo and composed of forty high dignitaries, Ministers, and members of the Council of the Empire, under the Presidency of the Emperor, the main guarantees of liberty have been granted and a manifesto is to be coded and incorporated in the fundamental laws of the empire. The main points are as follows:

No law will hereafter be effective without the approval of the National Assembly and the Council of the Empire. The latter body will consist of an equal number of appointed and elected members taken from the clergy, nobility, Zemstvos, Academy of Science, universities, trade, and industry.

There will be two houses, both of which will have power to initiate legislation which does not affect the fundamental laws of the empire, the question of succession, &c.

The annual sessions will be convoked and closed by imperial ukase.

Both the Council of the Empire and the National Assembly will enjoy the right to interpellate Ministers regarding alleged unlawful acts.

The sessions will be public.

The Government has issued a circular to the Governors instructing them not to interfere in the coming elections. In the cities and villages throughout the country the activity of the police will be limited to preventing illegal voting.

The Social Democrats, realizing that the National Assembly will at last be an accomplished fact, have by a vote of 36 to 29 raised the boycott and have instructed the members of the party to participate in the elections.

Bishop Arseny of Yaroslav, who recenly created a sensation by issuing without authority an anathemata against all revolutionists, has been removed and exiled to Siberia.

M. Fedoroff, Assistant Minister of Commerce, has been appointed Minister of Commerce ad interim in succession to M. Kutler, who resigned on Feb. 16 on account of the opposition to his scheme for the expropriation of private lands and their division among the peasants.

ATTEMPT TO KILL KAULBARS.

Renewed Revolutionary Activity at Odessa—Disorders Expected.

ODESSA, March 2.—An unsuccessful attempt was made on the life of Governor General Kaulbars to-day.

Renewed revolutionary activity is noticeable, and serious disorders are expected about Easter.

GIVES UP DIPLOMAT'S SON.

Chile Waives Her Rights in the Brussels Homicide Case.

BRUSSELS, March 2.—The Chilean Government has notified the Belgian authorities that it waives the right of diplomatic immunity in the case of Señor Waddington, son of the Chilean Chargé d'Affaires here, who on Feb. 24 shot and killed Señor Balmaceda, Secretary of the Chilean Consulate.

Waddington took refuge in the Chilean legation and the extra-territorial law prevented the police from invading it and arresting him. His father telephoned to the Foreign Minister that he would be responsible for his son, but the police stationed guards around the legation in order to prevent young Waddington's escape. The crime caused a great deal of excitement in this city, and crowds gathered in front of the legation, threats being made to lynch young Waddington.

Balmaceda was engaged to be married to Waddington's sister, and it is understood that the crime was due to an intimation by Balmaceda of his intention to break off the engagement.

LABOR BILL IN COMMONS.

Ministry Indorses First Measure Introduced by New Party.

LONDON, March 2.—In the House of Commons to-day the members of the Labor Party scored a success with their first bill of the session, empowering local educational authorities to provide meals for underfed school children.

The Government, through Augustine Birrell, President of the Board of Education, and John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, said it would endeavor to secure the passage of the measure this session.

Sir Charles Dilke's bill providing for the enfranchisement of women and the removal of their political disabilities was introduced and discussed, but there is no probability of its revival during the present session.

COLOMBIA ANGRY AGAIN.

Minister Quit Washington When Arbitration Offer Was Rejected.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Since the United States rejected Colombia's offer to submit the question of an indemnity asked for from this country on account of the revolution in Panama to arbitration the Colombian Minister, Señor Mendoza, has been absent from Washington. He is supposed to be in New York, though his whereabouts are unknown.

It is feared that Colombia, irritated by the second rejection of its demands, may decide once more to break off relations with the United States, and that the Minister's departure was only the first step taken on his way home.

VENEZUELA REVOLT PLANNED.

Revolutionists Are Said to be Concentrating in Trinidad.

LED TO CHINESE BOYCOTT.

Treatment of a Wealthy Family in Boston Caused the Movement.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—William Hancock, for the past thirty-one years a resident of China and a Commissioner of Customs there, arrived here yesterday on the liner Hongkong on his way to England. Speaking of the situation in China he said:

"The principal causes of the present unsettled condition are the dissatisfaction in southern China over the indemnity resulting from the Boxer outbreak which occurred in northern China, and the outrageous treatment accorded to the wealthy King family of China by a customs officer in Boston when King and his family were en route from England to China by way of this country. King and his family were treated as ordinary coolies, and the head of the family was furious over the matter. I think he was the real instigator of the boycott."

W. S. Allen, Canton agent for a flour company, who arrived from the Orient yesterday, said the situation in China was very serious.

"The principal element in the agitation is the newspaper agitation," he said. "The Chinese newspapers have progressed wonderfully. They are at last alive to the general situation of affairs throughout the world and they are becoming a powerful weapon.

"It is foolish to say that the boycott or the reform movement in general is weakening. It would be more correct to say that the movement is just beginning. I think the whole trouble could be compromised by allowing the coolies access to the Philippines and Hawaii."

Mr. Allen was recalled from China on account of the paralysis of his firm's Chinese business since the boycott began.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 2.—News is brought by the Empress of India that a feature of the Chinese national movement is the establishment of a Chinese independent Christian church, the plan being to oust all the foreign missionaries.

A Chinese Presbyterian pastor from San Francisco is at the head of the movement at Shanghai, where $10,000 has been subscribed for the organization of the Chinese independent church.

CHINA ENGAGES GOODNOW.

Ex-Consul General Is Now Foreign Adviser at Nanking.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 2.—Advices received by the steamer Empress of India are to the effect that John Goodnow, ex-Consul General at Shanghai, has been appointed Foreign Adviser at Nanking at a salary of $500 a month.

KING EDWARD'S TOUR BEGUN.

He Will Spend Three Days in Paris—To Meet the Kaiser, Perhaps.

LONDON, March 2.—The Duke of Lancaster, as King Edward will be known for two months, left this evening for a holiday in Paris and Biarritz and a subsequent cruise in the Mediterranean.

The King, who is attended only by Gen. Sir Stanley Clarke and the Hon. Sidney Greville, will spend the night on board the royal yacht at Portsmouth, leaving early to-morrow morning for Cherbourg, and will arrive in Paris in the evening. He will stay at the British Embassy in Paris until Tuesday, and in the course of his visit to the French capital will see President Faillière, whom he has not yet met.

From Paris the King will go to Biarritz and will stay there until the end of March, afterward going on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert in the Mediterranean.

During his stay at Biarritz King Edward will see King Alfonso and discuss the details of the latter's marriage with Princess Ena of Battenberg.

The King's tour creates great interest on account of its political possibilities and its bearing on the Algeciras Conference. A meeting between King Edward and Emperor William is talked of both in London and Berlin, but no official basis for such talk is ascertainable. It seems certain that no definite plans for a meeting have been made by either monarch, and one is not likely to take place unless the Algeciras Conference reaches an amicable conclusion, in which case it is thought probable that the monarchs may meet toward the end of April in Greek waters on the occasion of the Olympian Games.

In Vienna the opinion is expressed that Germany has found herself so isolated at Algeciras that she feels the need of displaying to the world her desire for Anglo-German friendship.

MADRID, March 2.—King Alfonso will go to San Sebastian on Monday and will receive King Edward there. Later King Alfonso will go to Biarritz to return King Edward's visit.

The Spanish King will afterward proceed to Versailles and visit his fiancée, Princess Ena of Battenberg, returning here in time to receive the King of Portugal, who will visit Madrid on March 12.

JAURES WANTED A DUEL.

French Socialist Leader's Desire to Fight Not Gratified.

PARIS, March 2.—In the course of a discussion in the Chamber to-day on a resolution requesting the War Minister to allow officers to bring actions in the civil courts the debate became most violent. M. Auffray, Nationalist, and M. Jaurès, the Socialist leader, exchanged abuse and the sitting was suspended.

Later, M. Jaurès sent his seconds to meet the seconds of M. Auffray and make arrangements for a duel.

The meeting of the seconds resulted in a decision that a duel was unnecessary.

MINISTER KATO OUT.

Mikado Accepts Resignation of Head of Foreign Office.

LONDON, Saturday, March 3.—A dispatch from Tokio to The Daily Telegraph reports that the Emperor has accepted the resignation of Count Takakiro Kato, the Foreign Minister.

Field Marshal Yamagata, President of the Privy Council, and a member of the Military Council of the Empire, is, according to the correspondent, the principal supporter of the proposition for the nationalization of the railways on strategical grounds.

$5,000 FINE FOR BERTHS.

Folding Beds Installed by Two Steamer Lines Pronounced Unlawful.

Because two steamship companies, which operate between New York and Mediterranean ports, have put into use folding berths for steerage passengers, they have been sentenced to pay to the Government fines of $5,000 each.

The lines have recently at heavy cost equipped the steerage quarters with berths which, when not in use, can be folded up out of the way. The space thus made was used for tables.

Collector Stranahan was informed yesterday by Lawrence O. Murray, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, that the use of such berths was in violation of the Passenger Act, and Francis E. Hamilton, solicitor to the Collector, announced that fines of $5,000 would have to be paid.

The companies will appeal.

CONVERT TO SOCIALISM QUITS DUNNE'S CABINET

J. M. Patterson Wants No Skin-Deep Measures.

POINTS FAILURES ABROAD

Says Municipal Trading in Great Britain and Public Ownership in Germany Do Not Aid Poor.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Commissioner of Public Works Joseph Medill Patterson has tendered his resignation to Mayor Dunne. The resignation was sent on Wednesday, but was not publicly known until to-day. A copy mailed by Mr. Patterson at Washington was received by the press here.

After a review of the present situation in all branches of Mr. Patterson's department, the letter says:

"It was through a common belief in the cause of municipal ownership of municipal utilities that I first became acquainted with you, and in this letter of resignation I desire to express publicly just how my views on this subject have changed. They have not diminished. They have enlarged. I used to believe that many of the ills under which the Nation suffers, and by which it is threatened, would be prevented or avoided by the general inauguration of public ownership of public utilities. But my experience in the Department of Public Works has convinced me that this policy would not be even one-fourth of the way sufficient."

In Great Britain, he declares, where municipal trading has been highly and successfully developed, the problem of the unemployed is becoming of tremendous and sad intensity. In Germany, where Government ownership of railroads has been inaugurated and municipal ownership of public utilities is paramount, the poor are growing poorer and the rich richer with an acceleration hardly less than that "so evident in the United States." The letter concludes:

"The universal ballot gives every male citizen an equal political opportunity. The common ownership of all the means of production and distribution would give everybody an equal chance at music, art, sport, study, recreation, travel, self-respect, and the respect of others. I, for one, cannot see why those things should be concentrated more and more in the hands of a few.

"Two hundred years ago a proposition for equal political opportunity would have seemed more absurd than to-day seems the proposition for equal opportunity in all things on this earth for which men strive.

"I have hardly read a book on Socialism, but that which I have just enunciated I believe in general to be its theory. If it be its theory I am a Socialist. You will find, and other advanced liberals and radicals who believe as I do, will also find, that you are merely paltering with skin-deep measures when you stop short of Socialism."

Mayor Dunne at once wrote to Mr. Patterson, accepting his resignation and promising to reply to his letter in the near future.

"I have accepted the resignation of Mr. Patterson with sincere regret," said the Mayor. "He says that he has resigned because he is a Socialist. I do not think that it was necessary for him to resign. Because he cannot accomplish everything the Socialists want accomplished, he evidently has become disheartened."

Patterson is the grandson of the late Joseph Medill, founder of The Chicago Tribune, and son of R. W. Patterson, editor in chief of the paper. He was graduated from Yale about six years ago, and after serving in various capacities on The Tribune was made an editorial writer.

He espoused the cause of municipal ownership last year, resigned from The Tribune, and took the stump for Dunne. After the election he was made Commissioner of Public Works. He has added large sums to the city revenue by compelling corporations to pay the city for privileges used. He also put the Water Department on a business footing, and has shaken out many small grafters from his department.

"I resigned because I felt that if I remained in the Dunne administration I would be expected to advocate the election of a municipal ownership ticket. This I felt I could not do. If I take part in politics it will have to be on the Socialist side," said Mr. Patterson in this city last night. "Judge Dunne is the best Mayor Chicago ever had, but he does not carry his ideas far enough."

Discussing his conversion to Socialism, Mr. Patterson said:

"When we say that things should be divided equally we mean that every man should have a chance. Men like Schwab and Carnegie have risen from poor young men to wealth; but they are the extraordinary young men. The ordinary young man is not able to rise above his birth, and the extraordinary young man is one in a million.

"I don't mean that all the money in the country should be cut up into equal parts. What I mean is that the people should own in common all the means of production, the sources of wealth, and divide the results. The talk of economical equality is no more ridiculous now than was the talk of social equality years ago.

"Suppose Alfred G. Vanderbilt has $5,000,000 invested in his railroads. Say there are 25,000 employes. Out of his investment he receives, say, 5 per cent., which is $250,000 a year. He doesn't turn a wheel, he doesn't move a locomotive, he doesn't do a thing for the railroad. He simply owns it. He doesn't contribute toward making the road safe. Those men earn so much money for him. Suppose he should give them what they earn, instead of taking it himself?

"My idea is to have things equally divided so that when a man dies his children shall not inherit wealth."

Then Mr. Patterson explained that as long as wealth was centred and unearned consolidation was inevitable. To this remark he added:

"There is nothing more ridiculous than the Sherman anti-trust law."

Socialists, he said, gradually would obtain control of the City of Chicago. This would be followed by control of other cities and finally of the country. He spoke of the Luncheon Club in Chicago, which has twenty-five members, well-to-do men, all of whom had imbibed the Socialist idea.

"You would be surprised at the extent of latent Socialism in Chicago," he said. "I may be wrong in my ideas, but there are many people who know that existing conditions are wrong and who are groping for the right thing.

"I found that small consumers of water were paying 10 cents a thousand," said Mr. Patterson, speaking of conditions in Chicago. "The large consumers, twenty-one of them, including the stock yards and other interests, were using more than 10,000,000 gallons each a month, paying 4 cents. I asked for a flat rate, and recommended 8 cents. I didn't care what it was as long as it was a flat rate for all. But the ordinance never went through. I don't believe it ever will."

HOPKINS WILL CASE APPEAL.

Contest Over $2,000,000 Estate Will Reach Court of Appeals.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 2.—The contest over the will of Major Robert E. Hopkins of Tarrytown, which has been pending in the courts for about four years, is to be continued.

To-day Joseph W. Middlebrook, as guardian of Robert E. Hopkins, a son of the testator, filed a notice of appeal to the Court of Appeals from the decision of the Appellate Division sustaining the order of Justice Keogh, who refused to set aside the verdict of a jury, which declared the will valid. The Hopkins estate is valued at $2,000,000.

BANKER AN ANGRY WITNESS.

Wants to Tell Whole Story, Not Half, at Cincinnati Inquiry.

CINCINNATI, March 2.—At the session to-day of the Drake Committee, named by the Senate to investigate public offices in Cincinnati and Hamilton County, and which continued its inquiry into the Treasurer's office, Charles H. Davis, President of the Second National Bank, had to be quieted by the Sergeant at Arms. He resented the inquiries of the members of the committee, and said he wanted to tell the whole story and not give a half account in answer to questions.

"The bank never paid for the use of county funds, although it had at times from $50,000 to $200,000," he said. "But I may have paid some subordinate in the Treasurer's office. No account was kept of it at the bank, and I did not tell the Bank Examiner because it had nothing to do with the bank's account or the County Treasurer."

He was asked if he had reported the bank's expenses to the Controller of the Treasury, and he retorted:

"You make me tired; that's none of your business, and none of his."

Asked if he had ever given the Treasurer any gratuities, he said:

"I might have given him $5,100 or $150, but I never gave him anything. I gave it to Scholl. Don't get to digging too deep; some of the fellows with good reputations might not be so good if I get back. I want to tell you all, but if you ask me anything of my private affairs I will tell you it is none of your business."

Mr. Davis and the committee's attorneys exchanged sharp repartee, but little information resulted. The witness, however, said he had given several presents of money to Scholl of the Treasurer's office, but had kept no record of the gifts, and could not recall the amounts.

The committee to-night issued a warrant for the arrest of Thomas J. Davis, cashier of the First National Bank, who has disregarded the subpoenas and failed to appear before the committee.

DOLAN REPUDIATES ELECTION.

Pittsburg Miners' President and Officers to Ignore Result.

PITTSBURG, March 2.—Nominations for officers of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, closed last night, and the names of all candidates to be voted for at the special election on March 24 are now in the hands of Secretary Dodds. There are from five to eight candidates for each office.

Patrick Dolan's name appears among those suggested for the Presidency, but he refuses to take any part in the election and declares he will continue at the head of the organization, be the result what it may. Vice President Uriah Bellingham and several members of the District Board also assert that they will not retire from office if defeated.

Mr. Dolan has overtaxed his eyes recently by night work, and he has been under special treatment, but there is said to be no danger of his losing his sight.

The report that the visit of President Baer of the Jersey Central Railroad to Washington was that he might confer with President Roosevelt on the anthracite coal situation having proved unfounded, all that was left to President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers and his committee yesterday was to wait at the Ashland House for developments. The demands, it is now admitted on both sides, have been received by Mr. Baer, and the operators' committee will meet next week to consider them.

It was stated last night that the coming National Convention of Miners on March 15, called as a result of the Roosevelt letter, will be composed of delegates from all the districts, bituminous and anthracite.

CITY'S PERIL FROM DYNAMITE.

Most Careless Blasting in the World Here, Says a Witness.

The Aldermanic Committee on Laws and Legislation held a public hearing yesterday on the use of explosives.

Dr. Charles F. McKenna of 155 West Ninetieth Street, a chemist, said that the danger to residents of New York from the careless handling of high explosives by incompetent workmen was great. Continuing, he added:

"I wrote to Mayor McClellan about the matter, and I challenge him to produce my letters. I lay at the door of the Mayor the responsibility for the present unsafe conditions. It is the one great disgrace of his administration."

P. J. Hallaran, who said he was a miner, told the committee that he had worked in the Battery tunnel and that the way in which explosives were handled there was a constant menace.

He said that the careless manner in which blasting was conducted in New York beat anything in the world. He knew where 100 pounds of dynamite had been used in one blast where 25 pounds was sufficient.

POLICEMAN CAME IN HANDY.

Overheard an Interesting Subway Chat and Made an Arrest.

Patrolman George H. Petersen, who is employed as an operator in the Telegraph Bureau at Police Headquarters, was bound for home on a Subway train early last night. Petersen was in citizen's attire. The crowded train was between the Seventy-ninth and Eighty-sixth Street stations, when Petersen heard a conversation between two passengers who were hanging to straps near by.

"Give me back my pin!" demanded one of the passengers.

"I haven't got it," replied the other.

"Yes, you've got it; I saw you take it," said the first.

By the time Petersen had worked up alongside the two passengers, he heard the one who had been first addressed say in conciliatory tones:

"All right, I'll give it back, if you'll promise not to have me 'pinched.'"

The first passenger assented, but when the Eighty-sixth Street station had been reached and the other passenger, instead of giving the pin back, made for the door and ran up the Subway stairs with the loser in pursit, Petersen took a hand in the chase and overtook the fugitive.

The young man was registered at Police Headquarters as Thomas Lewis, 22, of 234 West Thirty-fourth Street. The man who lost the pin was E. B. Woodward of Nyack.

ODELL SHOULD GET OUT BECAUSE HE'S UNPOPULAR

Dictum from Marcus Braun at a Hungarian Jubilee.

HIS CLUB ISN'T SUPPORTED

Merely Political Indigestion, Says Julius Mayer—Greene Called the Best Police Commissioner.

The Hungarian Republican Club, famed as the host of President Roosevelt last year, celebrated its tenth anniversary last night at the Café Boulevard by a jubilee dinner. Marcus Braun, once again a special agent of the Department of Immigration, as well as President of the club, presided. Among the guests were Chairman Herbert Parsons of the County Republican Committee, Attorney General Mayer, ex-Police Commissioner Francis V. Greene, and Congressman Goldfogle. Mr. Goldfogle was the only Democrat present, but he evidently enjoyed himself.

Attorney General Mayer made the trip from Albany especially to be present. Gen. Greene came all the way from his home in Buffalo. Everybody sat down in the best of spirits.

Deputy Attorney General Blau was toastmaster. He told of the origin of the Hungarian Republican Club, saying that it was organized for the purpose of making good Americans of immigrants from Hungary, and that it had achieved its ends nobly. He spoke of the President of the United States and the interest he had always taken in the organization. At that there was a cheer which seemed as though it would take the roof off.

Then came President Braun, who said that the club had not nearly fulfilled its destiny because of the lack of support it had received from the political parties. He took a fling at Chairman Odell and ex-County Chairman Halpin by saying that at the last election many members of the club voted against the Republican ticket rather than support Odell's leadership.

"I have nothing to say against Mr. Odell personally," Mr. Braun declared, "but he is unpopular and an unpopular man has no business in politics. It is time for him to get out."

"My friend Marcus Braun," said Attorney General Mayer, who followed, "has his usual case of political indigestion. I never saw him when he wasn't sore on somebody, but never with the fellow he was talking to. He has come to me in the past and denounced everything and everybody, always winding up with the assertion that he was my friend.

"Brace up, Marcus, and look on the bright side of things. To be sure, you are barred by the Constitution from the Presidency of the United States, but with thousands of estimable citizens you have the privilege of saving the country every day in the year."

Then, dropping his tone of levity, the Attorney General seriously advised the club not to quarrel with political leadership unless every member was ready to do his share of the work. He said that the people always got just the leaders they deserved, no better and no worse.

Ex-Police Commissioner Greene asked to say a word of warning. "There is a feeling of unrest," he declared, "through the country. It behooves every good citizen to stick fast to his American principles. Be not blown about by every wind of doctrine. Be not intoxicated by word pictures of liberty, but remember that the liberty you enjoy is only possible under the law. Hold fast to the time-tried principles of Americanism."

Herbert Parsons, the next speaker, said that Gen. Greene had sounded the keynote, and added: "He was the best Police Commissioner New York ever had, and from what I can see, the best Commissioner New York is ever likely to have."

This statement made a hit with the crowd. When the laughter had died away Mr. Parsons told something of the policy which was being pursued in the County Committee under his leadership.

"There was never a time in the history of the party," he said, "when fuller, freer discussion was indulged in regarding all matters pertaining to party welfare. Of course, everything cannot be done in a day, but everybody may rest assured of having a voice in the party deliberations, and in time everything will work out right."

Congressman Goldfogle and Sam Koening, Republican leader of the Sixteenth Assembly District, also spoke. After the dinner the club members and their guests adjourned to the Café Monopole, across the street, where the celebration of their jubilee was continued.

Letters of regret were read from Vice President Fairbanks, Gov. Higgins, and others. Gov. Higgins wrote: "I sincerely believe that the Winter of 1906 has been the busiest, for the occupant of the Gubernatorial chair, since the civil war."

Her Savings of a Lifetime Gone.

Giuseppe Marinardo and Salvator Marone were arraigned in the Long Island City Court yesterday and remanded, pending the efforts of the police to find $1,600 belonging to Mrs. Camelia Dargenio of 185 Potter Avenue, Astoria. The money represents the savings of a lifetime. The prisoners boarded with the woman, who thinks they know what became of her money.

MEN'S SPRING CLOTHING: Opening.

The Greatest Values Ever Offered.

THE LOESER STORE FOR MEN HAS PROVED ITSELF. Its differences from ordinary Clothing Stores are demonstrated. Its clientele will need but the announcement that the new Spring styles are here now in considerable showing to come in for first selections.

But it has become customary for us to start each season with a special sale; to offer values better than can be given regularly; to bid for new business and a wider acquaintanceship by offerings which are extraordinary.

This important occasion is announced for to-day. The values are the best we ever had. The Clothes are also the best we ever had. It is such a chance as has never before come in Brooklyn.

These Facts Are Worth Special Attention.

All of the Clothes in this sale are absolutely new—designed and made exclusively for us. They stand for what we shall sell in the season now to come at our regular prices. They stand for Loeser style and fit and workmanship. They are we believe better in many ways than any other ready-for-service Clothes to be found in this vicinage. They are certainly, at our regular prices, the best values in ready-for-service Clothes to be found anywhere.

It is easy to judge, therefore, of the importance of this opening offer of this new Spring Clothing for so much under our regular prices.

Spring Sack Suits at $12.50, Our Regular Prices, $18 to $22.

Two hundred and six new Suits just from our makers and in eight new patterns, of fancy worsteds and worsted effects. The coat is a new, long style, but not extreme. Rather the style that most business men will prefer. All sizes for all men and some particularly smart effects for young men. The same fabrics made up in the same way will be here at the regular prices when this lot is gone—and will be then the best values in Brooklyn.

Men's Spring Derbies at $1.75, Regularly $2.50 and $3.

The Hat Store is in line with one of the best offerings that was ever made at a season's start.

There are twelve dozen of these Hats—that's all. But every one of them is new and fine and in correct Spring style. Every one was specially ordered for this opening occasion, and instead of the usual $2.50 and $3, they will be priced at $1.75

It is easy to imagine how speedily they will disappear.

Rain-or-Shine Coats at $15, Our Regular Price $20.

A handsome, long, smart Overcoat on clear days and a shower proof garment when it storms. These new Coats—50 in the sale—were made for us of a fine, neat, gray mixed, pure worsted, hard faced cloth, Priestley cravenetted.

Silk-Lined Overcoats at $15, Our Regular Price $22.

Ninety-six fine, new Spring Overcoats of black and Oxford vicuna-faced coating. Each one of them is silk lined and faced to the edge. Each one is splendidly tailored and a long, graceful Chesterfield model with perfectly fitting collar. Sizes to fit all men.

Oil Paintings at $25 and $50.

Unusually Fine and a Third Under Value.

THE MOST IMPORTANT COLLECTION of framed Oil Paintings we ever had for such small prices will to-day make a considerable exhibition in two rooms of the Art Gallery. There has been no better illustration of the success of the Loeser effort to bring really good Paintings within reach of a modest expenditure.

This list gives some hint of the variety, but there is considerable range for choice in sizes of the canvases as well as in subjects.

JOHNS HOPKINS ALUMNI HEAR OF OSLER'S WOES

His Name Now a Verb, He Travels Incog., Dr. Remsen Says.

FAMOUS SPEECH DISTORTED

President of University Tells of Dr. Gilman and Dr. Gildersleeve, Both 75 but Active.

Dr. Osler was the theme at the annual dinner of the John Hopkins Alumni in New York, held last night at the University Club. It was declared that he had suffered from faulty reports of his famous address in which he made himself the champion of young men's ambitions and was reputed to have suggested the killing off of their elders.

Incidentally Dr. Ira Remsen, President of Johns Hopkins, pointed out that two of the most valuable members of the Faculty were five years over the allotted threescore and ten.

Dr. Remsen said:

"You will ask about the old guard and how they are getting on. Dr. Daniel Gilman, the first President, and Dr. Gildersleeve, Professor of Greek, are now each 75 years old, and they were never in better health and power. They have all the enthusiasm of youth. Both are towers of strength to our Faculty, and we believe they will be for many years to come.

"We are in a forward movement. We are cheerful and without financial uncertainty. That day is past and the days grow brighter. When I came to the university there were many with long faces. I asked them what they wanted, and offered to give them anything they needed. This pleased them, and they could not really tell me what they wanted. They had been used to complaining in the hard times.

"We are now in the healthy condition of spending all our income. This is the spirit of our Board of Trustees, making it pleasant to carry on our work. I hope before the end of this year to announce the appointment of certain decidedly conspicuous men in our university.

"We suffered a great loss when Dr. Osler resigned and went to a place he should never have gone to. His name suggests the notoriety of a year ago. If those who quote Osler quoted him rightly they would not have quoted him as they did.

"It is a common error of the world to attribute to him nonsensical remarks he never said. I would explain, except that I might be a second to have my name changed into a verb. He has had to travel incognito since the misquotation of his remarks.

"He went to Atlantic City incognito after that speech, and he did the same when he went to England. He is a very sensitive man, and if you ever meet him again, don't ask him about his alleged theory.'

"Now, as to athletics, I don't want it to be thought that in our recent improvements we are putting them ahead of education. The Athletic Association has made it possible for us to make it probable that we will have splendid grounds ready for the Autumn games. This is not greatly important, but interesting.

"We are laying out grounds for scientific work. We propose to have houses for the professors put up around our new land. Within a year we will have a settlement on our $1,000,000 sites, given by Messrs. Wyman and Keyser.

"There is a tendency toward shortening the courses for the Doctors of Philosophy. Now, that is out of the question. It cannot be done in two years. We will never lower the standard of our degrees. There is a tendency to cheapen this graduate work, and competition among institutions of learning for graduate students. There are traveling men to drum them up from our great schools, and it is unwholesome. We even get letters asking what can be done by us for the signers. We answer that we are not in the 'soup-house' business. We make no special efforts except to do good work. If graduate students want a stipend they had better go somewhere else. This is even a bad feature of our theological seminaries. Something must be done to change it.

"We are often asked what we are going to do with our graduates. We find it difficult to find sufficient men of the scientific school to meet the requirements of manufacturers. This is particularly true of our chemists."

Dr. John S. Billings, Director of the New York Public Library, was the next speaker. He said in part:

"This is a period of unrest and dangers. As a Librarian I gather something of this from the reference libraries. The people want books on railroad rates, taxation, and other subjects of present vital moment. With them come those who seek the best versions of ancient philosophers. There are even those who want works on mysticism, occultism, and every other useless thing. It is an age of unrest.

"I don't believe arbitration has conquered fighting. That is not over. The material of explosion exists, and will exist, as far as I can see. Human nature is the same as it was, and there are great changes to come. We all know that, even those of us in the libraries. We are in an age of changes, and it is well that Johns Hopkins is turning out experienced men for these times.

"Another thing I would emphasize to you men of research is that you cannot do everything at once. It would be a great pity if you men of science should discover everything at once. I am glad that there is an amazing work of research still to be done."

At the conclusion of the dinner the followin officers for the ensuing year were elected: Charles L. Poor, President; Henry Dallas Thompson, Second Vice President; Philip Hanson Hiss, Secretary; Morris Putnam Stevens, Treasurer; H. S. Bird, Chronicler.

Secretary Hiss was absent, it being his wedding day. Edward M. Shepard was also absent because he had to attend the meeting of the Mayor's Finance Committee. A telegram of congratulation was sent to Philip Hanson Hiss and his bride.

Attorney General Denies Application for Action Against It.

ALBANY, March 2.—Attorney General Mayer to-day denied the application of Arthur Turnure that an action be instituted under the Code of Civil Procedure to require the officers of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of New York City to render an accounting of their trust.

The Attorney General denies the application because the Board of Managers of the society is engaged in reforming conditions spoken of in the complaint. Gen. Charles F. Roe of the Board of Managers of the society wrote to the Attorney General a reply to the charges in which he said in part:

"The questions raised in this application are already receiving the attention of the Board of Managers of the society and will be solved, and any reforms found necessary or desirable will be instituted from within the society.

"Mr. Turnure is not and never has been a member of this society. So far as I know no request has been made to you from within the society, and in my opinion an investigation on your part is not necessary and would not be desirable, and it might, on the other hand, embarrass and interfere with the work which the society now has well in hand.

"I may add that the society makes annual reports to the Legislature of this State."

ALBANY, March 2.—Bills introduced to-day of interest to New York were:

Hartman—Making a misdemeanor the acceptance by pawnbrokers of mechanics' tools, unless the person presenting them shall make affidavit that they are his personal property.

Lee (of Kings)—Authorizing the Commission of Charities to complete abolishment of the Potter's Field of Kings County and transfer it to some island belonging to New York City.

Farnam—Imposing a fine of from $100 to $500 for selling cigarettes.

Whitley—Giving State Hospital employes compensation for service on legal holidays, or their equivalent in time, and making ten hours the legal working day.

Wainwright—Requiring trust companies in New York to keep a reserve fund equal to at least 15 per cent. of the aggregate of their deposits.

Lupton—Providing that banks and trust companies may not lend exceeding a tenth part of capital stock actually paid in.

NICE YOUNG WAITER A THIEF.

Fourteen Boarders Go to the Police Station to Tell Their Losses.

Fifteen men and women walked into the West Twentieth Street Police Station last night, and in double column lined up in front of the Sergeant's desk.

"We have been robbed," they said in chorus. Then, for fully forty-five minutes, Sergt. Gilmartin listened to fifteen different versions of the perfidy of a fair-haired boy waiter, and made copious notes of articles that disappeared with him. At the end of the complaints, one and all wound up with, "he was such a nice boy, too."

The leader of the visitors was Mrs. O'Connell, who keeps a boarding house at 329 West Fourteenth Street. For some time Mrs. O'Connell has had great trouble in keeping a waiter who satisfied her boarders. On Thursday, in answer to many advertisements, a tall young man, who had curly fair hair, and was very good looking, applied for the place. He wore a frock coat. He told such a straight and appealing story of needing work that Mrs. O'Connell hired him on the spot. The new waiter charmed the boarders. They changed their minds yesterday.

The fourteen boarders had been out all day. When they reached their rooms at night all fourteen missed belongings. New suits of clothing and watches and trinkets of various kinds were not to be found. No one escaped a loss. Then it was found that the young waiter had gone. The young man left in one room a picture of himself. The detectives have the picture. They haven't his name, because nobody had thought to ask him what it was.

THINKS ROGERS MAY ANSWER.

Mr. Wollman Hopeful of Results at Standard Oil Hearing.

The taking of further testimony in the case of the State of Missouri against the Standard Oil Company before Commissioner Sanborn was postponed yesterday by consent of all parties to March 15. It is expected that Attorney General Hadley will then have returned to New York. After the adjournment yesterday Henry Wollman, New York counsel for the State of Missouri, said:

"It seems reasonable to believe that the Standard Oil Company must by this time recognize the futility of its efforts not to reveal the ownership of the stock in the three companies which are respondents in the Missouri proceeding, and I would not, therefore, be surprised if at the hearing on March 15 Mr. Rogers answers without further efforts at delay, all the questions relating to stock ownership which he has hitherto declined to answer."

HELD FOR IMPERSONATION.

Water Employe Charged with Passing Examination for Another Man.

Charged with impersonating another in passing a civil service examination, Edward H. Pierce, an axman, employed in the Department of Water Supply of the Borough of Brooklyn, was arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday before Magistrate Steinert. Pierce was committed to the Tombs for examination next Monday.

Pierce is charged with having passed an examination of the Board of Civil Service for the position of axman in the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity on Aug. 17, 1904, under the name of Lee Curtis, who was appointed to the position of axman from the eligible list two weeks ago.

Curtis was taken to the office of the District Attorney, where, it is said, he confessed that he had paid Pierce to take the examination for him. Little information was given out regarding the case by the District Attorney's office, and the impression prevails that more arrests are impending.

KILLED BY FATHER'S GUN.

Boy Accidentally Shoots Himself in the Back—Mother Heard the Shot.

John Haggerty, the 9-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Haggerty of Sussex Borough, near Orange, N. J., accidentally shot and killed himself at his home yesterday. The boy was in the parlor playing with his father's shotgun. Just how he shot himself is not known, and a peculiar feature of the accident is that the charge entered the boy's back.

Mrs. Haggerty was in a near-by room. When she heard the shot she rushed into the parlor, where she found her boy dead. She fainted. It is likely that an inquest will be held and an effort made to discover how the boy shot himself in the back. The only theory advanced is that the gun fell.

COURT REPROVES ELY IN THE CLAICHE TRIAL

Rebukes Prosecutor for His Treatment of Policeman.

GENDRON'S PARTING THREAT

Said He'd Kill Berthe Claiche, Testifies Policeman Morton—Tenderloin Police Inquiry May Follow Trial.

The spectators attending the trial of Berthe Claiche, in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court for the murder of Emile Gendron have proved, day by day, as interesting as the legal proceedings. The women, of whom a score have been constant attendants, attract most attention. Conspicuous among them have been a half dozen loudly attired women who have occupied seats in the part of the court usually reserved for lawyers not trying a case.

This little cluster of women, all of whom know each other and none of whom is known to the reporters, have followed the proceedings with a closeness indicating an interest going beyond that of mere curiosity. Yesterday, while Policeman Henry Morton spent a bad day on the stand, they betrayed excitement which at times bordered on hysteria. Two or three of them sniffled repeatedly as if they could hold back their tears only with the greatest difficulty. As Assistant District Attorney Ely's questions became sharper and sharper the group of women were heard to reiterate plaintively:

"Poor Harry, poor Harry!"

The one cool person in the room was Berthe Claiche, the defendant. Much has been said and written to arouse sympathy on her behalf. As she leaned far back in her chair yesterday listening complacently to the ready answers of the young and rather good looking policeman who has been charged with being her closest friend and accomplice her face was as free from any emotion as if it had been modeled out of glass. It would not do to say "out of stone," for that material would be softer in contour. Her behavior has been the same during the whole trial, except on last Thursday. Then she cried three times.

Policeman Morton was on the stand some six hours yesterday, leaving it just before 4 o'clock in the afternoon to give room to Irma Claiche, the thirteen-year-old sister of Berthe. Mr. Ely's methods of cross-examination were such that Mr. Levy objected to them as "abusive, insulting, and improper in every way." Once the prosecuting attorney went far enough to draw upon himself a stinging rebuke from the court.

"Where is your shield?" he called to the witness. For answer Morton took it from his pocket and pinned it on the front of his coat.

"Better keep it while you have it," remarked Mr. Ely savagely.

Mr. Levy was on his feet in a moment to object.

"That remark is a most improper one," said Justice Davis sternly to Mr. Ely.

No hammering by the people's attorney could shake Morton. He denied everything told to his disadvantage by the other policemen concerned in the case, including Martineau and Bellafer. The alleged conversation between himself and the defendant in the drug store and in the patrol wagon never took place, Morton asserted. On the other hand, he testified with great positiveness that twice, immediately after the arrest of Gendron, he had to prevent the Frenchman from drawing a revolver, and that, at last Gendron turned and called in English to Berthe:

"If you have me pinched, I'll kill you when I get out."

Other witnesses have testified either that Gendron cried something in French that they could not understand, or that he did not say anything of that kind at all. On one occasion yesterday Morton was made to enact the scene preceding the shooting, Mr. Levy taking the part of Gendron. He denied that there had ever been an improper relationship between himself and the accused woman.

Some of the things told by Morton on the stand concerning his own acts while a member of the vice squad, as well as concerning other members, convinced most of those who heard him that a thorough investigation of parts of the police force, and in particular of the Tenderloin precinct, has been made inevitable by this trial. Mr. Levy openly charged Morton, Bellafer, Martineau, and others with collecting money from the women they were set to watch and, at the same time, with carrying on improper relationships with them.

The trial will be resumed on Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Berthe Claiche is not expected to go on the stand until Tuesday, as the defense has nearly a dozen witnesses to be heard before she is called.

A GLASSWARE INJUNCTION.

Department Stores Temporarily Restrained from Selling Tiffany Imitations.

Justice Blanchard in the Supreme Court granted temporary injunctions yesterday against the proprietors of five department stores restraining them from selling or offering for sale, certain glassware which it is alleged is an imitation of that made at the Tiffany Studios of Madison Avenue and Forty-fifth Street.

They are also ordered to show cause in the Supreme Court on March 7 why they should not be permanently enjoined from selling or offering for sale the glassware under the name of Tiffany glassware.

Gets $20,085 from Marie Estate.

The jury which tried the suit brought in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Emily Linden against the estate of Peter Marié returned a verdict yesterday in favor of the plaintiff, awarding Mrs. Linden $20,085. She sued for $30,000, which she asserted she had given to Mr. Marié to invest for her just before his death. She alleged that he had invested the money in stocks and bonds. Yesterday's was the second trial of the suit.

With Especial Reference to the Line of Men's Suits, Top Coats and Raincoats at $12.50.

Whatever the weather may be outside, it is Spring in the Clothing Store. We are done with Winter Clothing and hail the showing of the new Spring styles.

If there is any one left hereabouts who holds the old-fashioned opinion that style and good service cannot be given in ready-to-wear clothing at a moderate price, we can switch him to the established contrary knowledge in a ten-minute interview in the presence of these Spring models.

Distinctive Styles for Men at $12.50.

We present the $12.50 line for men as our strongest argument. We have clothing at much higher prices, of course, but style and quality are naturally to be expected there, and it is easy to give them at $18 and upward. It is NOT easy to produce suits of really high quality, strictly man-tailored, made from the finer classes of woolens, at $12.50. But we have done it. We show you

Men's Single-Breasted Sack Suits at $12.50,
Men's Double-Breasted Sack Suits at $12.50,
Men's Spring Top Coats at $12.50,
Men's Cravenette Rain Coats at $12.50, that will be a revelation to the public as to the power of moderate prices in this store.

Special attention has also been given to the Exclusive Styles in Youths' Clothing at $7.50, which will be found perfectly to answer the dress question for the fastidious young man of 16 to 20 years. Mothers of boys will find

A Superb Line of Boys' Suits at $3, consisting of Blouse, Norfolk, and Russian models, with all the latest and most effective touches of the children's tailors.

FEEBLE INFERNAL MACHINE

Sent to a Jewish Newspaper Office—Not Dangerous at Worst.

An infernal machine of flimsy construction that could not have done much harm, even if it had worked, was received yesterday at the office of The Jewish Daily Times and The Forward, at 175 East Broadway.

The package in which the infernal machine came was opened by Irving Altman, a clerk in the business office. The machine consisted of a box about six inches long, with a sliding lid, resembling the pencil boxes used by school children. On the under side of the lid was a strip of sandpaper placed so as to ignite some matches when the lid was being pushed back. On the bottom of the box were three 44-calibre revolver shells, with the bullets removed, but filled to the brim with loose powder. The address on the package consisted of the printed headline of The Jewish Daily Times, cut from the editorial page. Altman got scared when he discovered that he was handling an infernal machine, but the lid was slid back without igniting the matches.

Abraham Cahan, proprietor of The Forward, says he believes the machine was sent him by persons who have been angered at editorial articles he has been printing, in which a class of men on the east side known as "listers," who sublease tenements and raise the rents of the tenants, have been attacked. Cahan says he has been successful in exposing and driving many of these men out of business.

SICK OF KENNEDY'S FACE.

So Says "Diamond Jim" Brady's Brother—Detective Put Under Bonds.

Harry Kennedy, a private detective, was put under $500 bail by Magistrate Steinert in the Tombs Court yesterday to insure his good behavior for the next six months. Daniel M. Brady, a brother of "Diamond Jim" Brady, whose horses and marital troubles have figured to the same extent in the newspapers, appeared to complain that Kennedy had been shadowing him day and night wherever he went.

"It does not matter whether I go to Oshkosh or Buffalo," said Mr. Brady, "this man is there ahead of me. I am sick of his face and tired of his company, and want him restrained from chasing me around any longer."

The court thought the bond might settle the shadow.

WHY DOOLEY LOST HIS JOB.

Capt. Hodgins Thinks He Knows and Is Taking Precautions.

Capt. Hodgins of the Tenderloin Station doesn't intend to be hoodwinked by pseudo Deputy Police Commissioners. Yesterday he had a sign hung upon the gas jet of the Sergeant's desk, reading:

None But Superior Officers
Allowed Behind This Desk.

"What's it for?" asked one of his Sergeants.

"To keep the phoney Deputy Commissioners out. They'll get wise when they see that," he replied.

"Ain't you locking the stable door after the horse is gone?" asked the Sergeant.

"Say, you," replied the Captain, winking. "Get wise to that piece of pasteboard. If Dooley'd had it there he'd been here yet. I'm on to my job, you bet!"

FIRED ON SMUGGLERS' BOAT.

Customs Inspector Thinks He Foiled Attempt to Land Contraband Goods.

Pistol shots at the pier of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, in Hoboken, awoke all the residents of the Hoboken river front yesterday morning. The steamship Prinzess Irene had docked Thursday, and Customs Inspector William Karsen was busy around her when he noticed a rowboat pointing for her, under cover of the darkness.

It was between 1 and 2 o'clock, and the courteous official concluded that the three men in the boat intended to help some of the crew get away with smuggled goods. A telephone call summoned police aid. By this time the boat had come close to the vessel's side, but, noticing that they were being watched, its occupants drew off and made for midstream. Several shots were fired at them, with what result is not known.

An hour later the boat crept up to the side of the ship again, and one of the men was seen climbing the rigging of a steam hoisting lighter that lay against the ship's side. Discovered, they almost fell to the lighter's deck and piled into the boat, escaping for the second time in a rain of bullets.

REAL WILDCAT; NOT SPOOK.

A Strange Apparition Startles Pennsylvania Railroaders.

Wildcats, or trains not on regular schedule, are one of the greatest anxieties of railroad crews. One that ran from Jersey City to Philadelphia over Track 3 of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the dark of the moon night before last caused an extra sensation all along the line.

Everybody was looking out for the extra, but when it came there was no crescendo roar and blaze of headlight. Its approach was heralded by the din of a runaway crockery van; instead of the usual great white river of light there were simply two green and white signal lamps, and as the Thing shot by in the darkness it was seen to be no bigger than a coal gondola. It was belching soft-coal smoke from three funnels, and when it came time for the usual full-throated passing whistles, it emitted the shrill squeals of a litter of pigs caught under a farmyard gate.

The fireman of a giant ten-wheeler freight, dragging a hundred cars over the Rahway track tanks, is authority for the statement that his staid old engine shied and tried to run when the queer outfit clattered past, and that the engineer's getting the air on her, quick, was all that stopped her from jumping into the ditch.

The general opinion among the old shellbacks looking for a natural explanation of the phenomenon was that some fool motorist from the New York Sportsmen's Show must be trying an automobile stunt down the line.

But when day broke and the west bounds rolled through the Philadelphia yards it was all very simple. Three of the dinky locomotives that used to haul trains up and down the Ninth Avenue elevated road had been coupled together and sent back to their builders under their own steam.

MAY INCREASE BANK LOANS.

House Committee Favors Bill to Raise Limit in Federal Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The House Committee on Banking and Currency to-day reported to the House favorably a bill increasing the amount of the loan to an individual or corporation that may be made by National banks. The present law limits the amount of such loans to 10 per cent. of the bank's capital stock.

The bill reported provides that the banks may loan an amount equal to 10 per cent. of their capital and surplus. This has the indorsement of bankers all over the country.

SECRET IN HER SHOE.

Mrs. Jerman's Marriage Certificate Fell Out and Mother Found It.

The finding of the marriage certificate tucked away in the bride's shoe told the story in Newark yesterday of the marriage of Miss Anna Marie Higgins of 62 Academy Street to George Herbert Jerman of 183 Charlton Street. The ceremony was performed by a Justice of the Peace on Jan. 26 last, and it was the intention of the couple to keep the matter quiet.

The bride's mother was arranging her daughter's bedroom early yesterday morning, when the certificate fell from one of her shoes. Mrs. Higgins refused to bestow the parental blessing, and Mrs. Jerman will remain at home for a while, while the bridegroom will continue to live with his parents. The bride is but nineteen years old, while the bridegroom is twenty-one.

DOCTOR DYING OF CHLORAL.

Woman Trained Nurse Takes Him to Bellevue in a Cab.

Dr. Felix Pirkner, 36 years old, was taken to Bellevue Hospital last night, suffering from chloral poisoning. A woman who said she was Mrs. George Brook, a trained nurse, went to the hospital with him in a cab. She told the hospital people that Dr. Pirkner lived at 33 West Ninety-seventh Street. From her statements at the hospital the physicians gathered that the chloral was taken accidentally.

It was said early this morning at Bellevue Hospital that Dr. Pirkner was dying. After seeing him in charge of the Bellevue doctors Mrs. Brook departed without giving her address.

MARCH 1906

PATRICK WILL NOW GET ANOTHER STAY

Hearing on New Trial Application Goes Over to April 3.

JEROME MAKES A THREAT

He'll Get a Writ to Produce Patrick in Court if Convicted Man's Counsel Doesn't Do It.

Albert T. Patrick will not be put to death in the week beginning March 18, nor, in fact, at any time this month. An adjournment until April 3 of the hearing on the motion for a new trial was ordered by Recorder Goff in General Sessions yesterday. This will give Patrick at least another month to live. A question by his counsel, Mr. Olcott, whether an executive order for further reprieve would be forthcoming in time received a prompt affirmative answer both from the court and Mr. Jerome. In the meantime both sides will be making preparations for the battle of medical experts that is to occur on the resumption of the hearing.

The principal feature of the hearing when resumed, however, will in all likelihood, be the presence of Patrick himself under circumstances which promise to furnish the most dramatic incident of the entire case. Before the adjournment was taken yesterday Mr. Jerome turned to Mr. Olcott with this question.

"Will you see your client and ascertain if he is willing to relase Mr. House so that he can go on the stand and tell what happened when the alleged confession was made?"

Mr. Olcott sat still as if he had not heard what the District Attorney said. Mr. Jerome deplored that he had to refer to the matter again, but said that it was of such importance that he must.

"The defendant has an excellent chance to clear himself," Mr. Jerome went on, turning to the court, "and he does not avail himself of it. No innocent man ever stood in such a position, refusing to unseal the lips of counsel. He will not even appear as an affiant on his own behalf to obtain Executive clemency. His counsel will take no steps to make sure of the client's views—and probably he has good reasons of his own for not doing it. But I am anxious to konw what he means to do about it. I don't want to have the trouble of bringing the prisoner here on habeas corpus proceedings, as I may have to do if it comes to the worst."

The District Attorney turned anew to the counsel for the defense. When he received no answer he demanded somewhat impatiently:

"What do you say?"

"I simply decline to answer," said Mr. Olcott, looking up for the first time. Then he rose and spoke to the court:

"Why should I do anything in this matter? I don't even know if I could get my client's affidavit admitted hereafter."

"It was not the question of getting in a new affidavit," rejoined Mr. Jerome smilingly. "It is now only a question of enabling me to continue the interrupted examination of Mr. House."

There the matter was left. Mr. Jerome would not say anything more about his plans concerning Patrick. Mr. Olcott, when asked whether he intended to visit his client at once, replied:

Will See Patrick.

"I shall certainly do so with as little delay as possible."

Though the failure of John T. Milliken of St. Louis, the brother-in-law of Patrick, to appear in court yesterday to be examined by Mr. Jerome led to the exclusion of his affidavit from the motion papers, Mr. Olcott scored one point. In spite of the objection of Mr. Jerome the Recorder decided to admit the affidavits of the five Texas witnesses discovered by Mr. Olcott since the filing of the original documents in the case.

These affiants are H. G. Icet, a millman of Cove, Texas; Dr. Solomon Williams of the same place, Edwin D. McKenzie, a court stenographer from Houston; Adolph Goldman, a real estate dealer, and ex-Chief of Police John G. Blackburn of Houston. To all of them Jones is reported to have said that he lied in testifying about his own and Patrick's guilt of the murder of Rice. Icet and Dr. Williams have already, according to Mr. Olcott's declaration in open court, refused to make the trip North. The other three were on hand yesterday ready for cross-examination, and Mr. Olcott was anxious to have them placed on the stand at once, as he feared that it would prove very hard, as well as very expensive, to get them up here again, were they permitted to return without testifying.

Witnesses Must Appear April 3.

Thus Mr. Olcott's victory proved rather barren, for though the court decided to admit the new testimony, he refused to do so without giving the District Attorney sufficient time to look up the records of the affiants. He ordered that the witnesses appear before him on April 3 to be examined, and that, if they are not on hand then, their affidavits be stricken from the records. Their testimony, if they agree to make the long journey a second time, will be followed by that of the medical experts. Mr. Olcott expects to place on the stand five physicians, including Dr. Biggs of the Health Department and Prof. Wyeth of New York University. Mr. Jerome said he would probably have four or five witnesses of the same character to meet the testimony offered by the defense.

The affidavits of John T. Milliken, James Riordan, Angelo Barba, and Fayette Lee were ordered stricken from the motion papers because they failed to appear for examination. Similar action was taken in regard to Corp. Alexander B. Stanberry of the Thirteenth United States Infantry, who, according to Mr. Olcott, is now on his way from the Philippines to this country, special furlough having been granted him by the Government to enable him to give his evidence. But he will be permitted to testify if he appears on April 3. He is a Houston man and was once in the employ of the murdered William Marsh Rice. The defense regards him as the most important of their Texas witnesses.

The Board of Estimate voted yesterday to give Mr. Jerome $5,000 he had asked for use in fighting the Patrick application for a new trial.

BARGAINS IN MEDICINE.

A woman once wrote us that she was not going to buy Scott's Emulsion any more because it cost too much. Said she could get some other emulsion for less money. Penny wise and pound foolish. Scott's Emulsion costs more because it is worth more—costs more to make. We could make Scott's Emulsion cost less by using less oil. Could take less care in making it, too. If we did, however, Scott's Emulsion wouldn't be the standard preparation of cod liver oil as it is to-day.

POINT WON FOR PACKERS.

Court Rules That Government Must Produce Names of 200 Witnesses.

CHICAGO, March 2.—The direct examination of Special Agent Durand was finished to-day in the packers' case, and the cross-examination was begun.

Early in the day the attorneys in the case engaged in a sharp argument regarding the propriety of admitting as evidence in the case the names of 200 witnesses which, the lawyers for the packers contended, had been turned over to the Department of Justice by Commissioner Garfield.

District Attorney Morrison fought hard against a ruling of the Court directing him to furnish the names.

"If this was an ordinary case this would not be thought of," said Mr. Morrison. "These men want a special dispensation, and appear better and different from any one else."

"Don't demagogue! Don't demagogue!" said Mr. Hynes, counsel for the packers, as all the attorneys rose to their feet in excitement, and crowded up to the bar in front of the Judge.

"It does not come well from you, Mr. Hynes, to say that I shall not demagogue," said the District Attorney. "I will not produce this matter until the Court enters an order for it."

"Let the record show the ruling that the Government produce the matter," said Judge Humphrey.

"In answer to that I will say that we have no such information in our possession," replied Mr. Morrison.

Judge Humphrey then ruled that a search be made by the Government for the names and all correspondence regarding them.

CREDIT MEN SEE PRESIDENT.

In Washington to Oppose Repeal of Bankruptcy Act.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Arguments against the repeal of the National Bankruptcy act were made to the House Committee on the Judiciary to-day by a number of delegates representing practically all of the fifty-two organizations of credit men of the country.

W. A. Prendergast of New York, representing the National Association of Credit Men, said there were nine bills pending before the committee for the repeal of the Bankruptcy act. The entire delegation was opposed to each one of the bills. It favored, however, the Palmer bill which had for its purpose the amendment of the bankruptcy law in some particulars.

The demand for the repeal of the law, it was stated, came primarily from banks. The reason was that under State laws failing debtors could prefer their creditors, and the banks in nearly all cases benefited thereby. State officials who had been deprived of their fees during the operation of the National law also were anxious to have the law repealed.

Later the delegates called on President Roosevelt, who assured them that he would give careful consideration to the subject and do all he could to safeguard their interests.

SUICIDE ASKED FORGIVENESS.

Woman Who Took Gas in 51st Street Flat Was Mrs. Williams of Moravia.

James Thompson, janitor of the apartment house at 302 West Fifty-first Street, received a note yesterday which, it is believed, clears up the case of the woman who occupied a flat on the third floor and was found dead there from gas asphyxiation Thursday night. The note received by the janitor read as follows:

> To the Janitor, 302 West Fifty-first Street:
>
> Noticed in the morning paper death of Mrs. L. Williams of the third floor, east. She is Miss Elizabeth Gordon of Toronto, Canada, and also Mrs. Leslie Williams of Moravia, N. Y. Hoping this may be of service to you, I remain
>
> UNKNOWN.
>
> These are facts. March 2, 1906.

The letter was turned over to the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

Mrs. Williams had lived alone in the flat for two years. She was a handsome woman about 30 years old. All that was known of her was told by herself to the wife of the janitor at different times when she seemed downhearted. On these occasions she spoke of her husband, from whom she was separated. When she was found dead in her bed a locket containing a picture of her husband was found on her breast.

"Charley, forgive me," was a line scrawled on an envelope found in the flat.

A letter to Mrs. Williams from some one who signed herself "Minnie," dated Moravia, told her that her husband was ill with typhoid fever, and she hoped he would pull through.

FOUND STATIONS UNFIT.

Women's Municipal League Committee Tells Result of Visits.

In furtherance of the effort to improve the police stations in this city, the committee of the Women's Municipal League, in the Kip's Bay district, which includes the police stations in East Twenty-second Street, East Thirty-fifth Street, and East Fifty-first Street, made public yesterday its report. The committee, of which Emily Welling Hayes is Chairman, inspected the police stations Feb. 24.

The committee found the stations "old and the plumbing absolutely unfit, unsanitary, and impossible. There is no provision for privacy, cleanliness, or even a humane degree of comfort."

For the East Twenty-second Street Station the committee recommends "absolutely new plumbing." Of the station in East Thirty-fifth Street, the committee has this to say: "The station house has eleven cells for men in the basement. It was dark and the gas had to be lighted to show these cells." The accommodation for women prisoners were inadequate. Of the East Fifty-first Street Police Station the committee says that the windows were all closed when they were there, and the ventilation bad in consequence.

COURT SHIELDS WOMAN.

Bars Personal Accounts of Mrs. O. M. Carter in Gaynor-Greene Case.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 2.—The accounts of Mrs. Margaret W. Carter, wife of Capt. O. M. Carter, were barred at the Greene-Gaynor trial to-day, the court saying that as far as possible he would exclude "this little woman's private affairs from the evidence," and that "publicity should be avoided where a woman's name was involved."

It was contended that on the same day that Carter deposited $2,400 in his wife's name there was a division between the conspirators, and that a few days later Carter received a check from her for $2,000, which he indorsed for deposit in the Union Trust Company of New York.

Orin R. Judge of Brooklyn, supervising bookkeeper of the Knickerbocker Trust Company, testified as to the account of Greene in that institution. Many of these checks were from Carter, as attorney for Westcott, or from Westcott individually, for considerable amounts.

VEGETARIANISM AND LEATHER

Abstinence from Meat Given as a Reason for Rise in Price of Hides.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Vegetarians are largely responsible for the increasing price of shoe leather, is the belief of August H. Vogel of Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Vogel was the principal speaker last night at the semi-annual dinner of the Shoe and Leather Association of Chicago. He and other speakers complained that shoes in Chicago were sold too cheap.

"The world's visible supply of hides," said Mr. Vogel, "is every year becoming less in proportion to the increase in population. The hide industry is dependent on the consumption of meat. It is a by-product of the packing industry. People are eating less meat than formerly. The consumption of cereal and vegetable foods is increasing every year, and the price of leather is increasing proportionately.

"There has been an advance in shoe leather along the line, and it would be natural and legitimate for shoe dealers to ask for from 10 to 30 per cent. more for their goods, but they don't, except in the cheapest grades."

THE MAYOR WILL VETO CONNECTING ROAD PLAN

Demands the Original Contract Calling for $2,252,500

AND NO DISCRIMINATION

The Pennsylvania and New Haven Interests Strike a Serious Snag After Their Victory.

After winning its victory in the Rapid Transit Commission and obtaining material modifications of the terms first proposed for the New York Connecting Railroad franchise, the Pennsylvania Railroad interests have struck another, and a more serious, snag. Mayor McClellan is fighting the granting of the franchise tooth and nail unless the road accepts the terms originally proposed by Harry P. Nichols, the engineer in charge of the Board of Estimate's Bureau of Franchises.

Following the antagonism shown by the Mayor at the meeting of the Rapid Transit Commission Thursday, when he succeeded in blocking action on the franchise for a week at least, it was learned yesterday that the Mayor's opposition will extend much further than he indicated at that time. He now is known to be absolutely insistent on the readoption of the Nichols terms. If the proposed franchise comes before him as Mayor, as it will have to come after the commission acts, he will decline to approve it if the terms are as amended by the commission's Committee on Plans and Contracts. Before that, however, he will make a fight in the board next week to have that body adopt the Nichols terms.

This stand is of the utmost importance in view of the statements made more than a month ago by President A. J. Cassatt and Vice President Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania. Then, when the Nichols terms were pending before the Rapid Transit Commission, they openly declared that the Pennsylvania and New Haven interests, which jointly own the connecting road, would not build the line on any such terms. President Cassatt at the time wrote an open letter to Mayor McClellan and to President Orr of the Rapid Transit Board, emphasizing this declaration. He pointed out that the line already was under obligation to pay three distinct taxes and that the insertion of a compensation clause would mean the payment of a fourth tax for the privilege of running its own trains over its own right of way.

At the time the board was carefully going over the terms proposed by Mr. Nichols in his draft of a proposed contract. These terms provided for a cash payment of $250,000 on the signing of the contract, annual payments of $50,000 for ten years, and then annual payments of $100,000 for the remaining fifteen years of a twenty-five-year franchise. This made a total of $2,250,000, with $2,500 more in the form of an annual payment of $100 for the right to construct the Randall's Island Bridge. In addition, Mr. Nichols inserted a clause to the effect that the road should bind itself to make no discrimination against the city in freight rates. To this clause was appended a penalty of $10,000 for the first violation and the forfeiture of the franchise for the second violation.

Yielding to the insistent demand of the Pennsylvania Road, the board, through its committee, struck out the anti-rate discrimination clause on the ground that it was in violation of the Inter-State Commerce act, as the city could not impose terms on inter-State freight; the freight which will go over the connecting road will be New England freight delivered by the New Haven Road and Western and Southern freight delivered by the Pennsylvania. The committee also cut the cash payment down to $100,000, the annual payments for the first ten years to $25,000, and the annual payments for the remaining fifteen years to $50,000, leaving the bridge payments untouched. This effected a reduction to $1,102,500 for the twenty-five-year period.

The Mayor talked with Corporation Counsel Delany for several hours yesterday, going over the situation. It was learned later that the Mayor wants the anti-discrimination clause reinserted in the contract, and that he insists on the $2,252,500 payments provided in the Nichols plan. He thinks the connecting railroad franchise a far more valuable grant than the franchise which the Port Chester Road seeks. That road has agreed to the $2,250,000 terms fixed by the Board of Estimate. The Mayor believes the Pennsylvania-New Haven combination should pay the same rate.

Controller Metz said yesterday that he had been a member of the Committee on Plans and Contracts when it drew up the revised terms, and that they satisfied him. Apparently the Mayor has no support in the Rapid Transit Commission except Commissioner Starin, but he has the veto power as executive.

TWO BLACK HANDERS CAUGHT.

One Trapped at Midnight Threatens Intended Victim with Death.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 2.—By a well devised and carried out plan, Prosecuting Attorney Henry B. White and Constable Richard Morrell succeeded last night at midnight in capturing the writer of a Black Hand letter and his companion in crime. Joseph Ferrante and Eugene Imbrogna are the prisoners, and they will have a hearing to-morrow on the charge of blackmail and threatening the lives of Pasquale Forte and family.

The prisoners are employed in the Mianus Manufacturing Company's mills, near H. O. Havemeyer's Summer residence, on Palmer's Hill, where Forte also works. A letter reached the latter on Monday, mailed from Stamford on Saturday, demanding that $250 be placed in a white handkerchief on a tree stump near Mr. Havemeyer's home at midnight on March 1, and threatening that if the money were not put there, Forte and his family would be cut to pieces. It was written in Italian in red ink and signed Black Hand, with the sign of a cross.

Forte, badly scared, consulted Prosecutor White, who sent Constable Morrell to put out a handkerchief and keep watch. Ferrante and Imbrogna were at the stump, feeling it over, when Morrell and his assistants arrived. The constable chased them and fired at them. Ferrante was caught, and to Forte he repeated the threat of the letter, saying his friends would now surely kill him. Imbrogna was caught to-day. He asked for a knife with which to cut his throat.

BOSTON, March 2.—Raymond H. Lombard and Ralph Brosnan of Springfield were indicted to-day by the United States Grand Jury on the charge of mailing threatening "Black Hand" communications to Charles H. Steele of Springfield. The men were arrested after an investigation by the Springfield and Government authorities into the appearance in the mails of a number of written threats from the "Black Hand" Society.

A SENSATION FROSTBITTEN.

Two and a Dog Who Ran from a Dead Couple Were Innocent.

A man and a woman were found dead in the Boulevard Hotel, at Sixty-seventh Street and Broadway, on Thursday night. Three plain clothes men were sent from the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station to investigate.

Just as the detectives reached the corner a man dashed from the shadows of the building on the Sixty-seventh Street side and began lowering sprinting records down Broadway. Several other men ran in his wake yelling that hands be laid on him.

The pink sheet representatives were also on the corner. The two bodies in the hotel and this sudden pursuit seemed promiseful of a story of a crime. As the pursued man fled, hat in hand, a small boy ran at his heels, and between the two of them a bull dog jumped as he kept the pace, bounding in the air with delight.

The pursuers increased until a stream of half a hundred persons was dashing behind the detectives and reporters. After a stiff chase of ten blocks the man was captured. He was dragged back to the hotel corner, and the reporters began pumping him before he could breathe with ease. He made matters stranger and more mysterious by declaring that he didn't know that anybody was dead in the hotel.

"Who was it started this chase?" demanded one of the detectives suddenly.

No one admitted anything.

"What am I bein' chased for?" demanded the captive, seeing that so far he had the bulge on the minions of the law. "Can't a man give his dog a run on the street?"

The dog whined at his master's feet, and the boy reached up and caught the man by the hand and said, "Let's go home, pop."

The three detectives pumped the captive dry as they wiped the beads of perspiration from their faces. They at last realized that father and son were merely giving their pet a little run, the reporters uttered curses on their luck, and sleuths and scribes entered the hotel, where they found that the man and woman inside had been killed by a treacherous gas stove.

"Pop" seemed to feel repaid by the disgust of the crowd, for his lean face broke into a broad grin as he whistled to his bull pup and strolled down Broadway with his son.

THE KILTIE REGIMENT HANDS OVER ITS RELICS

Feared They Might Not Answer Roll Call Much Longer.

WERE 1,000, NOW ONLY 70

A Score of the 79th Highlanders Present When the Caledonian Club Takes Their Trophies.

All that is left of the Seventy-ninth Regiment of Highland Volunteers gave up their relics of the civil war last night.

They gave them to the New York Caledonian Club for the simple reason that they are afraid to keep them any longer. Death is making such inroads into their already thin ranks that the fear lately took possession of the little living band of Highland-Americans that a day might dawn quite soon when there would be relics and no longer veterans to keep them. So twenty-three of the still living men of that regiment carried out the ceremony last night at the Caledonian Club's house, 846 Seventh Avenue. The children, and in some cases the children of the children of the veterans, were there to witness it.

There is nothing very striking about the relics themselves. A flag, so tattered and torn that it has to be kept from the air to keep it together; a more pretentious emblem given to the Seventy-ninth, when the men composing it were young, by the ladies of New York; the fife which Johnny Dougherty played at the head of the column; an old knap-sack, well torn with bullets; the tips of two guide poles, and that's about all. But both to the veterans and the Caledonian Club the relics are precious.

The Caledonian Club has always been a kind of foster-parent of the Seventy-ninth. When their countrymen were at the front fighting, the Caledonian Club looked after their wives, parents, and sisters, and later along their widows and orphans. When in 1865 the fighters came back—all that was left of them—the Caledonian Club banquetted them. Now the Caledonian Club has entered into a new bargain with the veterans. The gift of the relics also gives the veterans a clubhouse.

When the Seventy-ninth Regiment left New York for the front on May 13, 1861, they went like Highlanders, in kilts. In the exercises last evening kilts were again in evidence, and bag-pipes, too. The members of the Caledonian Club wore them, however.

The presentation was made by John Spence, one of the veterans. He explained the reasons for giving the mementoes away.

"We found," he said, "that we were thinning out—were dying off. We feared that if we didn't give our relics to somebody like this they would fall into the hands of some private individual, and be scattered. So we decided to give them to the Caledonian Club—the best friend we ever had. Your ranks are gradually being recruited by new members, young men. Our places are not filled. When one dies his chair is empty. There are many empty chairs, out of 1,000 only some 70 remain. Twenty-three of them are here. I do not want to call them old, but they are not so young as once they were. In your hands we know the relics will be sacred."

The mementos were received by John M. Congalton, the chief of the club.

Andrew D. Baird of Brooklyn, who was with the regiment from May 13, 1861, to July 25, 1865, joining as a private and quitting as a Lieutenant Colonel, went over the history of the regiment in the civil war. Then the audience sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Among the veterans, most of whom have passed the threescore and ten allotment of years, were these:

John Spence, Edward Ottman, Charles Crawford, Thomas Moore, Thomas Harrison, Ephraim B. Demorest, Andrew D. Baird, Henry F. Bloomfield, John H. Tennant, Thomas Clark, John Campbell, John Laughland, James McLane, Charles Harrington, Hugh Young, Garrett H. Coe, John Bolton, James Gilmore, David Thomson, and L. Curtis Brackett.

EVERY LAW PROMISED WILL PASS, STOKES SAYS

Jersey's Governor Predicts Fulfillment of Campaign Pledges.

NEW RAILWAY TAX THE CHIEF

By It the State Tax for School Purposes Will Be Done Away With —Auto Law Probable.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, March 2.—"Before the present session of the Legislature adjourns the Republican Party will have enacted into law every platform pledge of the last State convention and of the county conventions of last year so far as the policy outlined was of general State interest," said Gov. Edward C. Stokes to-day. The Governor was hurrying his work to get home to his mother, who is ill in Millville. Continuing he said:

"Every suggestion contained in my message is receiving favorable consideration, and I believe will be included in the session laws before the Legislature adjourns. The State revenue from railroad taxation will hereafter consist of the tax assessed on 'main stem' as redefined and from this, as provided by the Perkins bill, will be deducted an amount equal to $5 on each $1,000 of the total valuation so assessed, which will be held for State purposes.

"The balance will be apportioned among the several counties annually on or before Feb. 1 by the State Controller, according to the ratables of each county as returned for the preceding year. This will make it necessary for the several counties to have true value assessments of property to secure a fair division of the large sums of money which go to enrich the county.

"The money so apportioned will be devoted to public schools, and it is expected will be sufficient to entirely eliminate the State school tax. The revenue for that purpose will be available in November of each year instead of in Jnuary following, as is the case under the existing law."

By these changes, the Governor said, local tax burdens would be so far reduced as to bring many municipalities within the scope of the maximum tax rate law which bears Hillery's name, and that other municipalities would be helped to get within the economy circle, thus relieving the people of a large share of local taxation.

"While I do not know what the railroads will do about this vastly increased taxation," said Gov. Stokes; "I know that the bills have been so safeguarded that they are not open to attack in the New Jersey State courts. Next in importance to the railroad tax bills is the limiting of franchises, and I believe that the Legislature will certainly settle this subject.

"The abolition of fees in county offices will come at this session. A bill satisfactory to all counties it is impossible to prepare, but the people will get accustomed to the changed condition of affairs and never want to go back to the antiquated fee system. I am informed that a bill will be introduced to return to the plan of electing Assemblymen by districts instead of by counties, as at present. This is right, and the bill should quickly become a law.

"Further regulation of automobiles is receiving attention, and a law to stop fast driving of these machines and to compel the owners to repair damage done to roads must come.

"As to the abandonment of the Morris Canal and the purification of the Passaic River, both should be done. Personally, I believe that the canal has outlived its usefulness, while the Passaic River cleansing is demanded from the standpoint of public health."

Regarding the communications of Mayor McClellan of New York and Secretary of State Root, the Governor said that he did not expect any change in the potable water legislation of last Winter. The State of New Jersey is opposed to sharing its potable waters with any one, he said, because the time was coming when it would need all its own supply.

MIRABEAU L. TOWNS INDICTED.

Brooklyn Lawyer and His Partner Accused in Sewer Damage Case.

Mirabeau L. Towns and Edward J. McCrossin, his partner, lawyers, prominent at the Brooklyn bar, appeared yesterday in the Kings County Court to plead to an indictment charging them with champerty in connection with the alleged sewer claim frauds. They were indicted under Section 74 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If convicted, although the offense charged is only a misdemeanor, disbarment may follow. The two lawyers pleaded not guilty and were paroled by Judge Crane on the recommendation of District Attorney Clarke.

The indictment charges that in September, 1905, Towns and McCrossin gave $2 to Jennings S. Peace, a lawyer, in consideration of his having placed in their hands the claim of sewer damages of Annunziata Maratta, late of 118 Sackett Street, Brooklyn, for $1,155. This claim Towns and McCrossin acquired, the indictment says, for the purpose of bringing suit against the city.

STOPS BURNED TIMBER SALE.

Attorney General Mayer Holds Invasion of Forest Reserve Unlawful.

ALBANY, March 2.—The removal of burned timber in the State Forest Reserves hereafter will be prohibited. Attorney General Mayer, after consultation with State Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner Whipple, announced that hereafter lumbermen would not be permitted to take this timber. Prior to a year ago it had been the practice to permit lumbermen to remove burned timber and make settlement with the State.

Certain cases have recently been reopened, and in one, that of Patrick Moyneham of Glens Falls, a new settlement with the Attorney General has been made on the basis of a penalty for trespass. Moyneham has consented to an additional judgment of $2,569 for trespass.

TYPOTHETAE GET INJUNCTION.

Printers' Union Restrained from Interference with Publishers' Employes.

The New York Typothetae, through their lawyers, Beatty & Burlinghame, got a preliminary blanket injunction yesterday from Justice James A. Blanchard of the Supreme Court restraining the officers and members of Typographical Union No. 6 from interfering in any way with the employes or business of the members of the Typothetae. The defendants specifically named Patrick H. McCormick, President of No. 6; Charles M. Maxwell, Secretary-Treasurer, and George W. Jackson and Vincent Costello, Organizers.

The injunction states that the affidavits of the plaintiffs show that they are entitled to the judgment sought for, as the acts of the defendants tend to work irreparable injury and damage to the plaintiffs.

The defendants, the injunction says, are unable to answer to the plaintiff in damages, and no adequate relief or remedy appeared to be obtainable except through injunction relief in a court of equity.

An order to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent was also issued and made returnable in the Supreme Court March 7.

GILLETTE OUT OF ARMY.

President Decides to Accept the Resignation of Engineer Officer.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The President to-day decided to accept the resignation of Major Cassius Gillette, Engineer Corps, United States Army, and the Secretary of War accordingly has written Major Gillette a letter accepting his resignation.

Major Gillette a few days ago was appointed Superintendent of the Philadelphia filtration plant.

MOTOR BOATS HERE TO STAY.

Exhibitors at Sportsmen's Show Busy Taking Orders for Power Craft.

The Sportsman's Show and Motor Boat Exhibition continues to increase in popularity. The attendance last night was far in excess of any previous evening of the exhibition, and the visitors found plenty to interest them in the numerous exhibits. Two novelties in the power-propelled boat line being shown are the portable boat and the hard cranked boat. The latter is a rowboat which is propelled by turning two cranks instead of one by means of a pair of oars. The cranks are connected by bevel gears to two small paddlewheels under the water, one on each side of the boat. It attracts much attention as it glides around the lagoon propelled by human power. It has been nicknamed the "Coffee Mill."

The portable motor car can be attached to any small boat, which is converted thereby into a power craft. It consists of a single cylinder gasoline motor, developing one horse power, which, together with the full tank, water jacket, and batteries, is fastened to a shaft, which is attached to the stern of the boat on a swivel. The propeller and rudder are at one end of the shaft, while the steering handle is at the other end.

John J. Amory, President of the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, in an interview last night said: "Although there may be a few sailboats built this year, comparatively few care to use them. Now and again we get some sailing enthusiast who considers it a sacrilege to put a motor in a boat, but they are in the minority. I firmly believe that gasoline engines will be put into boats of all kinds in the future, from the simple boat tender to the average coaster. No one can look over the display of boats here without admitting that the motor boat is here to stay."

The major portion of the crowds that visited the Garden looked with wonder at H. E. Rider's mile-a-minute boat, which had been taken to the basement, where it could be seen to better advantage. Manager Dressell was again requested to speed his boat, but as there was no reverse it would be impossible to stop it after it got properly under way. Mr. Rider announced that he would give an exhibition at a future date in Gravesend Bay just off Bath Beach.

The sales up to last night were almost double the number recorded at last year's show, and there is hardly a prominent yachtsman whose name is not down for some sort of a motor boat to be delivered before Summer.

MICHAEL GUADAGNOLI of New Rochelle has filed a petition in bankruptcy here with liabilities $444 and no assets. The debts were for groceries and liquors.

SOLOMON JUSKOWITZ.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Solomon Juskowitz, liquor dealer of 117 Goerck Street, show liabilities $17,084 and nominal assets of $10,011, consisting of stock $1,000, notes $3,660, fixtures $5,000, accounts $115, cash in bank $146, and security for lease $90. Among the creditors are the Monroe Bank, State Bank, Mutual Alliance Trust Company, Lion Brewery, and Eastern Brewing Company.

W. H. FURNISS COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Murray has received two executions against the W. H. Furniss Company, importer of mahogany of 391 Avenue A, aggregating $3,144 in favor of Irvin & Sellers on two accepted bills of exchange, and a keeper was put in the place. The company was incorporated in May, 1905, with a capital stock of $12,500, and W. H. Furniss, the President and Treasurer, was formerly in business in London for ten years.

HOLLAND METAL RECOVERY COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Holland Metal Recovery Company of 42 Broadway by these creditors: Robert Irwin Plomert, $300 for services; Frank M. Andrews of Cincinnati, $12,865 on a note, and William M. Greenwood, $3,650 money lent. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts and willingness to be adjudicated bankrupt. The company was incorporated on May 29, 1905, with a capital stock of $100,000, to mine metal ores.

DEXTER B. HORTON.—Dexter B. Horton of 34 Pine Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $26,867 and no assets. The debts were contracted in 1898 for building materials and on bond and mortgages. He is also liable on bond and mortgages aggregating over $170,000 on property at 251, 257, and 259 West Ninety-eighth Street and 3,281 to 3,289 Broadway in case there should be foreclosure. Among the creditors are John O. Baker $6,353 deficiency judgments, Banchard Sash and Door Company of Erie, Penn., $4,088, and Oscar Schreiber estate $2,053.

LOUIS S. FIRETAG.—Louis S. Firetag, salesman, residing at 646 East 141st Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $12,997 and no assets. The debts were contracted from September to December, 1902, when he was a manufacturer of children's caps at 102 Wooster Street. Among the creditors are the People's Bank, $2,500; J. Kridel, Sons & Co., $564, and the H. B. Claflin Company, $529. This is Mr. Firetag's third experience in bankruptcy. He filed a petition in bankruptcy on April 9, 1900, as a partner in the firm of L. S. Firetag & Co. of 495 Broome Street, and received a discharge two months later. A creditors' petition in bankruptcy was filed against him on Dec. 17, 1902, when he did business as the Firetag Manufacturing Company at 102 Wooster Street, but the case was closed without his discharge.

PENN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Penn Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of gummed cloth for bookbinding at 9 Franklin Street, by these creditors: O. Bannon Corporation, $1,000; Gibbs, Brown & Co., $69, and Charles E. Davis, $50. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and made preferential payments to creditors. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed George F. Darrell receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $1,000. Edwin Lang, Treasurer and manager of the company, consented to an adjudication and appointment of a receiver. The liabilities are $5,000 and assets $2,006. Deputy Sheriff O'Rourke is in possession of the place on an execution for $789 in favor of the Minetto Shade Company. The company was incorporated on May 24, 1904, with a capital stock of $50,000.

WALDORF STABLE COMPANY. — Deputy Sheriff McCourt has received an attachment against the Waldorf Stable Company of 103 and 105 West Fifty-third Street, and Joseph H. Reilly, who was Treasurer of it, for $3,674 in favor of John S. Ferguson on a claim for rent, taxes, and Croton water rates, which was obtained on the allegation that they had disposed of property. Mr. Ferguson has held as security for the rent a chattel mortgage for several years on the horses, wagons, and carriages. At the time the chattel mortgage was made it covered sixty-nine horses and eighty-one carriages and wagons. Mr. Ferguson was put in possession of the stable on Feb. 7 through legal proceedings, and said he found only two horses and thirty-three carriages and wagons. Upon making inquiries he was informed that eight horses had been sent to Englewood, N. J.; seventeen to White Plains, and several more had been taken by creditors in payment of debts. The Sheriff served the attachment on two lawyers.

CAN IT BE WAR?

Unfortunately it can; we do not think it will; beyond all question it should not be. The view as to the outcome at Algeciras reported from Washington to be held by the State Department is not officially announced, and could not be, even if it were held. It has, however, some degree of foundation in the known facts. The underlying purpose of the German Government may be war, if the objects of that Government cannot otherwise be accomplished. But there is no advantage clearly to be seen in such a policy which could not better be gained peacefully, and the risks are simply incalculable.

The actual position of Germany is not easy to define, because the Government has firmly refused specifically to define it. France has from the start plainly said what she wants, and even more plainly what she does not wish and will not voluntarily accept. As late as in the Revue des Deux Mondes for the 15th of February M. FRANCIS CHARMES—perhaps the most authoritative, and certainly one of the most fair and candid, of French publicists—outlined the position of France in a manner generally approved by the sober portion of the French press, and quite in harmony with the official utterances of M. ROUVIER, the French Premier and Minister for Foreign Affairs:

> That all the Powers shall compete freely in Morocco, that they may introduce their products and their capital there under equal conditions; that they may develop their commercial prosperity without hindrance from any monopoly—this programme we have always conceded and shall be loyal to it. But when it comes to the organization of the police, that is, to the mode of securing internal order, the question becomes a political one of the highest order, and the internationalization which would plant all Europe in Morocco on the flank of Algeria appears to us a danger that we cannot be made voluntarily to accept.

This position is frankly based on the immense effort and sacrifice made by France in Algeria for the past three-quarters of a century. On the whole the work has been successful, and France has very great interests, the basis of important rights, according to international usage, which no other nation, except—to a much smaller degree—Spain, possesses, and which Germany clearly does not possess at all. These rights France will steadily assert: if Great Britain stands by her, she will fight for them. That is the kernel of the question of war or peace. It turns on the purpose of Germany and the attitude of Great Britain.

What is the purpose of Germany? As we have said, it has not clearly been defined. It is not mere mischief-making. We may be sure of that, though some mischief-making may have a part in its accomplishment. In a general way it is to promote the interests, the power, and the prestige of Germany. That is legitimate enough. But in what way will the promotion of these be sought? So far as can be judged from known facts, Germany seeks to weaken or destroy the entente between France and Great Britain. That is an intelligible end to pursue. It seemed likely to be served at Berlin by forcing Great Britain to face a very serious European situation growing out of the Morocco affair. It appeared probable that Great Britain, confronted with such a case, would advise concession and compromise and incur the suspicions of her new friend. Precisely the opposite happened. The British Government stood absolutely firm by the side of France. It stands there still, and there is no present sign of change. It is now open to Germany to go a step further in the same direction, to refuse assent at the conference to French plans, to cause the failure of the conference, to leave Morocco exposed to all the great risks of disorder, to maintain opposite Gibraltar a centre of irritation, discord, and rivalry, with the hope that conditions will become intolerable, that Great Britain will consent to a plan presented by France, and the entente will be broken.

But if Great Britain remains by the side of France, it is incredible that Germany will push things to the extreme and actually incur war. Whatever the outcome of war on land, the consequences to the growing commerce of Germany and to her navy would be very serious, if not disastrous. They will not, we are sure, be encountered lightly. Other lines of action are open, and, we are confident, will be followed. Some scheme of "compensations" will be devised. In those we can take no part, but it is certain that all the influence our Government can command will be exerted in the direction of peace, and peace, under whatever difficulties, we are persuaded, will be preserved.

JUDICIAL RATE REVIEW.

Senator TILLMAN, the Democrat from South Carolina in charge of the Republican Administration's Railway Rate bill, is indignant over the suggestion of allowing the courts to have anything to say regarding the rights involved. Says Mr. TILLMAN:

> Make the provision such that the railroads cannot go running into court, obtaining stays, postponements, appeals, and what not, to embarrass their opponents and tire them out, and they will abide by any fair procedure on the part of the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

This impatience with the methods of the courts happens to be illustrated by a case nearly as old as the Inter-State Commerce Commission itself, and which has just been called to Congress's attention by litigants weary of seventeen years' delay. It was in 1888, in the Commission's second year, that it rendered a decision remedying the complaint that the railways discriminated in favor of Standard Oil. The railways forthwith remedied the grievance by making the rates on oil uniform, and charging for the weight of barrels containing oil. To the complainants this seemed like advancing the rates upon oil. The railways did not see why they should transport barrels free. The question was carried further, and the following delays occurred:

May 15, 1889—Hearing by the Commission.
November, 1892—Decision by the Commission.
October, 1893—Rehearing granted.
October, 1895—Decision by Commission.
May, 1896—Proceedings begun in court by Commission to enforce decision.
July, 1897—Court refuses to take equity jurisdiction.
May, 1902—Decision on law side allowing refiners damages.
May, 1905—Decision reversed upon appeal. Another appeal still pending.

Seventeen years without a final decision is indeed a hardship, whatever the nature of the litigation and whatever the decision. Any proposition to hasten litigation is meritorious, but there are two things worse than a tardy decision—one is the refusal of a day in court, and the other is the sacrifice of the merits to speed of procedure.

In this case it does not appear that the courts were excessively slow. Comparison of the dates will show that their procedure was nearly as prompt as the Commission's. The complainants' grievance substantially is that the law has not operated as they expected, and that the courts have overruled the Commission's action. What is wanted is a law to regulate rates which shall not allow any increases. And lest the courts should be perverse in rendering decisions, they are to be ousted of their jurisdiction. From his point of view Senator TILLMAN's aversion to the courts is natural. In the language of the letter sent to Congress last week, "the survivors never dreamed that this law could be used to destroy instead of to protect their business." They are naturally resentful that they now "are not as near justice as when the Commission" gave its decision in their favor. It may be a case for amending the law, but there will not be a general assent to the suggestion that the new law shall not be construed by the courts. The case for exemption from judicial review is not strengthened by decisions that the Commission's procedure is wrong.

THE STOCK TRANSFER TAX.

Until Assemblyman PRENTICE spoke on Thursday the voice of Albany has never within our knowledge been raised to protest that the taxes there imposed were too productive. In proposing to amend the stock transfer tax law, reducing the tax upon each 100 shares from $2 to $1, Mr. PRENTICE pointed out that when the law was passed last year it was expected that it would yield three or four millions. During the eight months ending Jan. 31 the tax yielded $4,132,000. The first year's return at this rate would amount to $6,198,000.

Mr. PRENTICE says this is too much. His protestations must have produced upon his audience the effect that Mr. Lewis Carroll's Populists produced upon their King when they assembled in front of his palace crying "Less bread, more taxes." Albany has always been willing to take everything it could get out of a tax levy of which the whole or the greater part of the burden fell upon New York City. Yet Mr. PRENTICE fortifies his case with good arguments. The capital invested in Stock Exchange business, including the value of seats in Exchanges and the money employed in daily transactions, is estimated to be about $300,000,000. Under the transfer tax law this property bears an impost of 2 per cent., which is of course disproportionately and unfairly high. Moreover, Mr. PRENTICE doubts the advisability collecting one-fourth of the State's revenues from one kind of business in which a comparatively small number of men are engaged.

There is another reason not pointed out by Mr. PRENTICE why the policy of depending upon Stock Exchange transactions for $6,000,000 a year is unwise and unsafe. Last year 263,040,993 shares were sold in the New York Stock Exchange. In 1904 the total was 186,529,384. In 1903 the number of shares sold was 160,748,368. A fiscal system with so unsteady a base is a source of peril. In a year of buoyant speculation the State might derive $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 from the transfer tax, and in a year of panic and trade depression its revenue from this source might sink to half that sum, or even lower. Albany is very apt to live up to its income. Depending so largely upon stock transactions for the revenue of the State, a year of apathy and dullness in speculation would produce a large deficit. That is one of the obvious results of the policy adopted by the Republican Party of depending for the expenses of the State upon a few large sources of revenue. This is an easy way. It is popular up the State, and therefore good politics, because the taxes are collected mostly in this city and the rural taxpayer's burden is lightened. It is not a just policy, it is not a safe policy.

ELEVENTH AVENUE.

State Senator SAXE and his constituents are fully entitled to congratulate one another on the legislative compulsion now at last put upon the Hudson River Railroad to evacuate its tracks upon Eleventh Avenue. It really needs no argument to show that surface steam railroads in a great city are public nuisances. It is a reproach to us that "grade crossings" should be tolerated anywhere, even in the remotest rural districts. The trend of legislation in all American States, yielding to the pressure of public opinion, is toward making them unlawful. But to maintain them in a great city is an evidence of barbarism which it is well that the city has seen its way at last to effectively resenting.

The tracks on Eleventh Avenue are the only tokens remaining in New York of that barbarism. The discontinuance of the terminal of the Harlem at what is now Madison Square Garden, the construction of the "Fourth Avenue Improvement" from Forty-second Street to the Harlem River, the construction of the "Fordham Cut" are all successive steps in clearing the surface of Manhattan for peaceable pedestrians and ordinary vehicular traffic, so that the streets may be used for their proper purposes, by persons going about their lawful occasions, without imminent danger of sudden death, and without sacrificing the ordinary to the usurped use of the public streets. By these successive steps, every one of which was obstinately resisted by the corporation respectively in question, and for every one of which the corporation in question saddled an undue proportion of the expense of the alteration upon the municipality, the east side of the city has been gradually freed from this particular form of public nuisance and public danger. But the west side groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. Its inhabitants not only go in bodily fear whenever they have occasion to cross the tracks which, at the same latitude, have been banished from the east side for a full generation. But they see the natural development of their quarter stunted and baffled by the anachronism of steam roads at street levels which has been imposed upon them.

Perhaps the most monitory example, on a large scale, of the folly of killing the goose which lays the golden eggs, was afforded when, a generation ago, the corporation of Trinity Church sold to Commodore VANDERBILT, for a freight station, the St. John's Park which their wiser predecessors of two generations before had most wisely reserved as the nucleus of the fashionable quarter which the neighborhood of the park, for those two generations, had been. By the sale and by the subsequent proceedings in corroboration of that folly, and by the neglect of any effective measures to repair the folly, Trinity converted its great patrimony into the slum which it has ever since in effect remained. If, at the time when St. John's Park was converted, by the consent of its owner, selling its birthright for a mess of pottage, to corporate uses, the municipality had had the foresight to banish the tracks of the Hudson River Road to Thirtieth Street, and then, as occasion served, still further to the northward, the degeneration of the Trinity estate into a slum might have been avoided. Of course it might have been avoided if the wisdom had prevailed in the counsels of the church. But better late than never. There is no natural or topographical reason why the lower west side should lag behind, as it has so manifestly lagged behind, the general development of the city. The railroad tracks once banished from the closely inhabited parts of the lower west side, that quarter will be free to attain its own proper development. It is even imaginable that some children of this world, wiser in their generation than the children of light, may come to preside over the "temporalities" of Trinity, and restore it to something like the civic importance which it possessed under the guidance of men wise in their generation, a hundred years ago.

MUSIC AND "SOCIETY."

Our news columns have already chronicled the painful difference of views developed between the leader of an ambitious and artistic string quartet and a "leader of society." Dishonors appear, upon the whole, to be fairly "easy." The leader of society wanted the best that could be had, in the way of music, to "play a dinner," to use the locution of the musicians, and the "artists" accepted the derogation. Now, if there be any time when good music has no place it is at a good dinner. The necessary clatter of knives and forks, to say nothing of the prandial chatter, would be fatal to the music. Misguided dinner givers occasionally do undertake to combine the two. But the fact is that they will not combine. One of these misguided dinner givers once invited the late THEODORE THOMAS, and essayed to entertain him with music above the average of dinner music, to his unfeigned disgust. "When I want to eat and drink," his comment was, "I don't want to think." Soothing meaninglessness, or frank rag time—these are evidently the best concomitants of food and drink. No musician who at once respects and understands himself will undertake to cast the pearls of his art before a dinner party. When the artist in immediate question consented to "play a dinner" he lost his artistic basis. But, though he thus momentarily lost it, he thinks he regained it afterward, when he was asked to "play a dance." At that point his artistic nature rebelled. At that point he drew the line, and intimated that his artistical quartet should never play for dancing excepting over his dead body, in which case it would have been at the utmost a trio.

The hostess of the occasion may be thoroughly pardoned for not understanding just where the artists drew the line, or why musicians who were willing to play an accompaniment to eating and drinking were yet not willing to play an accompaniment to dancing, which certainly makes less noise. But the incident nevertheless develops an irreconcilability of "mighty opposites." It is of record, or at least of rumor, that a "society leader" of New York once engaged the most famous quartet in the country to play what was announced as a "musicale," but what turned out in fact to be a "conversazione." Upon having it impressed upon him that he was expected merely to accompany the conversation, the rumor goes on to relate that the leader ordered the instruments packed up, refused his check, and led forth his artists with the remark to the hostess that he had never been so insulted before. But then he had been engaged to play a concert, not to "play a dinner."

"Music," said a thoughtful Frenchwoman, "is the greatest enemy that I know to the French spirit." We do not know that our own Four Hundred can claim any particular kinship with "the French spirit." Anglomania, rather than Gallomania, is the offense most commonly charged against them by their censors of the Middle West. But they have at least this in common with the French spirit, that no music is so attractive to them as the sound of their own voices. This they have frequently established to the consternation and disgust of attendants at the Metropolitan Opera House, where the spectacle has so often been presented of the absurd music lovers of the parquet rising and pointedly hissing the musically surd occupants of the box tier for their unwillingness to listen themselves or to let others listen.

The immediate moral seems to be that hostesses should not aim high in respect to the dinner music, but order it of the confectioner or the florist, as an incident of the dinner, thereby assuring that it will not interest the performers any more than the "convives," and that the performers will willingly add dance music, if desired, at the regular union rates.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Rioting Made Too Safe.

In reading the lamentable stories of mob violence that have been coming daily from Springfield, Ohio, for most of the week, one is—or at least one ought to be—struck by the fact that no mention is made of any injury inflicted either by the police or the militia upon any member of the riotous crowds. The latter, it is true, have not been very sanguinary, except in talk, but they have beaten a good many negroes and destroyed a number of occupied houses, which is, as we understand it, arson and a very serious crime. They have, too, persistently interfered with the firemen in the performance of their duty and have openly defied and not infrequently assaulted the representatives of the law. No more pressing invitation for the use of severe measures could easily be imagined, and, while it by no means justified any general massacre, it did do much more than warrant the local authorities in an effective demonstration of their ability and their inclination to preserve order at any necessary cost. The cost would in all probability have been very small. The display of a little firmness at the beginning of the troubles would have brought them to a speedy close. The mob had no very desperate grievance, and there is no indication that it was well organized or had any leaders to direct its operations. The Springfield police force can hardly be a large one, but it should have been able to handle the rioters, and would have been if they had been clearly convinced that incendiarism and assault were dangerous for those engaged in those amusements. But neither the police nor the militia, when they were called out, seem to have done anything more than try to disperse the crowds by pushing them along the streets. Naturally nothing was accomplished until the rioters were ured out—nothing, that is, except a lot of desultory destruction in Springfield's "jungle" and a rude disciplining of the denizens thereof. And that, apparently, was just what Springfield wanted. It had a disorderly quarter, and knew no better way to reform it than by turning loose a mob inspired by a desire to avenge the shooting of a brakeman. The confession, even when only tacit, is a most humiliating one. The curious suggestion is made that the existence of a highly undesirable negro population in Springfield is due to the fact that the town was an important station of the "underground railway" patronized by fugitive slaves before the war. It would be interesting to know how much truth there is in that.

Prospects of an Ice Famine.

With an elaborate show of statistics to prove the necessity of its action, the American Ice Company has advanced the price of its merchandise 33 1-3 per cent., and it strongly intimates that this is only a beginning. No doubt the figures as to ice harvested here and on the Maine rivers approach accuracy near enough for practical purposes, but one can still wonder if an ice famine really confronts us, even though we have no more freezing weather this Winter. For years past artificially frozen water has competed on apparently profitable terms with the "natural" product, and if an eighth of the supply can thus be provided there seems to be no reason why the number of plants should not be increased until there need be no more dependence on the vagaries of the weather. There are economies as well as expenses connected with the manufacture of ice where and when needed, as compared with its collection and storage where formed in the old-fashioned way, and, of course, the larger the scale on which the production of the artificial ice is conducted the cheaper it will be. Ice in Summer, which only a few years ago was hardly more than a luxury for anybody—it still remains one for at least ninety-nine-one-hundredths of the world's population—has come to be almost an absolute necessity to the remainder. Here the whole domestic economy is dependent on the well-stocked refrigerator, and a Summer without ice, or with ice at a high price, is a thing to be looked forward to with more than anxiety. There is safety only in the multiplication of the factories for artificial production, and there seem to be no physical or financial difficulties in the way. Incidentally, the universal use of artificial ice would be, or at least ought to be, of general hygienic benefit. Artificial ice is not necessarily better than that from lakes and rivers, but it can be made so, and there is less trouble and expense in seeing that this is done.

"Price" Means More Than Amount.

As explanation of his decision that the merger of the Interborough and Metropolitan Companies is legal, the Attorney General says that the law aims to prevent only those monopolies that affect prices and has no ban for monopolies when, as in the case of these roads, the prices are fixed by local ordinance or legislative restriction. The logic is somewhat queer, it seems to us, for its validity depends on the assumption that while the fares on the elevated, surface, and subway lines remain at 5 cents there can be no change in the price of transportation. That is by no means a fact. "Price" depends not only upon the amount expended, but upon the quality of the service rendered or thing given in return, and the merger, in circumstances easily conceivable, might very seriously affect the quality of the service rendered, and so the price of it. Is it not possible that, as soon as it makes no difference to anybody what route this or that fraction of the public selects for getting up and down town, the impulse to make the journeys pleasant and comfortable—an impulse that in this city has never been any too strong—would be seriously weakened? With fewer cars, less carefully equipped and manned, the work of transportation might be performed, and then, though the fare might still be 5 cents, the price would nevertheless be changed because not so much value would be given for the accustomed nickel. This argument is not presented as against the merger, but simply for the Attorney General's consideration. It ought to have at least academic interest for him, for, whether it makes holes in his explanation or not, it certainly wears it dangerously thin. He will probably admit that the price of apples changes when two instead of three of them, or two little ones instead of two big ones, are sold for 5 cents, and it is just the same with the sale of transportation. It seems to us that he should exercise his ingenuity again if he is efficiently to protect the merger from attack.

"DYNAMITE EATING."

An Impossible Habit Ascribed to Certain Mexican Localities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to call attention to an article, purporting to be authentic, but bearing the earmarks of the pipiest kind of a "pipe dream," which appeared in yesterday's issue of one of the New York dailies.

The paper in question—not usually classed with the very yellow publications—asserted that in a certain Mexican locality there were people addicted to "dynamite eating," and it went on to describe how "they broke off a piece of the explosive," rolled it into a pill, à la the opium smoker, dissolved it in a glass of mescal, and ingested the same, the resulting effect being a delightful and vision-engendering intoxication.

Now, as a physician, (and something of a pharmaceutical chemist,) I would state that the preparation of dynamite, (obtained by the action of sulphuric and nitric acids on glycerine,) which was formerly considered the nitrous ether of glycerine, or trinitrite of glycerol, but now known to be the nitric ether of glycerine, or by its trade names of trinitrin or glonoin, is used in medicine in extremely attenuated doses—usually 1-200 of a grain, and never in larger dosage than gramme 0.001. It should be very obvious, therefore, even to the lay mind, that without delicate laboratory apparatus the attainment of such minute subdivision is impossible. Furthermore, the symptoms following the ingestion of this drug are, so far from being pleasant, distinctly distressing ones, among which may be mentioned severe and persistent frontal headache, tumultuous heart action, flushing of the face, and vertigo. I would further add that it is not at all in the nature of a hypnotic agent, and that no visions or hallucinations of any kind whatever ensue from its ingestion.

HOWARD JAMES, M. D.

Cornwall-on-Hudson, Feb. 26, 1906.

Nothing New in the Moon.

From The London Telegraph.

It was gravely announced the other day that an American observer had made a discovery of something new in the moon. He had found that "with a little imagination" it was possible to see a female face in the markings on our satellite. But this is part only of the fact. Not only the face of a woman, but also that of her lover, has long been pointed out as one of the pictures thought to be hidden in the lunar disk, and this has been portrayed in a recent book of Flammarion's. Not only so, but the popular astronomer recently asked the members of the French Astronomical Society to send him drawings of the things they seemed to see on the moon. In reply he received no fewer than fifty-eight pictures, among them being a hare, a lion, a dog, a kangaroo, a sickle, as well as the Man in the Moon and the lovers aforesaid. All these and many more could be seen "with a little imagination." So that the American discoverer is rather late in the field.

LIBRARY DEDICATIONS.

Should the Structure in Bryant Park Be Turned Into a Private Memorial?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Our great public library at Fifth Avenue and Forty-first and Forty-second Streets has now reached that stage in construction where it becomes necessary to protest against the hasty carving of private memorial dedications upon its face.

The library has become the most important civic building of the modern community. It is not surprising, therefore, that public-spirited citizens should make donations and that some mark of respect and gratitude should be shown by the public to the greater of these donors, such as by the raising of a tablet or a bust or a statue within the library precincts. Even a room might be exclusively dedicated to a donor, although this should be an exceptional case, but that individual memorial dedications should be inscribed on the brow of our great civic library, to the exclusion of all else, is likely to discourage civic pride and future donors, who would hardly contribute to that which, apparently, is a mausoleum to three persons.

For example, the first inscription on the new Public Library is now being carved on one of the three panels. It reads:

THE ASTOR LIBRARY,
Founded by John Jacob Astor.
Dedicated to Learning.
(Date, &c.)

It seems to me that the line of dedication, if not the entire wording of the tablet, should be changed to:

"Dedicated to the People (or City) of New York."

In any event this tablet should be secondary. The place of honor should be occupied by the people's dedication of their own library to art, literature, and the sciences, and should read after this manner:

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY,
(Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations.)
Dedicated by the People of New York
to
ART, LITERATURE, SCIENCE.
A. D. 1906.

I am sure many will agree with me that, under the last dedication, one may enter the Public Library with a feeling of absolute freedom—as one entering one's own. No gift to the city, however valuable, should purchase the place of honor as a private memorial unless we are prepared to renounce our civic pride and become a pauperized community. It should be remembered that posterity will have a hand in the making of that library, but will posterity take any pride in a private memorial?

London, New York, and Crime.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I fully agree with "Londoner" that crime in New York should meet with greater punishment.

Perhaps "Englishman" (if he is one) was confined in some institution or asylum during his stay in London, since he says the streets are unsafe after dark. As a business woman, used to traveling the Cities of Paris and London at all hours, I can assure him that he does not know anything about the matter.

Let him read the "Scotchman's" letter of the 27th and he will have the plain, unvarnished truth proved by statistics that crime is greater here than the first controlling city of the world—London. May I add that for courtesy and politeness this city takes the very last place?

A REAL ENGLISHWOMAN.

New York, March 1, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If it were not very impolite I should like to characterize with a forcible little word of just three letters the statement made by "Englishman" in your issue of Feb. 27 to the effect that women are not safe on the streets of London after dark. I and my sisters have traversed London at all hours of the day and night without male escort for upward of twenty years without receiving insult or annoyance of any kind.

"Englishman" professes to believe that in this country "the fair sex" are guarded and respected more than in England. Can he give us any English parallels to the daylight "hold-up" cases in which Marie McLean and Rose Banks were the victims yesterday? Or to the treatment received by Mrs. Minor Morris at the White House?

103 Days from Philadelphia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A letter mailed to me in 1847 when I was a foremast hand on a whaleship reached me after traveling around the world for five years and eight months. Of course mail facilities were not perfect in those days.

We rather expect better things of the Post Office Department in the 20th century, but apparently we expect too much. A letter was mailed to me from Philadelphia on Nov. 16, 1905. It was properly and plainly addressed. The letter reached me on Feb. 27, 1906.

The distance between the two cities—ninety miles—was evidently covered on time. Station E, as the stamp certifies, was the recipient of that letter on Nov. 17, 1905. On Feb. 26, 1906, the letter reached Station F, and on Feb. 27, 1906, it reached Madison Square Station about 1 P. M.

Two hours thereafter it reached me, one hundred and three days on its journey from Philadelphia. This much prized letter did not bear a "Slow Delivery" stamp. We are now waiting to hear from the Postmaster.

A Universal Remedy Impossible.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From the beginning of things recorded men have been devising remedies for "the ills that flesh is heir to."

Unfortunately, these doctors have not taken into consideration the flesh itself. They have judged mankind by their individual experiences; they have measured clowns, idiots, and criminals by a fit-all standard; they have launched into extravagant romance while dealing in and treating of physical deformity and intellectual misfits.

The would-be reformer, who prescribes one panacea for all men, is a blatant jackass and an enemy to good order and justice. There cannot be a universal law for man.

A Clergyman as Bartender.

From The London Express.

"In these days the Church is dying of respectability, and I am going to try to save it across the bar of this public house."

The Rev. Samuel Thackeray, M. A., LL. D., priest in holy orders, and publican, smiled genially as he said this, and leaned against the bar of the Fish and Eels, Hoddesdon, the inn of which he now holds the license.

"What is the use of trying to reclaim drunkards," he continued, "when if you adopted the right policy you could prevent men from becoming drunkards?

"There is no evil in the drink itself. The evil is in excessive drinking. It is drunkenness, and not the drink itself, that is condemned of God, and it is drunkenness that I am here to prevent.

"If a gentleman calls at your house you may offer him a glass of wine, so what harm is there in the workman having his beer? If it is wrong for the one, it is wrong for the other.

"A pleasant feature of my arrival here is that nearly all the neighboring publicans have called to congratulate me and to offer their sympathy and support. They seem as anxious as I am to prevent people from becoming drunkards."

OHIO JUSTICE.

A Wrong to Which No Remedy Has Been Applied.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am very much pleased at the appearance of the editorial in THE TIMES this morning entitled, "Is It a Wrong Without a Remedy?" and referring to the present race riots in Springfield, Clarke County, Ohio.

My family reaches back to the early days of Springfield and its county. Some of them prospered, and for over a half century were among the important taxpayers. By purchase and inheritance I became the unfortunate owner, about twenty years ago, of a tenement in that city.

Two years ago occurred the race riots there on the "Levee," in which a number of houses were burned, mine among the number, and the Grand Jury afterward pronounced the municipal authorities negligent in the performance of their duties.

What was my surprise to find that neither the insurance company, nor the town, the county, nor the State could be held pecuniarily responsible. There was a peculiar feature of State law, and before it all the unfortunates have not been able otherwise to do than bow submissively. For the majority are poor, and the legal profession has apparently not considered the matter worthy of much consideration.

Believing in the right and reasonableness of my claim for loss, I have waited for some voice to rise somewhere in my native State to decry this injustice, to do what is right with the losers and to rectify the law.

But alas! there seems to have been no one, in the almost twenty-four months, to come out into the open and do this!

So, while regretting the "unfortunates" who are caught in this week's riots, it is almost impossible not to welcome a renewal of such outbreaks, as a possible means of reawakening a higher sense of purity and enlightened justice in Ohio.

CLARKE DOOLEY.

Is He or Is He Not?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. F. Wood merely shows how it is that he is enabled to eat a compound of salt, sauce, pepper, molasses, steak, and boiled potatoes—he does not justify the combination. A man needs ancestors 99 years old and still coming in order to stand such rations. Common folks, whose fathers and grandfathers were cut down at 80 or thereabout, will do well to adopt milder pabulum.

Something light is a good thing for midday. Last time I was in New York I saw a man order lobster salad, a plate of honey, and a cup of tea. He ate and drank in rotative spoonfuls. I never saw him again. I do not know whether anybody else did or not.

Maxwell's Innovations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will Supt. Maxwell's innovations never cease? The departmental system has just been inaugurated in the schools whereby each teacher has from five to seven classes per day, and each class a different teacher every forty minutes.

This latest Maxwell joke gives the teacher about 250 pupils per day, making it utterly impossible to remember any of them, whereas, previously, he or she may have been acquainted with the characteristics and capabilities of each member of a single class of fifty.

Why should one man be arbitrarily allowed to experiment on our public schools at the expense of our children's education?

Where Was the S. P. C. A.?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with intense indignation the tale you published to-day of the little green dog on Fifth Avenue.

It seems to me that if our Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is of any real use the story of the poor beast and the notice of the capture of the miscreant would have been published simultaneously. How any one calling himself man or boy could have done such a thing is beyond comprehension.

Is there no way in which the perpetrator of this act can be brought to justice? Somebody must have seen it done.

Adverse Are the Uses of Sweetness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Anent the cleverly written article "In Wordland" in last Sunday's TIMES, and particularly the use or misuse of the word "sweet," I am reminded of a use of it I heard recently. I had just purchased a bicycle and was taking it from the store, when an old negro who was present remarked:

"I bet dat wheel'll ride sweet."

The Contrary Conductor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I think there are others besides myself who since Feb. 25 have had to pay an extra fare on the surface cars or walk because on paying the fare and asking for a transfer the conductor ignored the request. When he comes back and is asked again he tells the passenger to ask for a transfer when he takes the fare.

This is some more "honest graft."

Cartridges with the Ballots.

From The Richmond Times-Dispatch.

BOYDTON, Va., Feb. 27.—Mr. Miller of Powhatan, who has had charge of moving and arranging the record books and papers from the old to the new clerk's office, was carrying out the order of the court Friday by burning a lot of ballots used in reconstruction days, when three explosions of pistol cartridge followed in rapid succession, the balls flying in different directions, causing consternation in the office. How these cartridges got with the ballots and why they were there is a mystery that will probably never be solved, but it will most likely bring to the remembrance of the hot-headed voters those trying days.

MEDIAEVAL CHIVALRY.

Enchanting Andalusia,
Where the sweet bolero blows,
Where the gay mantilla blossoms
And the wild sombrero grows,
Has been chosen for the scene of
This narrative—here goes:

Don Whiskers is the hero,
And thus he loudly cried:
"There is no maid like Blanca
Not only far but wide!"
Don Curio said that Rosa
Was like her—so he died.

Don Cowlick, too, was nettled,
And cried, as he rode past:
"Sweet Dulcinea has Blanca
Lashed firmly to the mast!"
But as he spoke Don Cowlick
Was seen to breathe his last.

Then came great Don Moustachio
Remarking that Lenore
Had Blanca stung—so Whiskers
Attacked him with a roar.
Throughout the week they battled,
Then voted it a bore.

They parted, both unconquered,
And to their sweethearts sped,
But—lo!—Lenore and Blanca,
Provoked at knights ill-bred,
To law-abiding grocers
Were comfortably wed.

HERBERT, CONDUCTOR AT PHILHARMONIC CONCERT

Raff's Symphony and Beethoven's Concerto Played.

HENRI MARTEAU THE SOLOIST

Herbert's "Suite Romantique" Well Played by the Orchestra—Many Recalls for Marteau.

Victor Herbert, who conducted the Philharmonic Society's second pair of concerts, conducts also the seventh, of which the afternoon performance was given yesterday, and the evening performance will follow to-day. His programme was made up of Raff's "Im Walde" symphony, Beethoven's violin concerto, played by Mr. Henri Marteau, and his own "Suite Romantique," Op. 31, for orchestra. This programme had the merit of being of reasonable dimensions, which has seldom been the case since the plan of bringing over conductors from abroad was put into practice.

Of Raff's symphonies only two have really survived, and it is a coincidence that both the "Lenore" symphony, which Dr. Frank Damrosch played at one of his recent Young People's Concerts, and this one should be brought forward within so short a time after both had been neglected for some years. It seems likely that they will be increasingly neglected as time goes on. The symphony "Im Walde" shows, in truth, many of the wrinkles of age. It sounded old fashioned, and in many places like a very obvious kind of music, and in others weak. Yet there is much that is agreeable, much that is really potent in attaining the results the composer was aiming at. For the symphony is "programme music," of a kind that seems to-day quite harmless.

It seeks to call up moods parallel with those that are evoked by the solemnity of the forest and its shadowy mysteries, and to offer through the ear the suggestion of some of the mythological beings of the woods and the glimpses of their strange doings seldom caught by mortal eyes. Neither the solemnity nor the mystery is very profound in Raff's music. Some say that the German can be brought to the verge of tears by the mere mention of the word "Wald." Raff does not go so far as that. He has reached not much beyond a cheerful suggestion of well-being and tranquillity in the first movement—or is there even that in this well-written and pleasantly wrought orchestral fabric, rarely stirring below the surface strata of musical impressions?—and in the second a fanciful twilight reverie. The obvious impression given by the scherzo is that it is a leaf taken from Mendelssohn's book of elfin stories; and the passing of the wild hunt with Frau Holle and Wotan in the last movement leaves little to even the most ingenuous imagination.

Mr. Herbert is skilled in the technique of conducting, he knows the orchestra, he knows his former colleagues of the Philharmonic Society, and he had prepared a good performance of the symphony. In it there were many delicate effects, effects of color, of contrast, of nicely adjusted dynamics. The orchestra played with more finish than it has sometimes, and the performance of the symphony showed it forth in its best light.

Mr. Herbert's own suite had been played here six years ago, when he was conductor of the Pittsburg Orchestra and brought that organization to New York. His reputation will not rest on this work, which is a strange mixture of various elements, in which it must be confessed a certain commonplaceness dressed up with much high orchestral color is predominant. The orchestral brilliancy is what is most to be admired; and of this he got full expression from the orchestra.

Mr. Marteau's fine, artistic powers were exemplified in many ways in his performance of Beethoven's concerto—his broad and virile style and his big and sonorous tone were in evidence, and in the Larghetto there were poetry and an elevated spirit. He was at times at fault in his intonation, however, and his energy sometimes produced roughness. He was listened to with pleasure and several times recalled.

MR. BRADY OBJECTS.

Answers a Curtain Call and Says the Critics Are Unfair.

Hard words for New York dramatic critics came thick and fast over the footlights of the Liberty Theatre last night. William A. Brady, theatrical manager and producer of "The Redskin," which opened the night before, did not like the way the newspapers talked about his piece, and so, somewhat according to his usual custom, took the first opportunity of relieving his mind publicly.

Mr. Brady's chance came last evening after the curtain had fallen on the second act of "The Redskin." He answered calls for "author," went before the curtain, and said:

"It is time that New York newspapers began to send to our playhouses men and women with hearts and souls instead of a band of clever wits. If it needs a man of heart and serious purpose to act a play, why shouldn't it take the same kind of man to criticise it? What we want is critics who will tell us what is wrong, and not come to our plays looking simply for a chance to make fun of them.

"A newspaper this morning compared Mr. Tyrone Power in this piece to a cigar store Indian. Is that your opinion of him? [Cries of "No; he's fine."] Well, that's what I want—your verdict. If I wanted to pick out personal peculiarities, do you think I couldn't poke fun at Acton Davies or Alan Dale? I spend money and effort on a play I sincerely believe to be good, and justice demands that it should be talked about seriously. Hereafter I mind nothing about critics. I'm done with 'em."

Mr. Brady left the stage amid cheers and applause.

Later he said he would speak again to-night and the night after that.

"TOSCA" AT THE OPERA.

Mme. Eames and Messrs. Dippel and Scotti in Puccini's Work.

Puccini's opera of "Tosca" was given last evening for the second time this season at the Opera House, before an audience of rather moderate size, for which the cause might have been found partly in the fact that Mr. Caruso was not in the cast. His part of Cavaradossi was taken by Mr. Dippel, and, although the printer of the programme endeavored to make it appear that it was the favorite Italian who was singing, there could have been little doubt in the minds of even the most infrequent of operagoers. But Mr. Dippel presents a considerably more striking and plausible figure.

Mme. Eames was the Tosca and Mr. Scotti the Scarpia, and these two gave admirable impersonations. The opera was carried through with energy and spirit by Mr. Vigna's conducting. The opera is not one that wears well. Its second act is full of striking dramatic effects, but Sardou has done more for the opera than Puccini. His music is not strong in invention nor in expressive quality, and affords little intensification of the dramatic and emotional moments. In most of these respects it stands lower than "La Bohême," by the same composer.

ELSIE JANIS NOT MARRIED.

Won't Marry Just Yet, Despite a Report—Too Young, Her Mother Says.

Elsie Janis, the young star of "The Vanderbilt Cup" at the Broadway Theatre, strenuously denied last evening that she has been married to Lee Sohngen of Hamilton, Ohio. They had heard in Hamilton that she had, and the report was being repeated up and down Broadway.

"I saw Mr. Sohngen only once, and that was three years ago in Columbus," said Miss Janis. "I am not married, have never been married, and have no intention of marrying for many years to come. As mamma says, I am altogether too young."

And as a poetic finality, Mrs. Janis, who was standing near, added:

"Elsie as yet has a sweetheart to get."

THE MOON HID A STAR,

And the Clouds Hid the Whole Show, So You'll Have to Assume It All.

Squinting through a tiny pair of opera glasses, the Amateur Astronomer stood at Forty-seventh Street and Sixth Avenue last night at 10:34½. He was hunting for something right over across the avenue.

"Aldebaran!" he murmured with fervor.

A belated bootblack, standing near by, looked nervously at the Amateur Astronomer, and made a start as if to move away. Before he could do it the astronomer turned on him and groaned.

"Those cursed clouds obscure the stars to-night."

The bootblack agreed out loud, but muttered "Dippy!" Then the man with the opera glasses turned about abruptly, and once again began to squint across the elevated tracks in his search for something. What he wanted to see was Aldebaran—and that's a star—sliding into invisibility behind the moon. There were lots of other amateur astronomers peering out of windows in search of the same phenomenon, but they were disappointed. Not even the moon was to be seen.

Somewhere back of the clouds in the southwestern sky was the brilliant planet Jupiter, not far, as the eye sees, from the moon. To the right of Jupiter was the little patch of stars called the Pleiades, and to the left were the Hyades, a V-shaped group. Aldebaran is the upper left-hand star of the V.

At 10:35 the star slid behind the moon, or at least the astronomers said it was to do that. Said one astronomer before it all happened:

"As the moon has no atmosphere and the star has no size, Aldebaran will disappear with surprising suddenness, and it will be particularly interesting because the dark side of the moon will occult Aldebaran and the star will seem to disapper from the sky without any apparent cause."

McCALL LEFT ALL TO WIFE.

Will Was Made the Day Before He Died—Estate Over $20,000.

The brief will of John A. McCall was filed for probate in the Surrogate's office yesterday by Lawyer H. H. Bottome of 41 Wall Street. It is dated Feb. 17, the day before Mr. McCall died at Lakewood. The witnesses to the will were the testator's brother, Supreme Court Justice McCall, and the testator's sons, Leo H. McCall and John C. McCall.

The petition accompanying the will states that the testator left a personal estate in the State of New York of more than $10,000 and real estate of the value of more than $10,000. The will, which is brief, reads:

In the name of God, Amen. I, John A. McCall of the City, County, and State of New York, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do make, publish, and declare this my last will and testament:

First—I hereby revoke all former wills or testamentary dispositions by me heretofore made.

Second—I direct the payment of all my just and legal debts.

Third—I nominate and appoint my beloved wife, Mary I. McCall, my sole executrix of this my last will and testament.

Fourth—All my estate of every name, nature, or kind, whether real, personal, or mixed, and wheresoever situate, I give, devise, grant, and bequeath to my beloved wife, Mary I. McCall, her heirs, and assigns, absolutely and forever.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 17th day of February, in the year one thousand nine hundred and six.

JOHN A. McCALL.

2-DAY PICTURE SALE BRINGS IN $106,975

C. I. Hudson Pays $5,600 for Schreyer's "The Retreat."

SOME BUYERS MADE ERRORS

And Several Pictures Were Resold, in Consequence, for Smaller Prices—Second Day Total, $74,950.

The closing sale of the pictures of Messrs. Schlemm, Tanenbaum, Salomon, Mehrbach, Biddle, and the estate of Henry Steers at Mendelssohn Hall last evening brought $74,950, or double the total of Thursday evening's sale. The best pictures of the collection were sold last evening, and there was a higher average of prices, as well as higher prices for the work of the individual artists.

A Schreyer brought the highest price of the entire sale, going to C. I. Hudson for $5,600. This was "The Retreat," showing an Arab sheik on a white horse holding a banner in his hand galloping over rocky ground and followed by his attendants.

Another Arab picture, "The Reconnaissance," by Schreyer, followed this one closely, bringing $5,400, given by H. O. Seixes. Both of these pictures were started at $2,000. So was a Josef Israels, "Watching and Waiting," which tied the second Schreyer, going to an unknown buyer for $5,400. It brought the liveliest bidding of the evening.

Henner's pictures brought good prices, the "Weeping Magdalen" going to Mrs. Williams for $1,325, while Henner's girl in the red jacket, "The Dreamer," brought $1,850. Harpignies's "Summer" brought $3,500; Bouguereau's "Gardener's Daughter," $3,200, and a Corot and a Jacque, respectively, $2,600 and $2,500. Only one picture went for less than $100.

A feature of last night was the reselling of five of the pictures of Thursday evening's sale which were rejected because of misunderstandings. They sold the second time for much lower prices, the five, which brought on Thursday a total of $4,005, going last night for $2,875, a difference of $1,130. One of the pictures was a Schreyer, "The Scout," which was bought in by an agent for $2,450. But the buyer had in mind the other Schreyer, "Wallachian Peasant and Horses," and would have paid much more for it than the price given, $2,100. "The Scout" was resold last night for only $1,750. Deducting the difference made in the reselling of the pictures, the proceeds of the entire sale were $106,975.

HAMMERSTEIN, JR., WEDS.

Has His Father's Blessing Though 'Twas a Surprise.

It came out yesterday that Abraham Lincoln Hammerstein, youngest son of Oscar Hammerstein, had married Miss Ethel Britton some five weeks ago. Young Hammerstein, who is employed in the coatroom of his father's theatre, the Victoria, met Miss Britton some time in November. She was then employed in one of the Harlem stores. Oscar Hammerstein did not learn of his son's new responsibilities until yesterday.

"He has my blessing," said Mr. Hammerstein last night. "So has Jerome; so has everybody."

Hippodrome's Trained Pig Is Dead.

"Phoebe," the trick pig of "A Yankee Circus on Mars," died last evening in Chicago. The long trip West, together with the excitement of the successful opening, were too much for her. George Kingsbury, business manager of the Hippodrome, telegraphed the sad news last night. The manager said that already many floral tributes had been received.

A SCHOOL OF ART CRAFTS?

Discussion at National Arts Club of Questions of Great Interest.

The meeting of representatives of various art handicrafts at the National Arts Club was attended to the full limits of seating capacity of the galleries, and great interest was displayed in the discussion. A resolution was passed at the close authorizing the Chairman to appoint a large committee to include representatives of all the leading art crafts, who are to report to another meeting to be called whenever convenient.

In his opening remarks Mr. Spencer Trask, President of the club, after welcoming the invited guests, expressed the feeling of the members that while the club was equally interested in what are called the fine arts, from the inception of the work of the club, a large share of energy had been directed to such encouragement of the so-called industrial arts as the present quarters allowed. Prior to moving to the Tilden Mansion on Gramercy Park and the Studio Annex on East Nineteenth Street it was desirable to discuss the situation as presented by the prospect of larger quarters and of galleries for exhibition, having an entrance separate from the clubhouse itself. Various suggestions had been made, such as the establishment of a school of art crafts under the direction of the club and the opening of a permanent exhibition of objects of the arts and crafts.

Mr. Frederick S. Lamb advocated a permanent exhibition for objects of industrial art, calling attention to the fact that exhibitions held by societies of painters are arranged to include the sale of paintings. He saw no reason why men and women who make their living by work apart from easel paintings and sculpture should pretend to ignore the necessity of selling their wares. As to a school of arts and crafts, he was not prepared to say that this would be feasible without a proper endowment.

Mr. Arthur Dow of the Teachers' College, Columbia University, protested against the false impression made by the use of the terms fine arts and arts and crafts, a division which confused the public, seeing that all art works are the product of craftsmen, while the superiority of fine art implied by that mode of expression did not necessarily exist. Painting and sculpture when poor are not fine art, while industrial art works, when good, are as fine as anything on canvas or in bronze.

Mrs. Anna B. Leonard, President of the New York Society of Keramic Arts, spoke for the decorators, and a letter was read from Mr. Charles Volkmar as a representative of the art potters. Miss Amy Hicks spoke briefly as the leading spirit in the New York Guild of Arts and Crafts, and from Cincinnati Mr. William Watts Taylor, President of the Rookwood Pottery, sent greetings by letter. Mrs. Johnston of Richmond, Ind., described the progress of an organization of art workers in her town, showing how they had enlisted the interest of the Common Council of Richmond through the educational side of such efforts as her society had been able to make, so that it now receives financial aid from the city. The work of Berea College, Kentucky, was described by one speaker. William Taber Sears spoke of the Arts and Crafts Society of Boston and the textile handicraft pursued by ladies in Deerfield, Mass.

Mr. John Ward Stimson reviewed the efforts once made by the Metropolitan Museum to conduct a school of the arts and crafts, spoke of the Artist-Artisan Institute, now merged in the New York School of Art, and of the school established by him at Trenton, N. J., ending with a fiery exhortation to those present not to let the matter drop.

Another speaker reviewed the situation in New York, maintaining that the local art world was like a pyramid poised on its apex, because everything had been done for the fine arts, so called, while the fruitful industrial arts, out of which the fine arts should grow, had been neglected. The Arts Club is a product of the twentieth century, and should stand for modern ideas. It should do what is possible to reverse the pyramid and stand it on its base, using the widest possible spread of art crafts as an education for the people in order to prepare the ground for a greater and better-founded taste in the arts.

Other speakers considered the two questions of a school and a permanent exhibition, the majority favoring a permanent salesroom and rejecting, at least for the present, the establishment of a school. It appeared to be generally conceded, however, that these matters should be left to the committee of art workers to be appointed by the Chair. Laymen who spoke or sent letters included John J. Murphy, John De Witt Warner, and Walter S. Logan.

It was stated at the meeting that the club intends to have an exhibition of objects of the art crafts this Spring.

CENTRAL PARK WAS DARK.

Policeman Mulvey Blames a Mixture of Alcohol, Matches and Bad Language.

When it came time that there should be light in Central Park last night there was no light, and Policeman Mulvey, who has the beat through that part of the park intersected by the Eighty-sixth Street line, began a hunt for the lamplighter.

There was a scratching sound and an occasional spark at the top of a lamp post near Eighty-fifth Street, and one of the paths near the western wall. Mulvey found Francisco Munti, the lamplighter, at the top of the post doing the best he could to light the lamp there. But as fast as Munti scratched so fast did the heads fly off the matches. And as fast as the match heads fell to the path strange oaths fell from the lips of the lamplighter above.

Mulvey yelled to Munti to quit trying and shin down. Munti grinned back and chattered curses.

"I'll come after you if you don't shin down!" yelled Mulvey.

Munti used more language and scratched off the heads of more matches. In a supreme effort to get one of them lighted by friction on the seat of his trousers he lost his grip and slid down. Mulvey arrested him.

"Y're intoxicated," Mulvey informed the Italian.

Munti gave him his opinion of the police force in general, and Mulvey in particular, and followed it with a fight that would have meant bloodshed had not Mulvey been a 200-pounder and Munti a featherweight, weazened with age. Munti was finally locked up in the Arsenal.

BENEFIT FOR CANCER HOME.

Justice O'Brien to Lecture in Carnegie Hall on Monday Night.

To assist in reducing the debt of the community whose members are known as the "Servants of Relief for Incurable Cancer," Justice Morgan J. O'Brien will lecture in Carnegie Hall next Monday night on "The Civilization of the Twentieth Century." Ex-Chief Justice Alton B. Parker will preside, and Archbishop Farley and others will tell of the work which is being done by the community for cancerous patients. There will also be a programme of instrumental and vocal music. The sale of seats is in charge of the Secretary, Edward J. McGuire, 52 Wall Street.

The Servants of Relief are headed by Mother Alphonsa, formerly Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne. The order is a branch of the Roman Catholic Order of St. Dominic. It maintains institutions at 426 Cherry Street, Manhattan, and at Rosary Hills, near White Plains. The purchase of the Rosary Hill home saddled a large debt upon the order, of which it can only be relieved by the charitable. Its doors are open to all poor cancerous patients, regardless of creed. If they have money to pay for treatment they must go elsewhere.

Among the patrons of Monday night's entertainment are John Gagar, Edward B. Amend, James Byrne, J. I. C. Clarke, W. Bourke Cockran, A. R. Culver, Dr. W. C. Deming, Thomas M. Mulry, Herman Ridder, and Augustus St. Gaudens.

GUN SCENE TOO REALISTIC.

Actress Really Shot from Cannon's Mouth, but There Was an Excuse.

PATERSON, N. J., March 2.—The "great scene" in "Shannon of the Sixth" was unusually great at the Opera House last night. Miss Marguerite Fields became a real heroine, the actor who plays Kirk Brown proved himself a real hero, and, incidentally, the marriage of William Tennyson to Miss Pansy Leroy was shown to have been the consummation of a true love affair. All this was the result of an accident caused by Mr. Tennyson's sentimental thoughts, which overcame him at the wrong moment.

The stage directions for the "great scene" are as follows: A band of Sepoys binds the heroine to the mouth of a cannon; its leader applies a torch to a harmless fuse, and the Sepoys flee. Just as the fuse is apparently about to set off the cannon, Kirk Brown rushes on the scene and rescues the heroine. At this point William Tennyson is supposed to pull a string that he has been holding in the wings all the time. This makes the cannon roar, but too late to hurt anybody. The curtain descends, the audience heaves a sigh of relief, the eyes of the small boys no longer pop out, and the fuse is made ready for the next performance.

Yesterday afternoon William Tennyson, who plays the part of Umbolla when he isn't standing ready to set off the cannon, led Miss Pansy Leroy of the "Gay New York" company to the altar. In the evening he was at his accustomed place in the wings, but his mind was not concerned with the young woman on the stage, and he pulled the string a second too soon.

The cannon roared before Kirk Brown arrived, and Miss Fields, the heroine, was struck with a ball of burning wadding. Her hair, which was hanging down her back, was set on fire. Brown made one leap instead of two to the cannon's mouth, untied Miss Fields, smothered the flames with his hands, and struck his usual attitude as the curtain fell.

Miss Fields had bravely refrained from making any outcry, and no one in the audience realized what had happened. When she asked William Tennyson afterward why he had made such a dangerous mistake he frankly told her that Pansy was the cause.

"Then it's a case where carelessness can be excused," the heroine replied, and they all made merry.

Minute adopted by the Board of Managers of the Coffee Exchange of the City of New York, at a meeting held Feb. 7, 1906:

The Board of Managers have learned with deep regret of the death of their former colleague, the first Secretary of the Exchange, Mr. Francis B. Arnold, who in 1881 was one of the chief promoters of the establishment of this Exchange and who devoted his keen intellect and indefatigable efforts to the task of organizing the working basis of our institution, which has flourished and grown in importance far beyond the sanguine expectations of its charter members.

Though, owing to ill health, Mr. Arnold retired from the Exchange last year, the Board feels that, in thought, he remained a member until his untimely demise, and that his colleagues and the members of the Exchange owe to him a tribute of respect, gratitude, and appreciation.

It was therefore unanimously resolved, that the foregoing minute be entered upon the records of the Exchange, and that the sympathy and sorrow of the Exchange be expressed to Mr. Arnold's family, to whom a transcript of this record be sent.

More Facilities for Playing, and Diamonds Will Be Asked For in the Parks.

Amateur and semi-professional baseball clubs and players in Greater New York and vicinity that have become attached to the recently organized Intercity Baseball Association are likely to be materially benefited. The conditions which governed the operations of this contingent of the National game have been of such a free-lance character that rules were violated with impunity, players could do as they liked, and clubs were conducted on a basis that admitted of no redress.

All this will be a thing of the past, however, if the clubs agree to abide by the constitution and by-laws of the Intercity Association, which have been devised with a great deal of care and solely with the view of giving the utmost protection to amateur and semi-professional clubs and players. According to F. D. Baldwin, the President of the new association, the game locally had deteriorated so much that it was only a question of time when playing would cease entirely on Sundays, a day of all others that the young generation especially should receive the privilege of engaging in the National sport of America.

"We have in the neighborhood of 100 clubs in the Intercity Association," said President Baldwin yesterday, "and while several of the prominent semi-professional clubs around New York are outside the breastworks at present, I am positive they will soon be with us. It is a prodigious undertaking, I know, to bring these local teams under the influence of a governing body, but, judging by the enthusiasm already manifested by the members of the new association, I am positive that amateur and semi-professional baseball playing hereafter will be much more respected.

"Any amateur or semi-professional club is eligible to join the association, the only requirement being that the club shall be regularly organized, officered, and uniformed. It is proposed to secure better facilities for the playing of the game, and it will be our especial object to induce the Park Commissioners to lay out diamonds in the various parks, so that they can be used on Sundays as well as weekdays.

"We shall try to have a better understanding with the police authorities regarding Sunday games. There is no good reason why ball playing should be allowed in one part of the city and not in the other. I am pretty confident that when the objects of the Intercity Association are known to the authorities there will be no objection to orderly and well-regulated games on Sunday."

Among the clubs enrolled in the Intercity Association are: Colonial, Ontario Field Club, Xavier A. C., Bronx B. B. C., Powhatan B. B. C., Iona Giants, New York Colored Giants, Carsey's Metropolitans, Cedars, Murray Hills, Belmont, B. B. C., All-Tremont F. C., Pioneer B. B. C., Ajax A. C., Arion F. C., Crockery League, White Rose B. B. C., Webster Academy, Vera Cruz Council, Knights of Columbus, Sylvan B. B. C., Sentinel A. C., St. Philip's A. C., St. John's A. C., People's Park A. C., National Lyceum, Monitor A. C., Maroon Catholic Club, Loraine B. B. C., Kenwood F. C., Garfield A. C., Fulton B. B. C., Century A. C., Bronx F. C., all of New York; Senator B. B. C., Missouri Pacific B. B. C., Loughlin Lyceum, and Jamaica Orioles of Brooklyn; Young Men's League, Long Island City Field Club, Blessinger Association, St. Mary's Baseball Club, and Glenwood B. B. C. of Long Island; Atlas Field Club and Montgomery F. C. of Jersey City; East Side Field Club and Paterson A. A. of Paterson, N. J.; Everett College Baseball Club of Arverne, L. I.

The men who will guide the affairs of the association for the first year are: President—F. D. Baldwin, Colonial Baseball Club, New York; Vice President—G. H. Creegan, Crockery League; Secretary—L. H. Wessels, Spalding Baseball Club; Treasurer—J. H. Poggi Xavier Athletic Club; Board of Directors—W. L. Golden, New York; Edward McCafferty, Ontario F. C., New York; B. J. Coates, Powhatan B. B. C., New York; J. P. Nimphius, Bronx Baseball Club; John Holmes, Young Men's League, Ozone Park, L. I.; Thomas B. Sheehan, Blessinger Association, Long Island City; Nicholas Hughes, East Side Field Club, Paterson, N. J., with the President and Vice President ex-officio members.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Greater New York Club of the American League, was made a member of the association by a unanimous vote.

GOOD TIP FOR THE GIANTS.

Bet on Mechant in Memphis Poolrooms and Make a "Killing."

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, March 2.—Manager McGraw, Henry Mathewson, "Tim" Flood, the minor leaguer; A. Smith, and others, here with the New York National League team, visited the poolrooms to-day, and on the strength of a tip from McGraw's friends at the local race track they plunged on Mechant, ridden by Jockey Radtke, at Hot Springs. Mechant won all the way, according to reports received in local rooms, and the happy crowd left with money sized up by them as of "killing" proportions. They received a dollar for every one invested, which was explained here to be better than the track odds offered.

A rain which began before time for forenoon practice caused the Giants to abandon all out-of-door work, and as the arrivals were slim Manager McGraw decided to give members of the team the first holiday of the training season. As a result the majority visited places of historical interest, several of the men, who are visiting the South for the first time, showing interest in the antebellum relics, which include the slave forum where Southern masters, before 1861, sold, traded, or bought Senegambians, who were knocked down to the highest bidder.

SCHOOLBOYS SKATE WELL.

Boys' High Wins from Cutler at Hockey—Fast Relay Racing.

The Boys' High School hockey team defeated the Cutler School seven of Manhattan by the score of 2 goals to 1 at the Clermont Avenue Rink last night. The visitors surprised everybody with the game they played against the Brooklyn boys. Lauder of Boys' High secured the first goal soon after play began, and a few minutes later Fox tied the score. In the second half Baker shot the winning goal for Boys' High. After the hockey game several skating races were decided. Public School No. 11 relay team won the one-mile interscholastic race by forty yards, and Hugh Palliser skated a quarter-mile exhibition, backward, in 0:55 2-5. The line-up of hockey game and summary of races:

Croll defeated Frank Meehan by the score of 125 balls to the latter's 111. Both played on even terms during the first frames of the competition. Then Croll obtained a slight lead by good combination shooting, during which he made his best run, sending a total of 18 balls into the pockets. Meehan's best run was 17 balls.

GALLOPS AT GRAVESEND.

"Father Bill" Daly's Horses Carry Off the Speed Honors.

"Father Bill" Daly carried off the speed honors of the training delegation at Gravesend yesterday. He sent Warning, Best Boy, Tom Cod, and Radical a half in 0:51½. There is nothing remarkable in this, for Daly always hurries his horses in the Spring, and he contemplates racing a dozen of them at Benning. Others in the Daly lot that were shown yesterday were Amberjack, Toi San, Priority, and Caronal, in a five-furlong breeze, in 1:06¼. His two-year-olds, Kingston Girl, Sweet Eileen, and Josephine Louise Daly, were breezed along smartly for three furlongs in 0:41. Veronese was the only other one shown by the Hartford horseman.

Whimsical, one of the really good two-year-old fillies of last year, had her first speed trial yesterday, when Tim Gaynor permitted her to step along for a quarter. It was not, properly speaking, a speed trial, for she was under double wraps all the way and almost pulled her exercise boy out of the saddle, stepping the distance in 0:28½. A pair of two-year-old fillies from the same stable were indulged in a quarter in 0:28¾.

Frank Weir had his great sprinter, Roseben, out with Keator, though neither one was asked any speed question. Clark Griffith, in company with five two-year-olds, went along very cleverly for a quarter in 0:28½.

Fred Burlew, who never loses an opportunity when weather permits, had his string out in two sets. One lot of two-year-olds was headed by Belmere, and after a long gallop they were sent along for a quarter in 0:27½. Of the youngsters shown, the Watercress-Braw Lass and the Toddington-Osculation colts were the most impressive. They were full of running, and kept their riders busy all the way. Green Room and Waterbearer went along for three furlongs in 0:42, and a second lot of two-year-olds breezed a quarter handily in 0:26½.

Yesterday Burlew received from George Miller's farm a two-year-old bay colt by Marius-Head Flower, the dam of that good race horse Headwater. He had been turned out all Winter, and will be put into training for the coming season.

A. J. Goldsborough had the Bennett filly Flip Flap under saddle, though nothing in the way of speed was asked of her. She is well engaged in the filly stakes of the year, and is coming along in a manner that should see her at the races in excellent condition.

Tom Welsh had his lot on the slow side, though as a finish to their exercise he permitted the two-year-olds to step along for a quarter at a shade better than a two-minute clip.

John Hynes is expected to arrive at Gravesend from his Winter quarters at Stamford, Conn., next Tuesday. He has a big string in his care.

N. Y. U. GYMNASTS FIRST.

Outpoint Princeton Men in a Dual Meet by 26 to 22.

The gymnastic team of the New York University defeated Princeton last night in the local university's gymnasium at University Heights. It was the first dual meet of the season that the New York gymnasts have held, and the contest was much closer than they had expected. Six events were decided. The New York University won by a total of 26 points to 22. Only first and second places counted, and the winning team received a banner.

L. Greenfield's victory in the flying rings was well deserved. He got third place last year in the championship and he will be the strongest New York University man for that event this season. His Maltese Cross manoeuvres were superbly done. H. L. Dowd, a Princeton freshman, captured second place, only a few points behind the winner. Dowd and Ketcham of the home team were so well matched that when the points awarded by the judges were figured it was found that Dowd had beaten Ketcham by only one-tenth of a point. Dowd got second to his college mate, E. W. McCabe, in the horizontal bar event. McCabe is the present intercollegiate champion in horizontal bar work. He scored the high total of 75.6 points out of a possible 90. McCabe's reverse giant swinging was the feature of the event and evolved generous applause.

Side Horse.—Won by J. Fernandez, New York University, 69.3 points; E. J. O'Brien, New York University, 68.6 points, second; J. E. Freeman and A. K. Krause, Princeton, tied for third at 65 points. W. Rosenbloom, New York University, also competed.

Club Swinging.—Won by G. P. A. Brayden, New York University, 79.5 points; J. C. Cooper, Princeton, 67 points, second; L. P. Sanger, New York University, third.

Horizontal Bar.—Won by E. W. McCabe, Princeton, 75.6 points; H. L. Dowd, Princeton, 68 points, second; G. W. Bartelmez, New York University, 67.5 points, third. A. Schnall, New York University, also competed.

Flying Rings.—Won by L. Greenfield, New York University, 76.4 points; H. L. Dowd, Princeton, 70.7 points, second; S. C. Ketcham, New York University, 70.6 points, third. D. Kingsley, New York University, also competed.

Tumbling.—Won by E. W. McCabe, Princeton, 72.2 points; W. E. Thompson, N. Y. University, 76 points, second. E. Leonard and W. L. Dowd, Princeton, and W. W. Williamson, N. Y. University, also competed.

Parallel Bars.—Won by A. Schnall, N. Y. University, 73 points; W. W. Hay, Princeton, 72 points, second; G. W. Bartelemez and J. Fernandez, N. Y. University, also competed.

The judges were Dr. Wells Miller, Twenty-third Street Branch Y. M. C. A.; Dr. Poole, West Side Branch Y. M. C. A., and Mr. Magzer, Newark Academy.

A. G. Vanderbilt's New Coach Horses.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., March 2.—Twenty-two coach horses, which have been purchased in various places for Alfred G. Vandebilt, to be used on his coach Venture in New York during the coaching season, have arrived here. They will be trained over the country roads near Oakland Farm, preparatory to the runs in New York during the Spring.

Against Auto Dealers on Racing Board

LOS ANGELES, March 2.—E. R. Thomas of Buffalo, N. Y., an automobile manufacturer, who is at present in this city, last night sent a telegram to the Secretary of the American Automobile Association at Chicago protesting against the appointment of any agents or members of automobile manufacturing firms on the Racing Board which will take charge of the next Vanderbilt Cup race. The appointments will soon be announced by the new President, John Farson.

UNIFORM AUTO LAWS WILL BE A. A. A. POLICY

President Farson Will Work on National Lines.

FINDS NO CHARM IN RACING

Favors Economy and Endurance Contests—Will Agitate Good Roads Movement in the West.

John Farson, the new President of the American Automobile Association, arrived in town yesterday from Chicago with Sidney S. Gorham, the new Secretary. Mr. Farson is not unknown here, as his enthusiasm for motoring has been pronounced for several years. Although small in stature, he has broad and big views regarding the future utility of motor cars and the measures that should be adopted toward that end. Some of these ideas Mr. Farson outlined briefly at his office, 34 Pine Street.

"Do I favor speed contests?" ejaculated Mr. Farson, when asked if the American Automobile Association would take an active part in encouraging road races or track events. "No, I am strongly opposed to automobile racing. Of course, in the case of the Vanderbilt Cup event, where proper arrangements are made for safeguarding the public, there are arguments in its favor, one of the best being that it only comes once a year. But races, planned simply for the making of records, say from New York to Boston, or from New York to Chicago, are not only useless, but detrimental to the best interests of automobiling. Let endurance contests and economy runs be substituted for these and the general public will learn something worth while about automobiles, while the relations between the manufacturer and the owner of motor cars will be more cordial and helpful."

Mr. Farson firmly believes that greater attention should be paid toward bringing about a community of interest between the makers and users of automobiles.

"Every automobilist," he continued, "should realize the wonderful improvements that have been made by American manufacturers within the last two or three years. Hundreds of Eastern automobilists probably have no idea to how great an extent the moderate-priced and serviceable small car has resulted in a friendlier feeling through the country districts of the West toward automobiles. In many sections of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, where a short time ago there was hostile feeling in the so-called farming districts, totally different conditions now prevail. The well-to-do farmer and the man of moderate means are buying the small cars that sell from $750 to $1,500 in large numbers, and they are discovering that there are elements of usefulness in the motor car apart from the mere pleasure of driving about the country."

Mr. Farson hopes to make the influence of the A. A. A. in the interests of good roads and sane laws felt more strongly in the future than has been the case in the past.

"Not only will the subject of good roads be agitated in the various States," added Mr. Farson, "but efforts will be made to bring the subject of National road improvement before Congress. I am glad to see that steps in this direction have been taken. The great need of the West, apart from its relation to the use of automobiles, is good roads. In Illinois, for instance, we have no real road law. A uniform good road law should be adopted by all the States in the Union. It might differ in some cases in detail, but the essential principles should be the same, particularly in stating how much money the State should expend and the proportion for the counties and local communities. A great deal of road repairing in the West is still done under the old poll tax system. The farmers get out for a few days a year, cut the turf on the sides of the road, throw it over, bottom side up, in the middle, and your road improvement for a year is over."

FOSS'S SLOW BILLIARDS.

Ex-Amateur Champion in Poor Form at 18.2 Against Hoppe's 18.1.

Wilson P. Foss, the ex-amateur National billiard champion, met William F. Hoppe, the world's champion, yesterday in the latter's academy, Thirtieth Street near Sixth Avenue. Hoppe played one count in balk against two for Foss at the eighteen-inch balk line game. The professional scored 400 points to 317 for the amateur, who during the first portion of the contest led his opponent. Hoppe made an average of 10 20-38 while Foss had an average of 8 21-37.

The ivory balls rolled hard for both players, and runs of any size were infrequent. Hoppe was the first to count in double figures on his fifth turn at the table. In this inning he gathered 32 carroms by close work in the centre panel and along the end cushion. Then he lapsed into poor manipulation while Foss improved. From the tenth to the twelfth inning Foss managed to get the balls to his liking and counted 23, 39, and 28 in rapid succession. This gave Foss the lead over Hoppe, the score being 124 to 90 points.

Foss after this bit of good cue work appeared to have great difficulty in negotiating his draw and spread draw shots. The reason for this appeared to be due to the coldness of the ivory balls, as Foss missed comparatively easy shots by wide margins. Hoppe found the same trouble and he was also away off on his angle shots. His billiards was better judged than those of Foss, however, and by careful manipulation he managed to win by gathering small clusters of carroms. Foss was not up to his usual form, although he made a fine effort to overcome his opponent's lead at the end.

In the evening game Hoppe met C. T. Peterson, and won by the score of 300 to 221. The young champion was in excellent form, and averaged 21 6-14, with a high run of 107. Peterson's best run was 59, with an average of 15 11-14.

A special match has been arranged for next week between Willie Hoppe and "Mart" Mullen, the crack amateur. The match will probably be played on Wednesday night.

Sloan and McCoy Win at Pool.

Tod Sloan and "Kid" McCoy engaged Jim Corbett and Phil Daly, Jr., in a pool match in which the jockey and the pugilist defeated their opponents by 100 balls to 93. The match was played in the room over which the ex-jockey presides as partner with John J. McGraw, at Forty-second Street and Broadway. It was the outcome of a discussion as to the relative skill and merits of the players at the game, and a tight little sum of money changed hands on the result. Both Sloan and McCoy played well and each scored 9 balls as their high run in respective frames. Phil Daly, Jr., made a high run of 10 balls and on the whole was the best at sending the balls into the pockets. Daly made a fine finish, but Corbett appeared to be relatively outclassed by the others of the quartet.

New York A. C. Championship Pool.

J. W. Ducker and J. M. Heatherton were the winners last night in the pool matches of the New York Athletic Club championship tournament. Ducker defeated P. E. F. McCann by the score of 100 balls to 79. In the other contest Heatherton, the champion of the Crescent Athletic Club, defeated Evan A. Gamble easily by 100 balls to 67. Anthony Clough acted as referee of both competitions.

Columbia Gymnasts Defeated.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 2.—Harvard easily won a dual gymnastic meet from Columbia in the Hemenway Gymnasium to-night by a score of 35 to 16 points. Harvard won five out of the six regular events, completely outclassing Columbia in everything except the flying rings. C. A. Woodbury, Harvard, 1900, gave the best individual performance, winning two firsts and two seconds. Summary:

Parallel Bars—C. A. Woodbury, Harvard, first; R. Schoonmaker, Columbia, second; G. F. Evans, Harvard, third.

Side Horse,—G. F. Evans, Harvard, first; P. R. Carpenter, Harvard, second; E. B. Bryde, Columbia, third.

Horizontal Bars.—G. F. Evans, Harvard, first; C. A. Woodbury, Harvard, second; R. Schoonmaker, Columbia, third.

Club Swinging.—C. A. Woodbury, Harvard, first; C. Stewart, Columbia, second; W. C. Bennett, Harvard, third.

Single Tumbling.—S. E. Goodwin, Harvard, first; A. L. Pouleur, Harvard, second; S. Melitzer, Columbia, third.

BROKAW'S FANCY WORK WINS SKATING HONORS

St. Nicholas Clubman Gets the Championship Medal.

EDWARD W. BASSETT SECOND

Four Competitors in Annual Event at the St. Nicholas Rink—Winner Scored 64 Points.

Irving Brokaw of the St. Nicholas Skating Club of New York last night won the National amateur figure skating championship. It was the fifth time that Brokaw had competed for the honor. Second place in the championship contest was won by Edward W. Bassett of the Wanderers' Skating Club of this city, while third place went to John J. Doughty, Plainfield Skating Club, of Plainfield, N. J., with A. G. Williams, Newark, N. J., finishing last. This list included all of the competitors for the championship this year in the St. Nicholas Rink, Sixty-sixth Street and Columbus Avenue. Brokaw scored a total of 64 points for the seventeen sections, or figures, on the programme; Bassett's total was 55 points, Doughty 26 points, and Williams 24 points.

The final four sections of the programme as arranged by the National Amateur Skating Association brought out the best performances of the skaters last night, the other thirteen sections having been completed on the previous day. Both Brokaw and Bassett held together splendidly for these movements, equally dividing the points. Bassett endeavored by all of the skill that he possessed to overcome the lead that Brokaw had established on the first day. This was his achievement last year when he took second place to the seven times champion, Dr. Arthur G. Keane, of the New York Athletic Club, defeating Brokaw by one point for second place.

The first section in which they met last night was that in which curved angles—rocking and counter rocking turns from outside edge to outside edge and the reverse, both forward and backward, indicated their ability. Again the finish and poise of Brokaw combined with his generally smooth execution of the difficult movements, caught the favorable eyes of the judges—Louis Rubenstein, Frank P. Good, and Dr. Arthur G. Keane, and Brokaw got the high mark, with Bassett second.

Bassett turned the tables on Brokaw on the next figure, which aroused no end of enthusiasm on the part of the big crowd of spectators. Bassett's crosscuts and anvils were prettily done, almost as if he were waltzing, and for this figure he took the high mark. The grapevines, in the next section, showed Brokaw at his best. He seemed to glide through the movements without effort and a party of his friends who sat in one of the boxes led in applauding his wonderfully clever work. Bassett was nearly as good as Brokaw in this figure, but he failed to show the same grace as his opponent.

During these last two figures the crowd unstintingly applauded Bassett and he amply repaid their show of appreciation during the final section. In this his pirouettes, both on heel and toe, were as daintily executed as a ballet dancer's. His pivot circles were also remarkably good and he easily surpassed Brokaw in these showy and most difficult movements upon skates. The result was that again Brokaw was placed second in the scoring, and but for the lead of nine points that he secured during the first night he would have lost.

PRINCETON WRESTLERS WON.

Defeat University of Pennsylvania by Five Bouts to Two.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 2.—Princeton defeated Pennsylvania to-night in the second wrestling match between the two universities by five bouts to two. One of the most interesting contests was the special weight (125-pound) tussle between Howell and Markle. Both men struggled aggressively for fifteen minutes, when the decision was awarded to the Princeton wrestler. One of the surprises came when Princeton's football player, G. H. Fryer, was defeated after six minutes by R. Folwell, who was lighter by about twenty-five pounds. The best exhibition of wrestling was that by Dickson of Princeton, who won the middle-weight in the intercollegiate last year. Summary:

Special Weight, 125 Pounds.—E. O. Howell, Princeton, won on points from C. E. Markle, Pennsylvania.

GRAVESEND YACHT SCHEDULE.

Season to Open May 30 and to Embrace Unusually Many Races.

The tangle over dates for the racing season in the Gravesend Bay Yacht Racing Association was straightened out finally by prolonging the session of the delegates into the wee small hours of yesterday morning. No announcement will be made of the schedule, however, until the Crescent Athletic Club meeting on March 29. Several important details were learned, however.

There will be no cup or special races held on Saturdays hereafter, but every Saturday during the season will be reserved for open races, to which the entire fleet will be eligible. Restricted and class races for any cup must be held on weekdays, so that there will be an average of at least two race days a week.

The season will open May 30 with an Atlantic Yacht Club open regatta. The annual regatta of the Atlantics will be held on June 12, and the other big events of the Atlantic will be July 4 and Sept. 3, (Labor Day.) The Sea Gate organization, with two exceptions, has scheduled a race for every alternate Saturday, and is prepared to give valuable prizes for each race. The exceptions are June 30, when the Crescents will hold their open regatta off the Sea Gate Club, and the Saturday following the return from the cruise, which will occur the middle of July.

The other racing dates are divided by the other four clubs. Besides the Crescents' regatta, June 30, the New York Canoe Club and the Marine and Field Club will each have one regatta. The Brooklyn and Bensonhurst clubs have three races apiece on the regular schedule, aside from the cup events, of which there will be a number given during the week by all three clubs—Atlantic, Brooklyn, and Bensonhurst.

KING'S CUP RACE IN AUGUST.

Will Be Held on the New York Yacht Club Course.

The tentative schedule of the New York Yacht Club's racing programme has been announced for the season by the Regatta Committee of the club and includes, beside the annual regatta, dates for the Spring and Fall Cups and the Glen Cove Cups. No date is fixed for the cruise or for those events which are incidental to it, and announcement is made of two special cups for the New York thirty-footers and three for the steam yacht fleet, dependent upon the entry list for each cup.

The two most interesting events that the club will hold will be the races for the King's Cup, the trophy given by King Edward VII., and the Astor Cups. Both these contests will undoubtedly be held in conection with the cruise off Newport, when the entire fleet will be assembled to witness them. The probability is that the cruise will be held earlier than usual this year in order to prevent interference from the storms that usually mark the latter end of August, necessitating postponement. The chances favor the starting of the annual fixture about Aug. 1 and the holding of the King's Cup and Astor Cups races a week later, in the second week of the month.

The date set for the annual regatta is Thursday, June 12. The Spring Cups will be contested on Saturday, July 7, and the Glen Cove Cups on Thursday, July 19. In connection with them the possession of the Bennett Cups will also be decided. The Autumn Cups will be raced for on Thursday, Sept. 6. It will be noticed that in each case, save one, midweek days are chosen, which is a graceful concession to the smaller clubs on the Sound, to prevent interference with their regattas.

The five special cups announced are the Niagara IV. Cup for 150-foot speed boats, the two Hauoli Cups for large and small steam yachts, and two cups for thirties given by the House and the Model Committee of the club.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., March 2.—The champion Middletown Young Men's Christian Association basket ball team defeated the Brooklyn Central Young Men's Christian Association quintet here to-night by 45 to 16 in a very fast and interesting contest. The visitors greatly outweighed the locals, but were outplayed at every point. The game was rather rough, the visitors being inclined to use their strength. The first half ended 23 to 5, in which the Brooklyn team did not score until the close. The second half was a repetition of the first, but the Brooklyn team was more successful in shooting field goals. The line-up:

Middletown, 45.	Position.	Brooklyn, 16.
C. Carlson	Right forward	Henry Behrens
F. Carlson	Left forward	Boggs
Umba, Smith	Centre	Herman Behrens
Hearne, Scoville	Right guard	Salmon

Goals from floor—C. Carlson, 5; F. Carlson, 3; Hearne, 5; Smith, 7; Wagenfohr, Herman Behrens, 3; Boggs, 2; Henry Behrens. Goals from fouls—C. Carlson, 5; Salmon, 2. Referee and umpire—Mr. Nethaway. Attendance, 550.

A Treatise on Language Study for the Asking

This treatise which we send gratis on receipt of the coupon below contains Dr. Rosenthal's complete explanation of his marvelously successful system of language study, and explanation of the language-phone, its origin, etc.

FRENCH, GERMAN, SPANISH, ITALIAN

The Marvelous The Thoroughly Proven The Incomparable

Language-Phone Method

The Most Perfect, Natural and Successful Method Ever Devised for Acquiring a Foreign Language.

With Rosenthal's Practical Linguistry

A Priceless, Lifetime Advantage in the Mental Equipment of Every Man or Woman

Upward of a million students, teachers, business men and others have availed themselves of the Rosenthal System with entire pleasure and satisfaction. Thousands have already used it with the wonderful Language-Phone, that tireless and precisely accurate up-to-date teacher.

Only 10 Minutes a Day for a Little While

If you knew how easily you could acquire speaking, reading, and writing familiarity with any or all of the four great living foreign languages, would you be content to remain longer ignorant of this delightful and important accomplishment? Only ten minutes a day for a little while in your leisure moments will give you speaking, reading, and writing familiarity with a new language.

The Natural Method of Study

The keynote of the success of this system is that it is the natural way in which the mind acquires language. It is almost exactly as a child learns to talk. Almost unconsciously you glide into thinking in a new language. You learn to use sentences rather than isolated words, and you avoid all the old-time drudgery.

The Voices of Living Native Professors

The Language-Phone furnishes ready self-instruction for one or every member of the family, unceasingly ready for service, repeating the living voices of native professors with absolute accuracy of pronunciation. It talks at any speed you require. It is simplicity itself, a child can use it as easily as a grown person. It is always in order. It affords the acme of accuracy, celerity, convenience. It offers pleasant mental recreation and a delightful means toward self-culture. You can enjoy it at any time, and there is a certain fascination in its use.

Eye, Ear, Tongue and Mind

You learn the whole language. All functions of language taught by this method at the same time. Eye, ear, tongue, and mind are all brought into play. It is no longer necessary to memorize lists of verbs, declensions and complicated grammatical rules. You hear the exact pronunciation of a native professor, whose accuracy and reliability we guarantee.

French, German, Spanish or Italian. To speak, to understand, to write there is but one best way. You must hear it spoken correctly, over and over, until your ear knows it. You must see it printed correctly till your eye knows it. You must talk it and write it. All this can be done best by the Language-Phone method. With this method you buy a professor outright. You own him. He speaks slowly or quickly, when you choose, night or day, for a few minutes or hours at a time. Any one can learn a foreign language who hears it spoken often enough, and by this method you can hear it as often as you like.

Copper Falls and Union Pacific Rises—Banks Lose Cash Heavily.

For the greater part of the day prices in yesterday's stock market moved within a narrow range on a contracted volume of trading, finding no stimulus to either an advance or a decline in the news developments of the day, although these were varied enough, including, as they did, the publication of preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week, indicating a loss of from $3,000,000 to $5,300,000 in cash holdings, and, on the other hand, further excellent January earnings statements by the railroads, such as that of the Pennsylvania, with its net increase of $1,400,000. In the late afternoon Amalgamated Copper broke very sharply, selling 3 points under its high price for the day, and this movement, in connection with a quick fall in United Copper shares on the curb, momentarily unsettled the general list of stocks. Recovery followed quickly, however, under the leadership of Union Pacific, which gained a full point for the day, and prices closed, save in the case of Amalgamated, Reading, and a half-score additional active shares, either unchanged or at small net advances. The opposite movements in Copper and in Union Pacific were the features of the day's trading, and the transactions in these shares made up more than a third of the entire business of the day. There was nothing in the day's news to explain or occasion the fall in Copper, although it is generally accepted that a large and not altogether strong speculation for the rise has centred in the issue. Consolidated Gas, after selling down 4 points from its high price, recovered all but a half point of its loss, and Great Northern and Northern Pacific recovered a trifle more of the losses recently suffered by them, the firmness in these shares constituting one of the favorable influences of the day.

A rather wider variation than usually occurs in the preliminary estimates of the loss suffered by the banks on the week's movements of currency, the maximum drain being placed at $5,300,000 and the minimum at $3,500,000. The fate of surplus reserves, however, turns very largely upon the reduction which the banks have been able to make in the loan account as a result of the liquidating movement in the stock market, and the general belief is that this, coupled with the shifting of loans involved in the placing here of large amounts of foreign funds, will be sufficient to offset much of the money drain. A large part of the week's loss in cash has been due to transfers of internal revenue collections at interior cities to the Treasury by draft upon New York correspondents, by payments into the 5 per cent. fund, and for the retirement of outstanding circulation of National Banks whose charters were renewed three years ago and who, under the banking law, are compelled to make deposits against note issues still outstanding under the old charter. Such deposits are estimated to have amounted to over $7,000,000. An important development yesterday was the call on local banks by interior institutions for funds. Heavy direct shipments of currency have resulted, which, however, will not find full reflection in to-day's statement, owing to the workings of the average system. Secretary Shaw's decision to place $10,000,000 in the National banks at this time will not be open to the criticism which might have followed such action last year, for Government receipts are once again running ahead of expenditures, and the entirely exceptional deposits made by the National banks this week for the purposes mentioned above fully justify the Secretary's action.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 2.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day, and supplies were not plentiful. Discounts were steady.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Prospects for a continuance of the lively activity in trade generally are strongly in evidence on every hand, according to Bradstreet's:

Country buyers are more in evidence than at any previous time this year and have bought liberally. Winter wheat crop reports are as good as ever, and the probability that a general coal strike may be avoided after all lends strength to industry of all kinds. It is true there is rather more conservatism displayed by buyers for the more distant future and prices of some commodities are being shaded, but it is apparently regarded as certain that an enormous Spring business will be done, that building will approximate, if not surpass, last year's huge totals, and that crop and trade developments of the future will take care of next season's trade.

Dun's Review says:

Manufacturing plants report little idle machinery, except at Northwestern flour mills, where the heavy output has exceeded demands for a time. It is estimated that contemplated new buildings in this city alone will consume 200,000 tons of structural steel, while National prosperity is evinced by the various State reports showing noteworthy gains in savings bank deposits. Dividend distributions in March will also largely exceed last year's, and foreign commerce at this port for the last week showed gains of $908,498 in exports and $1,268,475 in imports, as compared with 1905. Trading losses were almost $2,000,000 less than in 1905, while a small increase occurred in manufacturing liabilities.

IMPORTS OF DRY GOODS.

Imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week were valued at $2,909,838, as against $4,165,380 for the previous week and $2,807,803 for the corresponding week last year. The value of the amount marketed was $3,033,271, as against $4,247,168 for the previous week, and $2,798,036 for the corresponding week last year.

PENNSYLVANIA'S REPORT SHOWS PROSPEROUS YEAR

Railroad's Net Income for 1905 Was $30,102,516.

MANY MILES OF RELIEF LINE

President Cassatt Says Four-Track Equipment Between New York and Pittsburg Is Nearly Done.

The report of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, made public yesterday, shows gross earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 amounting to $133,921,092, compared with $118,145,270 in 1904. The net income for the year, after the payment of fixed charges, was $30,102,516, compared with the previous year's total of $27,990,866. Dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. required $18,133,977. The extraordinary expenditures for the year were $8,424,881, an increase of over $2,000,000 compared with 1904. The amount charged as extraordinary expenditures was the balance of income for the year, so that the amount to the credit of profit and loss on Dec. 31, 1905, was unchanged compared with the previous year, amounting in both years to $24,725,484.

The showing in detail for all the lines directly operated compares as follows with the figures for the previous year:

	1905.	1904.
Gross earnings, all directly operated	$133,921,992	$118,145,270
Operating expenses	93,390,410	81,802,988
Net earnings	$40,531,582	$36,342,281
Rentals	7,662,810	6,738,609
Net operat'g earn'gs	$32,868,771	$29,603,672
Add int. from invest., rental of equip., &c.	12,036,918	11,414,263
Gross income	$44,905,689	$41,017,935
Fixed charges	14,803,172	13,027,068
Net income	$30,102,516	$27,990,866
Sinking funds	3,563,657	3,836,909
Extraordin'y exp'dit's	8,424,881	6,220,923
Balance	$18,113,977	$17,933,034
Dividend of 6 per cent.	18,113,977	17,933,034
Amount to credit profit & loss	24,725,484	24,725,484

The gross earnings of all lines east and west of Pittsburg for 1905 were $266,069,597; operating expenses, $192,100,348, and net earnings, $73,969,249, an increase in gross earnings, compared with 1904, of $28,853,177, and an increase in net earnings of $8,266,289. There were 333,011,237 tons of freight moved, an increase of 48,191,297 tons, and 126,084,223 passengers carried, an increase of 5,668,005.

In the year the funded debt was increased by $74,670,440. The chief items in the operations which brought about this increase was the issuance of $100,000,000 3½ per cent. convertible bonds and the retirement of $27,414,220 of Consolidated mortgage bonds.

The report shows that the entire cost of securities of other corporations held by the Pennsylvania Railroad amounts to $236,604,457, upon which the company is receiving an average interest rate of 4½ per cent.

The total expenditures for construction, equipment, and real estate on the main line between New York and Pittsburg, including payments on account of the principal of car trusts, amounted to $38,797,057. Of this sum $11,674,119 was charged against the income for the year and $27,122,938 was charged to capital account.

President Cassatt, in his report to the stockholders, deals at length with the improvements which were completed in the year and those which are now under way. He points out that work has been nearly completed which will give the Pennsylvania Railroad a four-track line between New York and Pittsburg with the exception of about ten miles of line, which will have three tracks. In addition to this four-track system relief lines are being built to supplement those which have been already constructed.

Upon the completion of the relief lines which have been planned the Pennsylvania will have in addition to its four-track system a double-track railroad between Pittsburg, Philadelphia, and New York, with the exception of a ninety-six-mile section between Petersburg and Marysville and a short section between Clarksburg and Thorndale. The necessity for the construction of the proposed relief lines, President Cassatt says, is made apparent by the fact that the average daily movement of freight cars over the Allegheny Mountain summit for the four months ended January last was 5,669 cars, with a maximum movement in twenty-four hours of 6,974 cars.

An important improvement contemplated by the Pennsylvania Railroad is the establishment of water companies along its main line for the purpose of supplying the road with an ample amount of water for the operation of its trains. The announcement is made in the report that the establishment of these companies will be financed by the issue of special securities maturing at short intervals, the principal and interest of which, it is believed, can be met without undue burden out of the current income of the company. This improvement is expected to result in a large saving, both in the cost of water and in boiler repairs.

President Cassatt, in reference to the New York terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad, says that work has been steadily prosecuted, and that nothing has occurred to seriously delay the work or to suggest any special difficulties in carrying out the general scheme of construction.

Referring to the rates obtained by the Pennsylvania Railroad during the year and to the great volume of business handled by the company, President Cassatt says:

> There was a slight reduction in the average rate, and also in the net earnings per ton per mile, but owing to the volume of traffic carried there was a large gain in the freight revenue. There was an increase in the expenses in all departments, and notably in that of maintenance of equipment, due to the outlays necessary to keep your motive power and equipment up to the requirements of the traffic.
>
> The tonnage shows an exceptional increase both in volume and mileage over that of 1904, the traffic for the year being much the heaviest in the history of the company, and by reason of the liberal expenditure recently made in the construction of relief lines and large terminal yards and the substantial additions made to your motive power, the movement thereof has been materially improved. The gross earnings of the lines east of Pittsburg and Erie show a large gain, and the prosperous conditions prevailing in the country are reflected throughout the entire system.

DATED APRIL 1, 1904 DUE APRIL 1, 1954
Interest payable April 1 and October 1 in New York or New Orleans
Redeemable at 105 and interest on and after April 1, 1909

The bonds above offered, will, in opinion of counsel, on or before July 1, 1906, through the retirement of underlying bonds which have already been called for payment, be secured by a FIRST MORTGAGE on the entire Gas, Electric Light and Power business of the company, and on 71.85 miles of street railway trackage including that located on many of the principal streets of the city of Birmingham, together with the large central station used for generating power for the entire street railway system.

The Birmingham Railway, Light & Power Company is a consolidation of twelve original street railway, gas and electric light and power companies, owning and operating the entire street railway, gas and electric lighting and power business of the City of Birmingham, and many surrounding cities and towns, serving a population at present estimated at over 133,000, and which is increasing with great rapidity. The franchises under which the Company operates are very valuable, a large majority of them being, in opinion of counsel, either unlimited in time or its tracks are located on private right-of-way.

EARNINGS AND EXPENSES
Officially reported for the year 1905

Gross Earnings	$1,630,514
Operating Expenses and Taxes	908,891
Net Earnings	$721,623
Bond Interest	353,391
	$368,232

During every year since the Company was organized, both gross and net earnings have shown an uninterrupted and satisfactory increase. The gross and net earnings for the past four years (together with an estimate for 1906) have been officially reported as follows:

	1902	1903	1904	1905	Estimated 1906
Gross Earnings	$1,076,767	$1,311,851	$1,424,145	$1,630,514	$1,850,000
Net Earnings	466,717	573,825	602,453	721,623	832,500

Dividends at the rate of six per cent. have been paid on the $2,500,000 Preferred Stock of the Company since its organization, and at the rate of three per cent. in 1903, and four per cent. in 1904 and 1905, on $3,500,000 Common Stock. The Preferred Stock is now quoted at approximately $105 and the Common Stock at approximately $93 per share.

The physical condition of the property of the Birmingham Railway, Light & Power Company is excellent. The street railway lines are all well built and of solid construction, and all but 21.3 miles are laid with from 60 to 100-lb. rails. The gas and electric light plants are modern in construction and equipment, and of capacity sufficient to provide for a large increase in business.

Practically the entire Birmingham district, frequently spoken of as "The Pittsburg of the South," is underlaid with enormous deposits of coal, iron and limestone, rendering it possible to manufacture pig iron cheaper than anywhere else in the world. No city in the south has better railroad transportation facilities and in magnitude of tonnage produced, the Birmingham district is stated to exceed that of the entire State of Georgia. Since 1900 the population of the city of Birmingham has increased over 43%, while bank deposits have increased over 114% and postal receipts over 112%.

On a Sound Basis.

The progress of the GEORGE A. TREADWELL MINING COMPANY has not been as rapid as its friends expected and some stock has been for sale very cheap. The Company has had its problems to solve and its difficulties to overcome and it required time and money to do it, but we have taken the time and raised the money as we went along and the outcome is no longer doubtful. The property has been demonstrated to be all that we have ever claimed it to be and more. We have by far the largest holdings in one of the richest mining districts in the world and they are rich enough to pay the highest of dividends. We have spent nearly a million dollars in the development and equipment of this property and we are now far enough along so that we shall soon be numbered among the great copper producers of the world.

Now is the time to buy stock. Those who have bought heretofore have had to wait. Those who buy hereafter will have to pay much higher prices. Those who do not buy at all will miss a great opportunity.

Investors who bought SAN LUIS stock from our office a year ago have made 300% on their investment. Those who buy TREADWELL now stand to do quite as well.

You can buy the stock at market rates through your own broker or we shall be glad to quote prices on application.

Many shrewd and successful investors believe it to be the best investment in the market to-day.

MARCH 1906

STOCK LIMITATION PART OF FUTURE FRANCHISES

Estimate Board Begins with Seaboard Refrigeration Company.

MUST APPROVE ALL ISSUES

Estimates for Paving Are Received and Must Be Greatly Reduced—$800,000 for Firehouse Sites.

Something new in the way of franchise terms to be imposed on corporations seeking public utility rights was presented to the Board of Estimate yesterday when the board came to consider the proposed franchise for the Seaboard Refrigeration Company to do business in Coney Island.

Harry P. Nichols, in charge of the board's Bureau of Franchises, had included in the proposed contract as drawn by him a clause prohibiting the company from issuing stocks or bonds at any time without the consent of the Board of Estimate. Mr. Nichols will try to have the Board of Estimate adopt the stock and bond limitation clause as a precedent and to insist on it in any further grants of rights to companies desiring to use the city streets. Such a feature would be far reaching if applied to any future grant to a street railroad or a lighting corporation seeking a franchise of the city. Members of the board expressed themselves in favor of the plan.

Mr. Nichols in his report to the board yesterday declares that overcapitalization is one of the greatest evils of public service corporations of the day. Continuing, he says:

> This is frequently a capitalization of anticipated profits, and has a direct bearing upon the cost to the consumer of the product manufactured by the company so capitalized. If a company whose capitalization or whose funded debt is many times the value of its tangible property, and especially if the company has a monopoly of the business in which it is engaged, there is a temptation to that company to charge for its product an amount far beyond what would be sufficient to pay the cost of production plus a fair return upon an amount which would represent the actual value of the plant.
>
> There are railroad companies in the City of New York whose capital stock outstanding and whose funded debt each are equal to many times the value of the tangible property. Probably the same may be said of other public service corporations in the city.
>
> The city is, in a way, a partner in the business which requires the use of public property such as that conducted by railroad companies, gas companies, telephone companies or other enterprises requiring the use of public streets. These companies are supported by the revenue obtained from their patrons, while the city is, or should be, financially reimbursed for the occupation of public property. The occupation of the streets is absolutely necessary for these companies to carry on their business. On the other hand, it is to the city's interest that citizens be supplied with the conveniences or necessities which may be furnished by such companies at reasonable rates if the right is given for the streets to be occupied for that purpose.
>
> The authorities are therefore interested in the business to such an extent, and any contract entered into between the city and the company applying for rights, should be such as will protect those citizens against a possibility of unfair charges, and if overcapitalization tends to develop such charges, then the contract should be sufficiently broad in its terms to prevent overcapitalization.
>
> Should public service corporations receiving rights from the city fail in the future to give the people adequate service and for that or other reasons the City Government deems it necessary to take control of such property, it will be impossible to do so by a payment of a fair value of the property if such company is overcapitalized without, perhaps, doing an injury to innocent investors in stocks or bonds which have been issued in excess of the value of the property.

At the hearing yesterday representatives of the Seaboard Company accepted the terms imposed by Mr. Nichols in his report, and also all the provisions for compensation to the city for the use of streets. The contract may not be formally approved by the board, however, until the Court of Appeals finally decides the constitutionality of the act transferring the franchise power from the Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate.

The meeting of the board yesterday was characterized by unusual harmony between Mayor McClellan, Controller Metz, Borough President Ahearn, and the others who have been at war since January. Each seemed to want to emphasize the fact that peace once more reigned. Many requests were made for salary increases, Borough President Coler of Brooklyn asking to have his secretary's salary raised from $4,000 to $5,000 and the appointment of a consulting engineer at $8,000, as well as an Assistant Superintendent of Buildings at $4,500. Controller Metz wanted a principal assistant engineer at $5,000, and told the board that two of his engineers were leaving him to take higher pay from private firms. All these matters were referred to Controller Metz and President McGowan of the Boad of Aldermen.

The board voted in Joseph Haag to be Secretary at $7,500 a year, as recently approved by the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Haag then resigned as Commissioner of Accounts at $5,000 to take the new place. To Borough President Ahearn was allowed a departmental Inspector at $2,100 a year.

All the Borough Presidents turned in their estimates of the money they will need for paving and grading. Brooklyn asked $2,500,000; the Bronx $400,000; Manhattan $1,250,000; Richmond $509,000, and Queens $379,400. As the charter allows only $3,000,000 annually for paving, the the Presidents will have to reduce their requirements.

The board appropriated $800,000 for fire house sites, $480,000 for Manhattan and the Bronx and $320,000 for Brooklyn and Queens. Commissioner O'Brien asked for $1,562,500, and the Finance Department in reporting the smaller amount explains that the city cannot afford at this time to build all the new fire houses that are or will be needed.

$1,000,000 General Chemical Issue.

The General Chemical Company has announced an issue of $1,000,000 preferred stock to capitalize a part of the large sums, approximately $1,600,000, paid out since 1903 for new plants, land, and stocks in other corporations. Stockholders of record March 22 will be privileged to subscribe to the new stock at par in proportion to their holdings.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 2.—Several big financial deals which have been hanging fire for two months have been about closed up, and details are anxiously awaited in financial circles, as they are counted on to aid in reviving interest.

About the only effect on the local market thus far of the liquidation in Wall Street has been a disinclination on the part of operators to engage in new ventures, pending a more settled tone to the New York market.

Prices to-day were inclined to seek lower levels for the issues of the favorite list, while the semi-speculative securities stocks ruled about steady. Seaboard 4s declined ½. Baltimore Brick preferred advanced ½.

Houston Oil broke through to 11¾ on small sales. Northern Central was carried down further in the prevailing weakness, receding ¼ to 104½.

Maryland Trust warrants ran off 1 per cent. Virginia deferred, Brown Brothers certificates, declined ⅜ to 29⅛, for $25,000. The close was firm.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

After having been under bear pressure almost continuously for three days, the market became very dull yesterday forenoon, whereupon shrewd traders declared, without regard to outside conditions, that stocks had been sold to a standstill and ought to be bought, at least for a turn. At midday only four or five stocks, such as Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Consolidated Gas, Anaconda, and Reading, had covered a range of 1 per cent. or more, the great majority of stocks showing at that hour but fractional variations either from the initial prices or those of Thursday's closing. The bear crowd evidently had become somewhat more discriminating in its activities. It showed a disposition to take profits where that could be done without advancing prices, but it was in only in a very few stocks that such buying was possible owing to the reduced volume of actual selling. In the last hour the bear crowd made a vigorous attack on Amalgamated Copper, breaking that stock about 2 per cent., while at the time it was trying to cover short contracts in Union Pacific.

⁂

The highly demonstrative selling of Amalgamated Copper was obviously intended to divert attention from covering operations elsewhere in the list, especially in Union Pacific. Simultaneously in the last hour Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper were, respectively, the strongest and weakest feature of the market. For a while it was debatable whether Union Pacific was being bid up to facilitate selling of the other market, or whether, as has been said, Amalgamated Copper was depressed to weaken the general list and assist short covering. But as Amalgamated Copper rallied 1⅝ per cent. very sharply in the last ten minutes of trading, while Union Pacific also was very strong right up to the last and closed within ⅛ per cent. of its highest quotation, it could only be supposed that it was bear selling in one case and short covering in the other. The ease with which Union Pacific advanced in the last hour indicated that the shorts were compelled to bid sharply for it.

⁂

Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper were much the most conspicuous stocks in yesterday's market. The trading in them was more than double the volume of that in any other two issues. Amalgamated Copper closed at a decline of 1⅜ per cent. and Union Pacific at an advance of 1 point. There was corresponding irregularity throughout the list, as a glance at the net price changes for the day will show. No effort was made, apparently, to influence a covering movement among the shorts. Most of the buying for short account, as in Union Pacific, had the appearance of being voluntary. The Steel stocks, upon which a lot of speculative selling has converg[illegible] week, were relatively dull, and closed at fractional declines.

⁂

The money market is as changeable and as full of surprises as the stock market. Only three or four weeks ago we were supposed to be right on the verge of gold exports. Some of the leading international bankers expected exports in February. Now there is talk of gold imports.

⁂

"Why is it," asked the head of a prominent Western wire house, "that our financial critics are all afraid to go on record with a positive opinion about this market? I wade through columns and columns of comment, all very learned and profound, I suppose, but when I am through I have nothing in my head but a confused notion that 'if' something doesn't happen something else may happen, and a conviction of my own that 'if' and 'but' are the most overworked parts of speech." "Well," said the critic to whom this complaint was addressed, "perhaps now you could deliver yourself this minute of a positive opinion about the market?" "I certainly could," the broker retorted, adding: "I did this morning, if you care to read it." It was this: "I think we are going to have this backing and filling market until there is a decided change for the better in the money situation. It would seem to me that most of the ten-point margin men had been cleaned up, but if relations get more strained it may touch those carrying 10,000 and 20,000 share lines. If so, we will have a sharp break. I am a bull for the long pull, decidedly, but in the meantime the main factor is the money market, barring some unforeseen circumstances."

⁂

If there is one stereotyped prediction more untrustworthy than another, it is the prediction that the stock market is going to remain dull for a definite time, as, for example, during the present month of March. Nobody really wants a dull market, anyway. The habitual speculator prefers bearish activity to none at all. In a dull market there is money for nobody, not even for the broker.

⁂

Continued buying of the Hill stocks yesterday was accompanied by persistent rumors that Mr. Hill would return to Wall Street next week to put the ore deal on its feet again. In quarters where misgivings have actually existed it is now believed that negotiations can be reopened and that hope of a successful issue thereof may reasonably be entertained. The buying of Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific since Wednesday's break has been of a well-informed character. The decline has eliminated a miscellaneous bull account, which had attained undesirable proportions. A good many traders have acquired education about Hill stocks.

⁂

Some persons are now curious to know the origin and meaning of the confidential bull tips on International Mercantile Marine which were imparted recently to the "very best people" here and abroad.

⁂

The Gates crowd continued after the close of the market on Thursday and all day yesterday to disseminate bearish opinions of the most violent nature. Persons who came in contact with the leaders of this speculative group uptown on Thursday were overwhelmed with pessimistic counsel. Usually when the Gates crowd begins to talk in a wild strain on either side of the market it is time to copper its advice. That, at least, is the experience of traders. It must have been selling stocks as fast as it could on Monday, when Mr. Gates personally couldn't help feeling optimistic, and now that the whole contingent is so bearish that it can hardly stand it, brokers may be covering some short contracts for its account. There was evidence yesterday of short covering for the Gates crowd's account. The buying of Union Pacific was thought to be largely of that origin.

⁂

Although the bear crowd has been able to make some headway in Amalgamated Copper, the stock has not had any such sensational break as would indicate a collapse of the bull account. Indeed, the resistance the stock has offered to aggressive speculative selling in the last fortnight has occasioned a good deal of surprise. Prior to the culmination of the bull movement at 118¼ on the announcement of the "settlement" the stock was more subject to violent reactions than it has been since. On Jan. 2 it sold at 111¼, and on Jan. 4, two days later, it sold as low as 103⅞, and it has never been so low since. On Feb. 13 it touched 118¼, the highest point of the bull movement, and the lowest quotation since then was made yesterday, when the stock sold at 104⅝. The Heinze contingent boasts that it scaled down its speculative holdings of the stock very heavily on the announcement—that is, between 118 and 114. Commission houses also sold heavily at that time. Individual speculators, swinging lines of 5,000 to 20,000 shares, sold out on the bulge that came with the news of the settlement, and many went short of the stock on the theory that the bull trumps had all been played. There has been somebody standing under the stock all this time, else there would not have been so good a market for it. Speculative sentiment has been running to the bear side of Amalgamated Copper ever since the culmination of the advance around 118, and traders have sold it short more persistently than perhaps any other one stock. It seems evident that the big bull account, wherever it is, has been able so far to take care of itself.

⁂

On four successive bear drives this week Union Pacific sold at 149⅛ and stopped there. It recovered yesterday to 151¾. Considering how widely the stock is held as a speculation in Wall Street and outside, everybody being bullish on it, the resistance it has offered to selling pressure this week is astonishing. The bear crowd was anxious to make it sell below 150, supposing that it would bring a lot of stop loss orders into play at that point, but in this it was disappointed. Below 150 it has not been able so far to make any headway.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—The volume of business transacted in the local Exchange was the smallest for any full day for several months. There was no disposition to trade, even the "dollar" brokers being timid about making ventures on either side of the market. Prices consequently moved narrowly, fluctuations being limited to insignificant fractions. Alliance Insurance receded ½, Eastern Consolidated Electric advanced ½, as did Insurance Company of North America, while Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing was up a point. There was continued active trading in Philadelphia Company receipts, offerings, which were quite heavy, being well taken at yesterday's level of prices.

There was a little more animation in United Gas Improvement, and the stock left off with a net decline of ¼. Western New York and Pennsylvania was up 1½.

Total sales, 23,921 shares.

Cash Pouring Into the Treasury to Provide for Redemption of National Banknotes.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Secretary Shaw to-day announced that he would make temporary deposits in public banks amounting to $10,000,000. The Secretary in his statement says:

"In the month of February, just closed, the Treasury Department locked up about $10,000,000, $4,500,000 by excess of Government receipts over expenditures and $5,000,000 by excess of deposits by lawful money for redemption of National bank circulation over and above the actual redemption. For this reason the Secretary of the Treasury announced this evening that he would at once deposit $10,000,000 of public funds in existing depositary banks.

"These deposits will be made entirely in important centres—namely, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, and New Orleans. The deposits will be temporary only, and depositary banks receiving them will be called upon to return the same on or about July 10. The deposits being of a temporary character, the department will accept as security satisfactory bonds on a basis of 90 per cent. of their value."

Very heavy deposits of cash were made with the Government during the last week in February to provide for the redemption of National bank notes. Usually the retirement of National bank notes is limited to $3,000,000 a month, but during February no less than $7,148,000 cash was deposited with the Government for note retirement, and most of this sum was paid over during the last week of the month. The reasons for this unusual movement is explained as follows in the monthly circular of the National City Bank, issued yesterday:

"This extraordinary total was paid in almost wholly in the last week of February, and, as the demand fell almost entirely on the banks of New York City, it has been an important factor in the money market. The reason for such an unusual deposit of legal tenders, a deposit far exceeding the $3,000,000 monthly limit which ordinarily applies in the case of the retirement of National bank notes, is to be found in an interesting historical situation.

"The National Bank act was passed Feb. 25, 1863. It provided that banks chartered under it should exist for twenty years from the date of the act. Subsequently, June 3, 1864, the act was amended and the changes provided, among other things, that the charter of a bank should extend twenty years from the date of its organization. There had, however, in the meantime been a large number of banks organized, and the charters of all those banks expired twenty years from the date of the original act, that is, Feb. 24, 1883. Many of those banks were again rechartered, and it therefore came about that the charters of some 250 banks expired Feb. 24, 1903, and those charters were, in due course, extended.

"When a National bank is rechartered the new bank must, under the Act of July 12, 1882, retire all the circulation issued under the former charter within three years from the date of the expiration of that charter, and, failing to do so, must, at the end of that three-year period, deposit lawful money with the Treasury covering the amount of notes that have not yet come in for redemption. It thus happened that on Feb. 24 some 250 banks were compelled to deposit legal tenders to an amount equal to the outstanding notes issued by these banks, under their previous charter, which had been renewed three years before.

This provision of the law, taken in connection with the fact that such a large number of charters were renewed on the same date, has led to the unprecedented withdrawal of lawful money with which to retire circulation, and is largely accountable for a withdrawal of $7,148,000 of reserve money. As most of these deposits are made through New York City banks for the account of their interior correspondents, this redemption situation has had a significant bearing upon money conditions at this centre."

NO PRODUCE EXCHANGE ROW.

But the Members Agree with the Findings of the Investigators.

The special meeting of the Produce Exchange, called yesterday by President Perrin, to receive formally the report of a committee which has spent nearly a year in an investigation of the affairs of the Exchange, did not develop the row that some of the dissatisfied members announced was coming.

About a month ago the Committee of Ways and Means, which has been conducting the investigation, turned in a report that recommended radical changes in the management of the Exchange, which has been falling off, both in membership and business, of late years, chiefly because of the deflection of the greater part of the country's grain trade from New York to Chicago. The committee advised that the big red building opposite Bowling Green be sold, if possible, or at least so altered as to turn into rentable space a great part of the waste room. It criticised the administration of the Exchange itself and advised an overhauling of the personnel, with a view to weeding out some of the holders of "soft snaps," whose usefulness had diminished as the business of the Exchange had fallen off.
